COMMITTEE CRITICAL OF GREY AREAS

Criminal Code Changes 'Urgent'

OTTAWA (CP) — The Ouimet committee on corrections recommends as urgently needed a comprehensive review and revision of the Criminal Code.

The committee, in its report released today, says continued piecemeal revision of the code will only "add further confusion."

It says that any act that is not substantially damaging to society should be removed from the code.

Murder, rape, theft and assault did not require extensive justification. The consequences to the victim obviously were grave.

But who were the victims of drunkenness, vagrancy, sale of contraceptives or marijuana use?

"There is considerable evidence to suggest that in prohibiting certain kinds of conduct and imposing criminal sanctions upon its occurrence, one may be providing the most effective and corrupting kind of publicity for the practice rather than the prohibition," the report says. "The practices of smoking marijuana and sniffing model glue come immediately to mind."

Drunkenness was regarded by many as a social deficiency that could be better dealt with by social or medical agencies than by the courts. Was vagrancy a crime or a "social misfortune" better dealt with by the welfare system?

Many regarded the sale of contraceptives as a matter of morals rather than crime.

A royal commission or committee should be established to weed through the "grey area" of the code, last revised in the early 1950s.

Justice Minister John Turner has plans to create a national law reform commission in this area.

The Ouimet committee emphasizes, however, that a comprehensive revision must be made. Unless an act represented a serious threat to society, it shouldn't be described as criminal.

The royal commission's job would be to develop a system of classification "that would distinguish between acts on a more realistic basis."

The terms now used to describe serious crimes were inadequate. Murder was applied to everything from killing during an armed robbery to mercy killing.

The report says criminal law should be applied "with a minimum of harm to the offender."

With this in mind, the law should provide for discretion at every stage: arrest, prosecution, conviction, sentence and correction.

Police should be able to decide whether to lay a charge and, if it is laid, whether to release an accused or hold him in custody.

The prosecution should be able to decide whether to go ahead with the original charge or a lesser one.

"The court should have the power to dispose of a case without conviction and should have a wide range of alternatives open when a sentence must be imposed."

Prison Use 'Last Resort'

OTTAWA (CP)—The Ouimet committee on corrections says the basic purpose of criminal justice should be to protect society, and the offender himself, from seriously harmful and dangerous conduct.

The comprehensive report, released today, is expected to have a major influence on Canada's approach to crime.

It covers everything from police use of firearms, which it says should be restricted, to corporal punishment, "an astonishing anachronism."

"The committee says imprisonment or confinement should be used only as an ultimate resort.

In violent crime, however, the dangerous offender should be singled out and confined indefinitely if necessary.

It says that improved identification of the dangerous offender could reduce imprisonment of the non-dangerous.

The committee says the current habitual criminal and dangerous sexual offender sections of the Criminal Code aren't doing the job.

It says a new section aimed at the dangerous offender should be passed. The dangerous offender could be defined as a person convicted of a specified offence "who by reason of character disorder, emotional disorder, mental disorder or defect constitutes a continuing danger and who is likely to kill, inflict serious bodily injury, endanger life, inflict severe psychological damage or otherwise seriously endanger the personal safety of others."

Once such an offender was given an indeterminate sentence, subject to appeal and regular review, the test for release would be whether it was safe to release him, not whether he had been suitably punished.

Working on Study Since 1965

The committee comes down heavily in favor of use of the summons, bail, fines, reparation and non-confinement in most other areas.

Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet, 61, of Montreal headed the committee which has been at work on the study since June, 1965.

The committee recommends a system that would not only avert confinement but a criminal record in many cases. It says that once guilt is established, judges should be able to release the accused conditionally or unconditionally for a stated period. If the accused didn't get into trouble in that period, the case could be dismissed without conviction.

Deterrent sentences were needed where there was grave public risk from "rational but illegal activity such as professional crime, or where there is grave public temptation, as in the case of impaired driving."

The committee favors night detention and weekend detention as useful types of control that were a deterrent "without unnecessary social disruption."

It says deterrent fines are appropriate for casual offences by generally law-abiding people. But "substantial fines" should be levied on those who had benefited financially.

Reparation to the victim might have "profound correctional significance" although provisions for reparation now in

Longshoremen Shut B.C. Ports

Grain Ships Loading

A mainstay of Vancouver Island—the export pulp and lumber industry—was shut down today along with all other British Columbia shipping as 3,200 longshoremen started a long-threatened strike at 8 a.m.

About 600 of the membership of International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union are based at three key centres on Vancouver Island: 300 at Chemainus and 150 each at Victoria and Port Alberni. They also operate in Nanaimo and Ladysmith.

Pickets were set out at all B.C. ports following the collapse of federal mediation during an all-night session in Vancouver. Bargaining for a new working agreement started early this year.

LOAD GRAIN

As promised, the union will continue to work for the loading of grain ships because these exports are vital to the prairie economy.

As of this morning, said Andy Kotowich, president of the union's Canadian area, two grain ships await loading in Vancouver and longshoremen were standing by for directions.

There are no ships in Victoria. The last one to load sailed at 6:40 a.m., about one million board feet short of a 13 million board foot cargo of lumber.

About 1 million board feet of lumber a day is handled normally at Ogden Point docks in Victoria through Westcan lumber exporters. General manager Hector Campbell said the operation is closed down.

LINES ORDERLY

Up-Island, an estimated 2 to 3 million board feet a day would be handled by Chemainus and several hundred tons of pulp at Crofton. Nnaimo would have a volume of about 375,000 board feet of lumber and 150 tons of pulp.

The largest export, for which an estimate was not available, would be from Port Alberni, where pulp, lumber and shingle operations are integrated. Northern Vancouver Island ports would account for further substantial volumes.

Kotowich said picket lines had

SHRUM JOINS TALKS IN HYDRO DISPUTE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Gordon Shrum, chairman of British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority, met with officials of the Office and Technical Employees' Union Wednesday in an attempt to avert a strike by 2,300 clerical workers of the Crown corporation.

The move was regarded as a hopeful sign in the dispute which could see the employees walk off the job at any time to back up contract demands.

Until Wednesday, Dr. Shrum had not taken part in the bargaining, although he has a direct responsibility for Hydro's position in the talks.

The final legal obstacle to a strike was removed Wednesday and a strike could come at any time.

Fisheries Hit Hard In Ottawa Cutback

A federal cut in fisheries and forestry department expenditures, announced today by Fisheries Minister Jack Davis, will mean a slowdown in the Babine Lake salmon spawning project in central British Columbia.

Of $12 million cut throughout the country, $550,000 was chopped from the Pacific region budget, director W. R. Hourston said in Vancouver this morning.

Of that, $400,000 is coming off the Babine Lake project and $150,000 from deferring replacement of two patrol boats.

Dr. G. P. Thomas of the forestry research lab in Victoria said he is optimistic that budget cuts won't reach B.C. forest research.

He said cutbacks will be relative to the importance of programs, and the minister's attitude is that "the forestry program in B.C. has high priority at this time."

CUT 'MINIMAL'

"I'm hoping any cutting will be minimal," he said, but admitted "we will have to bear some portion of it."

Hourston said there had been a choice among four parts of the $7.8 million Babine project that could have been delayed. Lining of a spawning channel on the Pinkett River was chosen as having the least immediate importance.

Other projects include reservoir cleaning, solution of an ice problem and construction of the second stage of a spawning channel on Fulton River.

YEAR DELAY

Hourston said the Pinkett channel would have been completed this year at a cost of $840,000. The cutback means it will be finished one year later.

The entire eight-year project at Babine Lake, between Prince Rupert and Prince George, is about half completed.

A staff freeze has also been clamped on the Pacific region, retroactive to the end of July. Any job vacancies arising since that time will not be filled, Hourston said. Present staff is 480.

Aleutian Nuclear Blast Set to Go in One Week

AMCHITKA ISLAND, Alaska (AP)—Amid protests from Pacific Rim nations, and warnings from seismologists, the Atomic Energy Commission continues its preparations for an underground nuclear blast here next week.

The AEC announced Wednesday the blast will take place Oct. 2, weather permitting.

CONTROVERSIAL

The one megaton explosion, which has created a wave of controversy and numerous protests, will be set off on this remote isle in the Aleutian Chain—a site that bald eagles, sea otters and emperor geese had to themselves for two decades. But in the past three years, the AEC has spent more than $3,000,000 in preparation for the blast.

Such activity has been unknown on the island since the Second World War when the native Aleuts were evacuated from the area and replaced by thousands of troops.

NO RADIOACTIVITY

In its announcement Wednesday, the AEC said they expect "no release of radioactivity to the atmosphere or the sea" and said that the blast "is expected to be barely perceptible" in Adak, some 200 miles distant and the closest populated area.

FEARS MOUNTING ON PACIFIC RIM

Fears of tidal wave and earthquake, triggered by a planned U.S. Atomic Energy Commission underground blast in the Aleutians in October, are sweeping coastal communities on Vancouver Island.

And rumbles of similar apprehension are being felt across the whole Pacific basin.

At Port Alberni (see further details, page 47) alarmed residents are protesting to the United Nations, the Canadian government and the U.S. president.

Protests are also being heard in Hawaii and from Japanese fishermen.

The Atomic Energy Commission has told U.S. Sen. Daniel F. Inoye (D.-Hawaii) there was only the remotest chance that the tests would set off an earthquake, said Walter H. Kupau, president of the State Federation of Labor (RFL-CIO).

Scientists who are expert in seismology, the study of earth shocks, at both the University of British Columbia and the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory in Victoria, have expressed alarm at the possibility of slippage in the Aleutian and Alaskan faults after a blast.

Park Timber Deal Flayed by Strachan

Former opposition leader Robert Strachan today asked the government to name "the power brokers who set up the deal behind the scenes" to trade $10,000,000 worth of park timber for $300,000 worth of Cape Scott coastal land.

Strachan, MLA for Cowichan Malahat, asked why the government didn't deal with the original owners of property at Cape Scott rather than with Raven Lumber Ltd., of Campbell River.

The lumber firm received logging rights to 5,260 acres of nearby Strathcona Park in exchange for 576 acres of land destined for a Cape Scott provincial park.

The deal was defended today by Resources Minister Ray Williston and Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, in whose Comox riding the portion of park to be logged is located.

But Victoria naturalist Dave Hancock and B.C. Wildlife Federation official Geoff Warden were critical of the policy of opening provincial parks to loggers.

Strachan said he heard Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan say he expected to be criticized for the deal, which was announced Wednesday.

"I don't think the minister should be disappointed," he said.

Communists Begin Prague Purge

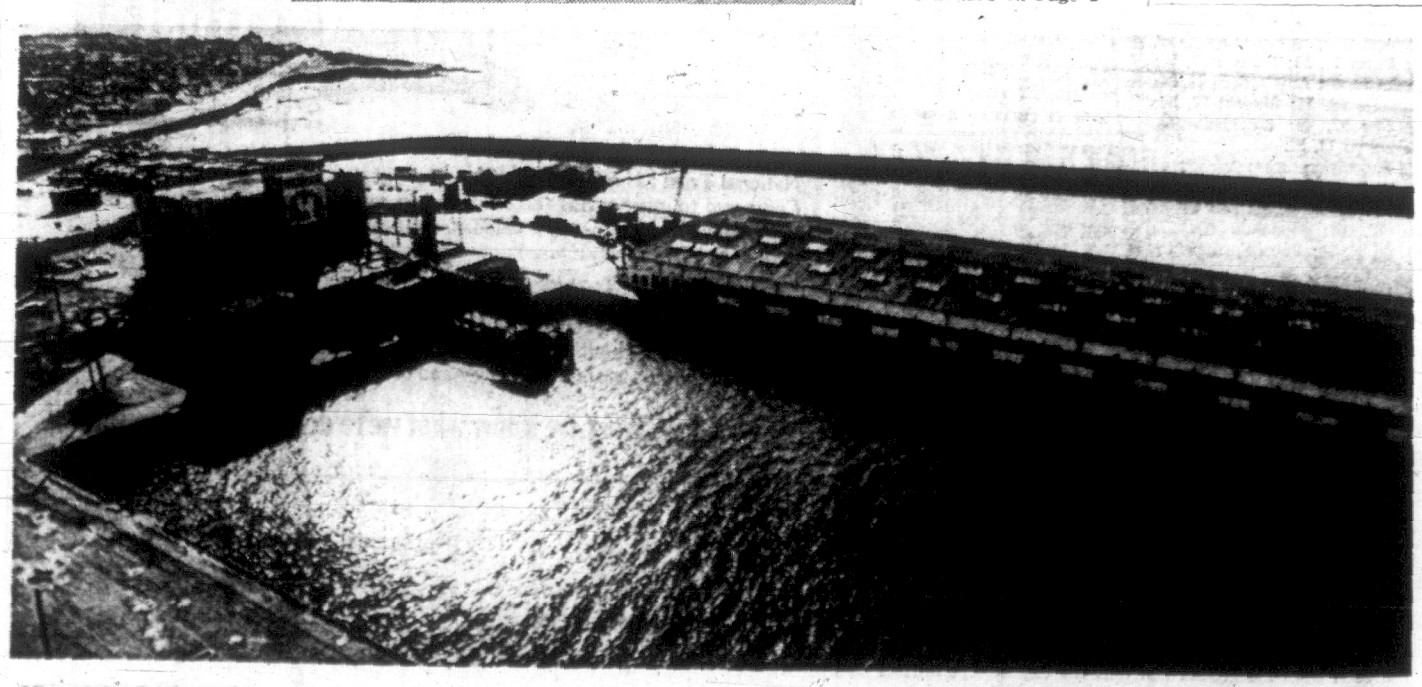

PRAGUE (CP) — A purge of the Prague city Communist organization was announced today just before a key Czechoslovak party central committee session, expected to decide the political fate of Alexander Dubcek.

The government closed the borders to casual Western visitors and stepped up security measures.

The party newspaper Rude Pravo today reported that 16 progressives were expelled from the capital's party plenary body and that three more resigned during a municipal party meeting Tuesday. Among those ousted was television commentator Karel Kynel, who denounced the new tough policy of the party.

Extensive security precautions were in force for the national party central committee session in Prague Castle later today.

been orderly and without incidents or trouble "and we don't expect any."

Mediation collapsed at 4 a.m., followed by an hour of discussion by the union executive.

Kotowich then said:

"A full negotiating committee, after meeting all night, could find no basis for a settlement upon the employers' answer to the union's demands and unanimously rejected their offer.

"The membership gave the negotiating committee a 96 per cent strike vote and this was exercised.

"The commitment given to the government to load wheat in the event of a strike will stand and every effort will be made to load the wheat."

REPORT TO OTTAWA

As the mediation talks broke down, William Kelly, director of the federal conciliation and arbitration branch, said he would now report to Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey on the results of his six days of talks with the longshoremen and B.C. Maritime Employers Association.

However, he said he doubts that Ottawa will make any move at this time.

Kelly voiced his disappointment at the outcome of talks as he had said Wednesday that satisfactory progress was being made between the association and the union.

No details of the main issues in the dispute were disclosed but the price of the labor contract in terms of union wages had been the primary block to an earlier agreement.

The longshoremen seek a minimum $45 a shift plus differentials for afternoon and night shifts. The association has offered a wage increase of 85 cents an hour spread over three years which would provide a basic shift rate of $37.84 by 1971.

How many ships were trapped in port up-Island was not as certain. A Nanaimo shipping agent said:

"I know two ships are held up in Nanaimo. One was going to finish loading today, but the other has two days of loading left before she will be ready."

For each day wasted in port, a ship loses $2,000 to $3,000. Two ships are also being held up in Harmac, he said.

"I assume they will sail without finishing their loading —I haven't any idea how long this strike will go on. It's costing them too much to stay."

SHIPS IN PORT

These deep sea ships were in up-Island ports according to the transport department: Crofton Kumso and Thalassaporos, bound for Japan; at Nanaimo, Ditmar Koel, for the Unitrd Kingdom, Merwe Lloyd for South Africa, and Conon Forest for the U.S.A.; at Harmac, James Stove, for Australia; at Tahsis, Orsha, for the Orient; and at Port Alberni, N. R. Crump, bound for the United Kingdom.

In Esquimalt drydock is Thor I, which will sail for the U.S.

Another ship was due in Victoria this afternoon to unload mahogany lumber and steel, said port agent Fred Ritchie, but it decided to anchor instead.

Since its next port of call was scheduled to be Vancouver, also affected by the strike, it may go on to Seattle.

Passes have been issued to allow dock employees not connected with the longshoremen to go to work, Ritchie said.

Employees of B.C. Packers, the grain elevator, and a paint company are being given passes.

ALBERTA MAY ENTER MORTGAGE BUSINESS

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Harry Strom said Wednesday the province is considering whether to enter the mortgage lending field and is exploring the United States and European money markets to determine if funds are available.

The plan is "one possibility" out of a number of schemes being studied, Premier Strom said at a news conference.

He indicated the shortage of financing for housing will be a major topic at a conference of Alberta mayors November 4 to 5 in Edmonton.

Mr. Strom said a broader question of municipal finance will likely top the agenda.

. . . USE OF PRISONS

the Criminal Code had been rarely invoked.

The report, compiled with the aid of a research team, says it appears that Canada hasn't experienced a marked increase in crime.

Comparing 1966 and 1950, the male conviction rate for indictable offences—the serious ones—decreased slightly while the female rate doubled. The rate of violent offences by females declined.

The rate for 16- and 17-year-olds increased 47 per cent.

The over-all proportion of non-violent offences was increasing while crimes against the person decreased 15 per cent.

Total conviction rates increased, mainly as a result of summary convictions. This might reflect the growing move to cities and an increasingly youthful population.

"Much of the increase is related to the growing use of the automobile."

Most Have Confidence in Police

The committee says that most Canadians have confidence in the police. Animosity resulted from unpopular laws "and the attitude of some police officers."

Use of firearms by police should be restricted by amendments to the Criminal Code. Some forces now restricted use of firearms short of that allowed by law.

Powers of police at arrest—to search a person, his home or vehicle—should be codified. The rights of an accused at arrest should also be codified.

Not all police forces allowed an accused to make a telephone call after arrest, for instance.

No widespread abuse of police questioning was found. Incriminating statements voluntarily made to police should be admissible as evidence.

Police should, under defined circumstances and control of a Supreme Court judge, be allowed to use wiretaps and other forms of electronic surveillance.

Report Greeted as Excellent

Solicitor-General George McIlraith greeted the report in a statement as excellent but he made no commitments on the 118 recommendations.

Neither did Justice Minister John Turner at a news conference on the subject.

Many of the recommendations on the mentally ill and on probation and parole were made law as a result of Criminal Code amendments this year.

Others, such as that recommending compensation to victims of crime, are within provincial jurisdiction.

There are also recommendations about jails and prisons that would require joint federal-provincial action.

One recommendation says that unless a major crime is involved, police should let a person escape rather than shoot at him.

Mr. McIlraith said the number of innocent bystanders killed or injured by police shooting at escapees is well known.

However, police couldn't be disarmed in a society that allowed "easy availability" of small arms. Perhaps the answer was "firm and drastic steps" to reduce this availability.

Supports Easier Bail Move

Mr. Turner says he favors a proposal that the burden of proof in bail applications be upon the Crown rather on the accused. He withheld judgment on a proposal that police be able to issue a summons in summary cases rather than arrest.

The committee's first recommendation is that a royal commission or committee to examine criminal law be established. Mr. Turner plans a national law reform commission.

The report says the aim should be to develop a system of classification "that would distinguish between illegal acts on a more rational basis."

Conduct shouldn't be defined as criminal unless it represented a serious threat to society and unless the act can't be dealt with through other social or legal means.

"To designate certain conduct as criminal in an attempt to control anti-social behavior should be a last step," the report says.

A comprehensive examination of the Criminal Code was of the "greatest urgency." Murder, rape, assault and theft didn't have to be justified as crimes.

But a "grey area" that made drunkenness, wandering at night, sale of contraceptives and other such matters criminal acts should be examined.

. . . TIMBER DEAL

Liberal leader Pat McGeer said he wasn't familiar with the territory involved in the trade but noted:

"The government has a history of being skinned on these deals."

He said he opposes mining and logging in provincial parks but the people have elected a government which favors such a policy "and there's not much you can do about it."

Both Campbell and Williston described the trade as a good deal for the government.

Williston said "a very detailed inventory" of timber values is carried out before such trades are made.

Campbell denied there has been any "rape" of Strathcona Park and said he was "excited by the prospect of a wilderness park at Cape Scott."

"There are many more park sites that should be acquired and I'm in favor of trades," Campbell said.

Victora naturalist Dave Hancock, who has made a film based on the Cape Scott area, welcomed the acquisition but criticizes the method.

He said he favors a park at Cape Scott but equally would like to see a fully protected wilderness park in the Strathcona area.

He expressed amazement at the price of about $300 an acre placed on the Cpe Scott land by Kiernan.

The land is of "extremely low value" and there is almost no timber there of any consequence, he said.

Warden, assistant executive director of the B.C. Wildlife Federation, said the organization "does not believe industry has a place in provincial parks."

"If we want a park at Cpe Scott—and surely we do—then surely we can acquire it without giving away other park values."

The timber, an estimated 147,000,000 foot board measure, is located in two parcels of Strathcona Park totalling 5,260 acres of 8.2 square miles.

7 PARCELS

Destined to be part of a Cape Scott provincial park in the northwest corner of Vancouver Island, the land is in seven parcels comprising 576 acres or less than one square mile all told.

Timber value estimate of $10,000,000 or more was made on the basis of information supplied by a provincial forest service official.

Kiernan provided the $300,000 estimate for the 576 acres which he described as "highly desirable coastal property."

He said the province would receive an estimated $1.3 million in stumpage revenue from the timber, which is to be removed by its new owners, Raven Lumber Ltd. of Campbell River, during a 10-year period.

FUTURE DEALS

He is satisfied the government had made a good deal said Kiernan, and added there is possibility of future deals:

"Where it's distinctly to our advantage to enter into a trade, we will enter into a trade. Where it isn't, we won't."

The two parcels of Strathcona Park opened to logging are 2,025 acres in the extreme northeast in parts of the drainage areas of Ranald, Greenstone and Nikie Creeks, and 3,235 acres in the Gretchen Creek area at the extreme southern edge of the park.

Strathcona Park comprises 561,000 acres of which 325,000 are Class A nature conservancy areas — fully protected from commercial use.

Both parcels opened to logging are in the Class B area, defined as open to some commercial uses providing they don't "unduly impair recreational values."

Kiernan said the traded timber is of little value for either recreational or ecological reasons but of considerable value as timber.

FIVE YEARS

The province will use the 576 newly acquired acres for an envisioned 38,000 acre wilderness park at Cape Scott, which Kiernan said may be accessible by road in five years.

The park is seen as one of a network of Vancouver Island parks including Long Beach and a planned park at Gold Lake near Strathcona Park.

Kiernan said the value of the deal to the logging company is "the savings in transportation costs" made possible by a source of supply close to Campbell River, thus avoiding the long sea-route for west coast timber.

"They can get more timber by going to the west coast of the island," he said, but the deal would ensure a closer supply for "X number of years."

Among commercial uses already permitted in Class B sections of Strathcona Park is Western Mines, subject of controversy over pollution of Buttle Lake.

Parks Director R. H. Ahrens said the proposed Cape Scott Park contains good fishing streams and an ecology that demonstrates the effects of the sea on vegetation at various dustances from the coast.

It is also an important resting place for waterfowl on the North American flyway, he said.

. . . CUTBACK

Another 350 seasonal jobs would be chopped. The department now has 4,300 full-time employees and 2,100 seasonal workers.

The reductions, which involve establishments from coast to coast, are designed to keep the department's 1970-71 budget at its present level of about $75 million.

Davis said without reductions the budget would have hit $87 million. More than half of the jobs being wiped out would not require layoffs as normal retirement, death and resignations would leave them unfilled.

"Every effort will be made to find other jobs for those who are laid off."

HIRING FROZEN

Davis told reporters he viewed the delay in the Babine salmon project as likely the most serious setback in department plans.

On staff reductions, he said there is likely some fat in any organization and the cuts—designed to offset increased wage rates—may help his department get rid of it.

Hiring will be almost completely curtailed. The forestry side of the operation will likely lose more employees, the minister said, but fisheries will feel almost as big a loss.

Davis estimated 100 to 120 professional biologists and engineers will be affected by the staff reduction. Regional directors in the main will determine who will be dismissed and when.

The heaviest staff cuts would likely be in the Ottawa headquarters area. Most employees would be given six months to a year's notice.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET, Jr.

The next time you fly in a jetliner toward a city, take note as you look out the window to see whether the city has a dust dome. Most cities do. In fact, I think all cities in North America are topped by that brownish haze that marks man's interference with the weather.

The dust dome is a blanket of particles that comes from industry and automobiles and from efforts of city residents to give their immediate vicinity the benefits of civilization—such as garbage incineration and skyscrapers.

The dust dome interferes with the sun's rays. Some of the sun rays don't reach the ground and so the daytime temperature in the city is perhaps a little lower than in the country. At night, the dust dome's particles and gases absorb radiation from the ground and thus the city is kept warmer than the far-out suburbs by as much as 10 to 12 degrees.

Defender Director Of Raven

William Wallace Baikie, a Campbell River alderman who has been a leader in the battle against industrial uses of Strathcona Park, is listed by the provincial registrar of companies as a director and shareholder in Raven Lumber.

Today Baikie denied prior knowledge of the deal between Raven and the province, saying he has "nothing to do" with the company's operation and has had "no involvement" for several years.

But he said "there is nothing to hide" and defended the company's planned operation in the park.

He also said Raven is paying "for every stick of timber" it will be taking out of the park.

Raven will be paying the going stumpage rate of $20 per thousand board feet, Baikie said.

"This is is not a high-profit operation because the timber is on a mountain one mile from the Buttle Lake edge and it is an expensive operation to log this way."

FAIR TRADE

"I've been fighting the industrial development of Strathcona Park, particularly the Western Mines operation. I'm not in favor of wholesale logging in the park, but this land is of no use as a recreation area because of inaccessibility and as far as I can see there is nothing wrong with trading it for land that can be of some use to the people."

Baikie said he sold his own WW Logging Co. to Raven "several years ago," and holds only "paper" interest in Rven only "paper" interest in Rayen are completed.

The registrar of companies office lists directors of Raven Lumber Ltd. as William Wallace Baikie, Llewellyn Jon Martin and James Gordon Luckhurst, all of Campbell River.

Share holders listed are the same three directors plus W. W. Timber Company, Campbell River.

Directors of W. W. Timber Company are Myra Cliffe Baikie and William Wallace Baikie. Shareholders are the three directors of Raven plus three others: Wallace Bruce Baikie, Myrna H. Boulding and Myra Joanne Campbell, whose address is listed as Kelowna.

Baikie is chairman of the Greater Campbell River water board. Martin is co-owner of the Haida Hotel in Campbell River and now Raven's chief shareholder.

Myra Cliffe Baikie is Baikie's wife and Wallace Bruce Baikie, a real estate agent in Campbell River, his son. Myrna H. Boulding is a daughter. A high school teacher, she is married to Jim Boulding, also a teacher, who is owner of Strathcona Lodge on Buttle Lake in Strathcona Park. Mrs. Campbell is also a daughter.

Boulding has been one of the most vocal critics of the Western Mines Ltd. operation in the park which disposes of mine tailings by dumping the waste material into Buttle Lake.

Teachers Concerned

HALIFAX (CP) — Educationists must take direct action to win public support for the goals of Canadian education and its increasing costs, Dr. J. R. McCarthy, president of the Canadian Education Association, said here today.

Dr. McCarthy, deputy minister of education for Ontario, said in a speech to the CEA annual convention that during the last 25 years expenditures on education have been accepted by the public "with a minimum of concern and little if any opposition."

Guillotine Idle

PARIS (Reuters) — French President Georges Pompidou Tuesday reprieved two men awaiting execution by the guillotine and commuted their death sentences to life imprisonment. They were the only two detainees under the death sentence in France.

JUDGE BOOSTS LIQUOR FINES FOR MINORS

Judge J. A. Byers who fined a minor $10 on Tuesday for possessing liquor, upped the fine to $25 for four youths who pleaded guilty to the offence Wednesday.

"I read in the paper that I'm more lenient on people who commit this offence," he said. "But there's a big difference in a person caught in possession of a bottle of beer on the street and another with liquor in his car. It's a different kettle of fish."

Judge, Lawyers Collide At Riot Conspiracy Trial

CHICAGO (WP) — A barrage of procedural arguments, several tingled with personal anger, markeded the opening Wednesday of the trial of eight accused of conspiring to cause a riot at the Democratic national convention.

Tempers flared all day. The judge bawled out the defence attorneys. The prosecution accused the defence attorneys of contempt in their publicity campaign. Seven of the eight defendents angered the judge by momentarily refusing to stand when he entered the court room.

Outside the court building, several hundred demonstrators staged a protest of the trial and were involved in at least one confrontation with the police.

After a day of courtroom wrangling, threre had been little substantive progress in the case and the process of selecting jurors had just begun at adjournment.

The eight political activists are charged under an anti-riot statue which has never been tested in the courts. It prohibits crossing the state lines or using channels of commerce with intent to foment a riot.

The government produced the only new element when it handed to Judge Julius J. Hoffman additional results of electronics surveillance which the government had gathered on some of the defendants.

The defence lawyers had demanded that the government disclose the extent and nature of wiretapping evicence. The judge has refused to consider that question until after the jurty has reached its decision.

In another development, Hoffman issued bench warrants for four defence lawyers originally involved in the case who have asked to withdraw. The attorneys, three from California and one from New York state, had announced their withdrawals in telegrams, but the judge said they must appear in his court to withdraw formally.

In the major clash of the day, Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Schultz argued that some of the remaining defence counsel have tried to prejudice potential jurors by the out-of-court publicity statements and "editorial comments."

He cited press conferences at which the lawyers, William Kunstler and Leonard I. Weinglass have complained that their defendant cannot get a fair trial here. Both have claimed judicial prejudice and have sought to have Hoffman disqualified. Schultz asked the judge to issue an order preventing such statements. The judge refused, saying that out-of-court comments likely to prejudice a jury are barred already by court rules. Then he advised Kunstler and Weinglass to "read the rules if you haven't already done so."

At that point, Hoffman also sarcastically turned on a Chicago lawyer, Stanley Bass, who is associated with the defence as local counsel.

"Do I amuse you, Mr. Bass?" asked the judge. "I was just about to compliment you, and I noticed you were laughing, sir." He then went on to cite Bass as one of Chicago's most distinguished lawyers.

Hoffman rejected more than a dozen defence motions, including ones to move to a larger courtroom, to dismiss U.S. Marshals standing around the building for security purposes, and to admit an American Civil Loberties Union attorney as an observer to the trial.

Egypt Softens Demands

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Diplomats speculated today that the Arabs may be becoming more receptive to Big Four efforts to work out a peace settlement for the Middle East.

Hopes were boosted by what was interpreted as a note of conciliation expressed Wednesday by Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad after a meeting with U.S. State Secretary William Rogers.

Riad told reporters his government does not insist that before the Arabs accept a peace package, Israel must withdraw from the territory it occupied during the 1967 war.

Riad said if Israel renounces "ideas of expansion" and settles the question of Palestine refugees, an agreement might be worked out similar to the 1949 armistice which ended the first Palestine war.

CONSTANT IN DEMANDS

It was recalled, however, that Riad made a similar statement at the United Nations in 1968, but that since then Egypt has been constant in its demands for a complete Israeli withdrawal.

Western diplomats have counted on U.S.-Soviet consultations and Big Four talks to wrap up a package that both Israel and the Arab states would accept. Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann of France told the General Assembly Wednesday that Big Four negotiations are the only way to work out a plan for lasting peace.

Big Four talks on the Middle East were halted last July to give the United States and Soviet Union a chance to explore the question. The four-power talks are expected to resume in mid-October. And U.S. diplomats hope they will work out something that the Arabs and Israelis can negotiate on, using UN mediator Gunnar Jarring of Sweden as a mediator.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban told the assembly last Friday that his government is still ready to negotiate "without prior conditions of any kind." But Israel has not modified previous announcements that it would never give up the Arab sector of Jerusalem, which it seized in 1967.

The Israeli government also now is virtually committed to retention of the southern Sinai Desert to protect the southern sea approach to Israel and to neutralization of the west bank of the River Jordan, seized from Jordan in 1967.

Heritage for Sale

THE OFFICIAL PRESS RElease from Mr. Kiernan, the minister of recreation and conservation, begins: "British Columbians have gained 576 acres of property, free of all encumbrances and representing what parks planners call 'excellent parks potential', in the Cape Scott area of Vancouver Island . . ."

That sounds like good news, as the acquisition will contribute to a proposed 38,000-acre park at the northern tip of the Island, to provide seashore, lake and stream environments. But the rest of the news release tells what British Columbians have paid for this 576 acres — we have lost the prime timber on 5,260 acres in Strathcona Park, a park already being polluted by a government-permitted mining operation. The land we get at Cape Scott is estimated to be worth $300,000. The timber we lose in Strathcona is estimated to be worth $10 millions. The stumpage revenue the government will receive from the logging operation will amount to some $1.3 millions. This is a trade?

This is the same old game which the Social Credit government has played before, in which we cannot add parklands without losing parklands. The deal involves a trade with the Raven Lumber Company of Campbell River. The company will log 3,235 acres of woodland on the southern edge of the park, and 2,025 acres in the north. Mr. Kiernan stresses that the company does not gain ownership of the land, only of the trees. What is left after the loggers leave will still be park — but what kind of park? What is a park for, except to save stands of timber as showpieces, preserve the ecology of the area and hand something on to posterity?

The trade recalls a somewhat similar deal for Rathtrevor Beach, at Parksville, where a public camping park was recently established. The people gave up public timber in Wells Gray Park for it. In such trades there is no independent assessment of the respective values of the properties, no open bidding for the piece of public domain to be exchanged. But worst of all, each such trade perpetuates the habit of losing part of one park in order to add another smaller park somewhere else.

Strathcona used to be a Class A park, and as such it was supposed to be immune from industrial encroachment. The Social Credit government declared a portion of it to be a conservancy, with Class A immunity—and opened the rest to exploitation.

The present swap is another example of this government's disregard of the trust which it undertook, to preserve for today and for posterity the irreplaceable parklands which had earlier been dedicated. To give credit where credit is due, Mr. Kiernan has done a good job of establishing the smaller camping parks and recreation areas. But his concept of our heritage of the great wilderness parks is sadly deficient. In the ironic name of progress we are suffering losses now which cannot be replaced. And what will preserve Cape Scott Park, today so highly praised by Mr. Kiernan, if tomorrow somebody sees in it an opportunity to make some money?

Tragedy Compounded

CONCERN OVER THE TRAGIC Nigerian civil war is finding new expression in this country these days. A nationally known television newscaster has left his job to plead the Biafran cause. When British Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart visited Ottawa last week he was confronted by demonstrators protesting his government's actions during the prolonged struggle.

There can be no doubt that such concern is genuine and heartfelt. However, this does not excuse the tendency to react only with emotion and ignore some of the hard facts involved. Because the Biafrans have suffered the most does not necessarily mean their cause is more just than that of the federal Nigerian forces.

Recent actions of the Biafran leader, General Ojukwu, in fact suggest the opposite. His decision to bar Red Cross assistance seems indefensible. An agreement to supply large quantities of food and medical relief for civilian victims of the war in Biafra had been reached by the Red Cross and the federal government. Gen. Ojukwu had previously agreed in principle too, but changed his mind at the last moment.

He objected on narrowly legalistic grounds—that the air lift agreement would in effect concede Nigeria's sovereignty over flight space above the territory it holds. Gen. Ojukwu didn't show the same concern for the welfare of the Ibos that some of his overseas supporters do.

Venting frustration on Mr. Stewart because of the war's toll is also unjustified. Britain's role in the struggle has not been easy. As Mr. Stewart pointed out, it has been "an agonizing question about which it is possible for sincere and human people to hold very different views." As the promoter of Nigerian independence and supporter of the federal system it was inevitable that Britain should oppose the tribal breakaway of Biafra which would destroy the nation.

There is still no simple solution in sight to this terrible war. Tentative talks are under way again, but there will have to be a considerable shift by both sides if they are to bear fruit. In the meantime it is wise to avoid exacerbating the situation by emotional appeals while there is so much that demands sympathetic but cool judgment.

A Hazy Question

THE RAINS HAVE WASHED the smoke away now but before they did the annual slash-burning bee had fouled up the skies once again. And again the question was asked, is it something that has to be put up with in the beautiful days of early autumn every year?

It is important that the question be repeated because it is a reminder that there is a choice, as there is in a number of pollution problems. Technologically, it is possible to eliminate nuisances like pulp mill odors and others that are fouling our environment. The real question concerns cost. Are we willing to pay for it?

Mr. Williston has again defended the granting of slash burning permits by stating there is no other way of getting rid of the logging debris. What he means is there is no other method as economical as controlled fire in doing the job. But there must be other alternatives.

Portable chipper machines that could follow the logging operations and chew up branches and waste are one possibility. Research would probably turn up others. It is something the government and logging operators should be working on together, with the firms picking up their share of the costs.

There is something illogical about cracking down on backyard incinerators when these huge bonfires are allowed to cast a pall over hundreds of square miles. It is time that answers were sought to eliminate this nuisance.

". . . the thing is—if you haven't recognized China for a long time, and if you are going to recognize it now . . . you won't recognize it . . ."

MANHOLE MANOEUVRE — By BRUCE HUTCHISON

In an Affluent Age, What Price Privacy?

ACCORDING to the newspapers, Svetomir Kusmanovich for the last three years slept by night in a manhole below the Toronto pavement and by day wandered through the city. Naturally, when they discovered that he was doing no harm to anyone, the authorities arrested him for vagrancy and then the excellent Salvation Army put him in a hostel with other waifs and strays. The papers seem to have got the facts straight but they got the name wrong. For the inhabitant of the manhole was not Svetomir Kusmanovich. He was Everyman. He was you and I.

Hutchison

To be sure, our manholes in most cases are sanitary, warm and comfortable, thanks to that affluent society which satisfies no one, least of all the affluent. We return to them at night and call them home. From this flimsy refuge we look out, through an electric eye, upon a mad world understood by no one except a single Canadian named McLuhan, and we rejoice in our privacy until John Turner warns us that our manhole is probably bugged by the Mafia and has become a mantrap.

If we live more comfortably than the Toronto waif, we live under the same compulsions, though we may not recognize them. Society will not leave us alone to decide for ourselves where and how we should live. It may not arrest us as vagrants but it insists that we conform to the will of the majority and accept its way of life whether we like it or not.

Most of us conform willingly enough because resistance is too difficult, acceptance too easy, and we hardly realize our conformity until someone like Svetomir Kusmanovich reminds us of it. A few resist, however, and demand the old freedoms enjoyed by our fathers in a pioneer land. The revolt against affluence by the young, the first revolt of that sort in all recorded history, is perhaps the most interesting event in our time, since it challenges the whole economic premise of our society. But the revolt ends in the manhole.

Observe, with all the compassion you can muster, what happens to the young rebels. They repudiate society (while expecting it to support them, preferably in expensive colleges). They claim the right to their own individuality. They want to be men and not ciphers, separate organisms and complete persons instead of helpless atoms swirling in a nuclear reactor. And yet, to achieve their privacy, they join a crowd, a demonstration or a mob where privacy is automatically extinguished. They reject mass action, as practised by the society that they hate and then use it themselves, thus losing the very thing they most desire.

Must Conform

Back to the manhole with poor old Svetomir Kusmanovich, or to the hostel of the Salvation Army. But society cannot tolerate any manhole unless it conforms to the building regulations, not only physical but mental and psychic. If a man prefers his refuge below the pavement to the charity of the state he must be dislodged for his own good and placed in an institution. Society knows what is best for him, and all of us. And while modern society provides every other blessing, the one thing it cannot provide and, at any cost, must suppress, is privacy.

Most people don't appear to miss it much. Otherwise they would not be swarming into the big cities where everything else is growing and privacy is dying. Soon, we are told, nearly all Canadians will live in these cities by their own choice, but is it really their own choice? Or is not a choice made by anonymous forces and deep, mysterious powers understood by nobody, even the governments, statesmen and sociologists, even the great McLuhan himself, who pretend not only to understand but to direct them?

Possibly alone among Canadians, Svetomir Kusmanovich understands these matters but cannot express, much less direct, them. He cannot keep his own private manhole and live alone. He must be rescued from privacy and installed among other powerless atoms for his own good.

Who Decides?

Who decides what is good for him or anybody else? Apparently the lawmakers, the police, the judges and, in the end, the Salvation Army, all of them acting with the best intentions, and at a heavy cost to the atoms called taxpayers. But no better than Svetomir Kusmanovich do these agents of society know where the social process ends or what is actually good for him, or any man.

Thus the sovereign problem of our society is not the old problem of achieving affluence, which we have already solved for all but a minority, and can certainly solve for the minority also with a little better management of the productive machine. No, the problem is to save man, the individual creature, the only thing that finally counts, from the spiritual tyranny imposed not by some secret plot among the politicians, the business managers and the labor unions but by the machine, by affluence itself.

That problem is not solved yet. It is only beginning to dawn upon us as a problem unlike any encountered before now in man's long march from the original caves to the contemporary manholes. We would be unwise, therefore, to dismiss Svetomir Kusmanovich as unimportant, a tiny item in the papers, a mere particle of life transferred from one manhole to another. With him, but for the mercy of God, would go you and I and Everyman. Perhaps we are going there anyway.

FROM NEW YORK — By JAMES RESTON

'The Strategy of Compromise Has Failed'

PRESIDENT Nixon is now applying to the anti-war students the same tactics he tried on the Vietcong, and with the same results. He is making limited concessions and he is being asked for unconditional surrender. He is telling General Hershey to de-escalate the draft calls, to stop the bombing of the graduate schools, to limit search-and-destroy operations in order to reduce casualties, and to negotiate with the S.D.S., but the student rebels are planning a fall Tet offensive to end the war anyway.

Reston

What they are demanding in return is the rest of what the president has already offered to the Vietnamese — self-determination, the dismantling of all (R.O.T.C.) military bases, the withdrawal of all troops, and the right to live their lives without outside interference.

Same Language

The anti-war leaders at home are using almost the same language about Mr. Nixon's draft cuts as the North Vietnamese and the Vietcong used about his withdrawal of 60,000 men from the battlefield. Charles Palmer, the new president of the National Student Association, called the president's 50,000-man draft cut "a meaningless attempt to pull the wool over people's eyes."

David Hawk, a dove who is helping organize the October 15 student protest against the war, said students would "see through this cynical and calculated attempt to fool the public."

This is becoming a pattern in the Nixon administration's life. In dealing with the war, the cities, the races, or the inflation, Mr. Nixon is making small concessions to deal with vast problems, and the more concessions he makes the more he is asked to make.

His planned retreat, far from inspiring Saigon to do more, or convincing Hanoi of his good faith, has merely frightened the South Vietnamese leaders and persuaded the North Vietnamese that the American resistance is collapsing.

Strategy Failed

This sort of thing could give compromise a bad name. In a way, the half-measures have mobilized the opposition against the administration, for now both the hawks who want to win the war and the doves who want to walk away from it, are saying the strategy of compromise has failed.

Part of the president's difficulty is that he has not managed to convince a substantial proportion of the American people of his own sincere conviction that there are still great moral, political and strategic issues at stake in fighting on for what he regards as a "decent" compromise.

He believes acceptance of the enemy's peace terms or even a concealed surrender would lead to a slaughter in South Vietnam and to political insecurity not only in Southeast Asia but in Japan, India, the Philippines, New Zealand and Australia. But in his emphasis on the peace talks and his willingness to withdraw all troops from Vietnam in due course, he has encouraged the impression that the continued killing is meaningless.

His concessions are not convincing his critics because he still thinks the limited war is morally right and they think it is not only morally wrong but obscene. This is the root of the division in the country.

The president wants to reduce the cost of the war, cut the casualties and the draft and reduce the opposition so that he can gain more time to fight and negotiate. His opposition challenges his premise and wants not limited casualties or limited draft calls but no casualties and no draft calls and no war.

Quitcher Kidding

The Globe and Mail

"It is wholly misleading, therefore, to portray the Manhattan passage as a test of Canada's sovereignty in the Arctic. The issue simply does not arise." These words appeared in a Globe and Mail article written by Minister of External Affairs Mitchell Sharp.

With respect, we suggest that if the issue does not arise it is because the government has chosen that it shall not arise, because the issue has been lying there since at least 1907, when Senator Pascal Poirier tried to persuade the Canadian Senate to declare formal possession of all the land and everything else that stretched from the Canadian northern mainland and lay between lines drawn from the Canadian eastern extremity and the Canadian western extremity to the North Pole.

In 1963 a Canadian discussed the arguments which ensued in a paper called Canadian Claims to Territorial Sovereignty in the Arctic Regions. His name was Ivan Head. He is now Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's chief personal adviser on international affairs.

Mr. Head's presentation was interesting. He developed a convincing case for Canadian sovereignty over the lands in the Arctic area, a case based on early English exploration, French ceding of all lands in Canada to the English Crown in 1763, the occupying exploits of the Hudson's Bay Company, and extensive modern Canadian activities to implement occupation and sovereignty. He quoted a number of international authorities who held Canada's claims to the lands to be good.

When it came to the waterways among the northern islands and reaching to the pole, Mr. Head found no such consensus. In fact, he found pretty well total confusion, even among Canadian politicians. There was the ice-is-land school and the ice-is-water school. There was the suggestion that Canada's claim stood good because nobody had challenged it, that even if it was not "good" it was "better" than any other nation's and thus the area would likely be awarded to Canada under international law.

Mr. Head found that: "The archipelago lying to the north of the Canadian mainland is well-defined geographically . . . forms a natural extension of the continent and shares with it a common continental shelf. It does not lie astride any shipping routes. (Ha!) Canada regards the water between the islands as Canadian territorial waters, and this claim has been recognized by the United States." (Has it now!)

"The unitary appearance of the formation and, to a lesser extent, its location suggest support to a claim to these waters as internal waters . . . It is highly unlikely that uninterrupted surface passage from the Labrador Sea to either the Arctic Ocean or the Beaufort Sea, or vice versa, will ever be a reality. Future demands for the right of innocent passage through the archipelago are speculative to a degree. The widths of some of the straits and entrances in the archipelago are wider than those limits ordinarily accepted by law for territorial waters, but their remoteness reduces the interest of the international community."

Who would ever have thought — certainly not the Mr. Head who sits at Mr. Trudeau's right hand — that six years would make such a difference?

Mr. Sharp cannot be in ignorance of Mr. Head's early work. He knows that the Canadian archipelago does now "lie astride" what some very ingenious and forceful men intend to make a "shipping route," that the Manhattan has made the "highly unlikely" surface passage, that future demands for "the right of innocent passage" are no longer "speculative". To paraphrase Mr. Sharp, in fact, "It is wholly misleading, therefore, to portray the Manhattan passage as no test of Canada's sovereignty in the Arctic. The issue cannot fail to arise."

Canadians could be forgiven for suspecting that the Government is sitting on the issue's head in the hopes that it will not arise, that it wants the whole question of sovereignty left over until it has worked out a deal with the United States. That it wants this deal because it knows the United States is determined to have it and because transforming the northern waters into year-round shipping routes would be a vastly expensive business. That after the deal is made, Canada will declare sovereignty and the United States will humor us with the right to assert it when assertion is not inconvenient to itself.

"I AM BLOWING! YOU'RE SQUEEZING TOO HARD!"

Looking Back

From the Times of Sept. 25, 1909.

The big airship made a splendid sight last evening before an admiring crowd of something like 12,000 people at the Exhibition Grounds. During the afternoon the aerial navigation failed to materialize, there being too much wind for cloud sailing. It was evening before the air was sufficiently still for the attempt. Then thousands of people had their first glimpse of a balloon propelled through the air by means of an engine-driven propeller.

Not All Vietnamese Suffer Some Are Living in Style

By ROBERT G. KAISER

SAIGON — In Vietnam, the rich comprise a small but growing class that ordinary people often scorn but also envy, slander but also admire. The wealthy are widely suspected of acquiring their wealth nefariously and spending it selfishly — and planning all the while to escape to Geneva or Paris at the first sign of serious trouble.

This reputation has been earned and cultivated by a small group, but is does not seem to apply to all of the successful practitioners of business, commerce and/or graft who comprise Vietnam's upper class.

Twenty years of war have made rich men of a wide variety of Vietnamese. The wealthy include aristocratic French-trained generals and government officials (both past and present), but this is only one small group.

Women whose talent is managing a bar have accumulated small fortunes: so have scruffy but resourceful street operators who have turned petty black marketeering into big money.

For all their diversity, most of the rich seem to share one trait: a short term view of the economic situation and their role in it.

In the words of a young lawyer who advises several successful wartime entrepreneurs, "nobody I have spoken to has ever talked about doing business in peacetime. They are all concentrating on making as much money as they can right now."

Quick Profits

The desire for quick profits has meant an emphasis on projects that promise a speedy return on investment — construction, real estate speculation and service businesses that cater to American soldiers and civilians.

Fast money cannot be earned in big industrialization projects, and there haven't been any. Vietnam is only slightly more industrialized now than it was before Americans arrived here in force.

Thus much of the money that is made in Vietman comes from ephemeral enterprises and enriches people who have no plans for long-term reinvestment. And much of the money that is made is quickly transferred into hard currency and out of the country — though both transactions are illegal.

The widespread desire for hard currency helps explain why the black-market money changers will pay more than 220 piastres for a dollar when the official rate is just 118. When the money changers are paying 220, Vietnamese buying dollars are paying at least 240 for their coveted greenbacks.

Not all wealthy Vietnamese are contributing to the outflow of currency. Some have decided that money begets money faster here than anywhere else, and they are actually bringing previously exported capital back into Vietnam. One former government offical has been telling friends lately that he has brought a lot of money back to Vietnam for investment in a variety of projects.

People who put their family's welfare far ahead of any patriotic considerations — as most Vietnamese do — claim to find nothing wrong with protecting their wealth by exporting it.

They point out, accurately, that the Vietnamese piastre is notoriously weak and that inflation can quickly devour huge fortunes. The official retail price index, on which 100 represents prices of January, 1965, is now 484.

Western Style

The life style of wealthy Vietnamese is surprisingly western. They seem to spend money on houses, cars, appliances, trips abroad and servants. (Servants are cheaper than many consumer goods; Saigon has many 10-year-old cars driven by chauffeurs.)

Perhaps the only major expense faced by the wealthy Vietnamese that would surprise well-to-do Americans or Europeans is the cost of a foreign education for his children. A foreign education is highly desirable, both because it protects a son from the draft and because it gives a son or daughter an enormous advantage when he or she returns home.

The most popular criticism of the upper class — heard from both Vietnamese and foreigners here — is that the rich are utterly selfish, lacking all patriotism or sense of obligation to the nation. A rich man's only concern, it is often said, is the status of his passport, exit visa and Swiss bank account.

Story Caused Stir

Wealthy Vietnames are sensitive to these accusations. According to one of the country's richest men, there was a major stir among his class over a story in Newsweek magazine in June reporting that hundreds of Vietnamese were struggling to get out of the country.

(Sale of that issue was banned in South Vietnam, presumably because it said that Mrs. Nguyen van Thieu had deposited her "three children" in Rome and had bought a house in Switzerland. In fact, the Thieus have two children, one studying in Switzerland, the other in Taiwan. They have denied owning a house in Switzerland. The fact that the story was banned, however, assured that it was widely read in Vietnam.)

Faith in Press

"The story was not true, but it casued much trouble," according to this wealthy Vietnamese. "People in Vietnam have great faith in the American press; they believed the story. So people began to wonder if they should be making plans to leave too."

There is no evidence of a new mass exodus. Vietnamese have been leaving the country regularly, though in small numbers, for years and are continuing to emigrate. There are now at least 20,000 Vietnamese living in France, for example.

Good life is enjoyed by Mrs. Nguyen Van Thieu, left, and Mrs. Nguyen Cao Ky, right, at a Saigon garden party

But most Vietnamese are afraid of moving to a strange western country. Those who have visited abroad are often the least interested in taking up permanent foreign residence. There are many discouraging tales of successful Vietnames who were forced to take menial jobs when they moved overseas. And in Vietnamese culture, there is a strong tie to home that is not easily broken.

Ready to Leave

Nevertheless, the rich seem to talk a great deal about leaving the country if things go bad, and there is a widespread feeling that things could go bad.

Like most Vietnamese, a majority of the rich seem to feel no direct involvement in affairs of state. They see no relationship between their own behavior and the fate of the nation, nor do they see any way they personally can help defend South Vietnam from the Communists.

The Vietnamese approach to income taxes typifies this attitude. "No one in Vietnam pays taxes," says one Saigon editor, who should pay about 20 per cent of his income to the government but in fact pays nothing. The western notion of taxes as a citizen's obligation has no meaning in Vietnam. Taxes here are simply something to be avoided.

And yet many wealthy Vietnamese seem to realize that their selfish ways may ultimately be self-defeating. "We must invest for the future of our country," one especially optimistic man said in an interview.

He has recently helped open a new bank in Saigon, and he plans to begin construction soon on a new chemical products factory. "I am trying to convince others to do the same," he said.

Vietnam is a society without reliable statistics about itself, and there is no way of knowing how many rich people there are or who they are. But certain generalizations seem justified.

Chinese Richest

The richest people here are probably not Vietnamese at all, but Chinese businessmen, who have thrived in Vietnam as they have throughout Southeast Asia — but not without bitterness from the natives.

"Tell me," an officer of the Saigon Chamber of Commerce asked in an interview, "in the United States, would they allow foreigners to control the economy?"

Probably the richest Vietnamese are those who have exploited public office for private gain. Graft still seems to be this country's biggest business. Other wealthy men (and women, who play an active role in Vietnamese commerce) own businesses that serve Americans, from bars and houses of prostitution to laundries, construction companies and stevedoring firms. Black marketeers and currency manipulators have also done well.

Where can they go from here? Interviews with a number of businessmen suggest that for the moment, all tht matters is tomorrow.

The current real estate market in Saigon seems to exemplify the situation. Many houses and big buildings are for sale, apparently because their owners don't expect values to go any higher now that the Americans have begun to leave.

But, according to real estate brokers, a building can stay on the market for weeks and the owner will refuse to lower his asking price. Almost everything is for sale, but not at any price.

When Will We Do Something About Labor Union Violence?

By RICHARD J. NEEDHAM

The Globe and Mail recently published two reports that fed right into one another. One dealt with Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, who in a statement released by his office deplored the "mindless violence" of "unruly mobs" to which he has been exposed several times during the last year. Mr. Trudeau said:

"Obscene personal attacks or physical intimidation do not demonstrate the authority of the protesters or the validity of their protest. The danger to society in giving encouragement to such behavior is not confined to the risks of physical injury or destruction of property. We must also be aware of the danger to our (democratic) system."

There's nothing new in this; on several occasions Mr. Trudeau has spoken out in opposition to mob violence, and in support of the law and order he is pledged to maintain. What gives it point is that the same paper carried a report from Sarnia:

"Local 414 of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union and striking glaziers refused yesterday to let out-of-town workmen repair broken plate glass windows in the Hudson's Bay Co. store here—but agreed to let the company board up the windows. The employees of the store have been on strike for 19 weeks and the glass workers, members of the Painters and Decorators Union, Local 1590, which is striking against other firms, would not cross the picket lines to replace the broken windows. The store union has been keeping a watch on the windows on Christina Street to prevent looting or replacement of the windows."

What this report tells us is that the law—Mr. Trudeau's law—does not run in Sarnia. The Hudson's Bay Co. has an absolute legal right to have its windows replaced by any glazier who is willing to do the job—be he from Toronto or Timbuctoo. But the strikers won't "let" it.

The store has an absolute legal right to board up the windows—the strikers have "let" it do so, but are keeping a watch to "prevent" their replacement with glass.

They have also taken it upon themselves to "prevent" robbery, a function which is surely that of the police.

Where are Sarnia's civic authorities in all of this? Where are the police? Who, in Sarnia, is the law?

It's not just Sarnia; it's all Canada. It's not just Pierre Trudeau; it's John Robarts, Jean-Jacques Bertrand, and every other leading figure in Canadian political life.

It's the mayors and controllers and councillors, it's the chiefs of police and the police commissions, the attorneys-general, everybody set in authority.

They simply will not face this issue. They will not bring their labor unions within the law. If hippies or peaceniks use or threaten to use physical violence, if hippies or peaceniks scream obscenities and insults, they're cracked down on—well and good.

But if labor unions do these things in the course of a strike or a demonstration, nobody says a word, lifts a finger.

The law, in short, isn't the law, order isn't order, and it's time the politicians—including Mr. Trudeau—got themselves out of that box. They have two choices.

One is to enforce the law impartially, with labor as with everybody else—picketing for informational purposes only, and that's it. The other (which should make for an interesting discussion in Parliament and in the press) is to legalize what is actually happening; that is, to grant labor a special exemption from the Criminal Code so that it can demonstrate, picket, etc., as violently as it pleases, while still remaining within the law.

If you say the second proposition is absurd, I'll agree; but it's an absurdity that in point of fact exists (as with The Bay at Sarnia; as with the construction industry in Toronto) and which has existed for 25 years; if it's going to continue, we might as well make it official.

●

Then Mr. Trudeau will be in a more honest position to deplore the bad behavior of the hippies and peaceniks. He could criticize them for, let us say, rioting without statutory permission.

"Law and order"—President Nixon says he wants it, Mr. Trudeau says he wants it, all the politicians say they want it. But do they really mean what they say?

Will they make the tough decisions, do the tough things, necessary to make law and order prevail in labor-management disputes?

I doubt it. And so when they say their law-and-order piece, I have to laugh.

Moon Malady

WELT AM SONNTAG

Moonlight can be dangerous for many tropical plants. Two biologists from Tubingen University, Drs. Bunning and Moser, stated that as many protective measures had to be taken against moonlight as against excessive sunlight.

With this information the two biologists have solved a mystery that has long puzzled botanists.

Why do some varieties of tropical plants turn their leaves away from bright moonlight and wither in much the same way as other plants protect themselves from excessive evaporation? Darwin too noticed this phenomenon.

The two Tubingen researchers were able to prove in experiments involving artificial moonlight that the intensity of tropical moonlight was sufficient to set the plant's light control in operation.

The whole metabolism of the plant depends on light control. Usually it conforms to the pattern of day and night.

But the bright tropical moon is all it takes to set the light control into operation and disturb the whole system of the plant. Moving the position of the leaves reduces the amount of light that can affect it.

Some Starfish Well-Armed

By DR. CLIFFORD CARL
Director, Provincial Museum

Among the starfishes commonly seen along our coast are a number of "odd balls"—those that regularly have more than five arms, the standard complement of the Echinoderm group as a whole. These off-beat species often have other peculiar characteristics to distinguish them further from the usual run of members of this purely marine assemblage of animals.

The six rayed star, Leptasterias, is a good example. This little sea star that seldom reaches two and three-quarter inches in diameter always has six arms. Why this is so is not known.

It seems strange that in a group whose members regularly have five arms one offshoot can depart by having one more than the standard number. Several other kinds of starfish have several more arms than five, as we shall see, but Leptasterias persists in raising the number by one only.

★ ★ ★

The six rayed star is further distinguished by having unusual breeding habits. Instead of releasing eggs into the water where they become fertilized by sperm from nearby males the female Leptasterias carries its eggs in clusters around the mouth. By arching the body and drawing the arms closer together the mother starfish forms a tent-like cavity that serves as a brood pouch. In the space so provided the eggs hatch and the larvae develop until they assume the adult form. It is not uncommon to find a starfish brooding several dozen miniature replicas of itself on the undersurface of the disk.

★ ★ ★

Another small species with an unusual number of arms is the five inch rose star, Crossaster, which has ten rays—a doubling of the traditional five. Such a number is more easily understood since it merely involves a splitting of the basic pattern.

The common name stems from the color pattern which is two concentric bands of bright pink on a creamy background. The upper surface of the body and arms is exceedingly rough; a series of calcareous spines projects through the skin and each spine has a brush-like tip of spinules.

Several of the larger multi-rayed starfish are commonly called sun stars, the numerous arms being reminiscent of a cartoonist's version of the sun surrounded with radiating points of light.

A colorful member of this group is the Stimpson sun star (Solaster) which has eight or ten slender arms and measures up to eight inches in diameter. It is easily recognized by the blue-grey centre of the disk with a stripe of the same color running lengthwise to the tip of each arm. Each stripe is bordered by a narrow band of pink or orange.

★ ★ ★

Our largest sun star, sometimes called sunflower star (Pycnopodia) has as many as twenty-four rays which are arranged around the broad central disk like flower petals. The rays or arms originate in a peculiar way. Very young specimens may have as few as six to start with. In time as the animal grows new rays are added in pairs between the old rays.

The result is that a sunstar of this species may have any number of rays, usually an even number, up to twenty-four depending upon age and it may reach a diameter of more than two feet.

As is the case with most starfishes Pycnopodia has tremendous power of regeneration. If a ray is grasped by a predator or even if it becomes slightly injured it will be cast off almost immediately and a new one will begin to grow in its place. Sunstars are commonly found with several rays in various stages of replacement which indicates that self-amputation and regeneration are of fairly regular occurrence.

The most fantastic multi-armed member is the basket star of deeper water whose technical name Gorgonocephalus is as formidable as its looks. This creature is really a brittle star in which the original five arms have each divided into two and into two again many times until there are over a hundred branches ending in tendrils that are constantly twisting and coiling in a disorganized-looking tangle.

Actually the tips are merely gathering tiny particles of food which are gradually transferred to the centrally located mouth; despite its appearance the basket star is entirely harmless but is certainly one of our most interesting "odd-balls."

Wheat Difficulties Could Cause National Headache

By ANTHONY WESTELL
Special to the Times

REGINA — Saskatchewan's new provincial flag was officially raised this week, flying green and yellow-gold against the grey fall sky.

The design was chosen from more than 4,000 entries by free vote of the legislature to symbolize the past and, hopefully, the future of this province—wheat.

The yellow-gold in the flag represents fields of grain, and the motif is repeated in the three sheafs of wheat in the coat of arms above.

This emphasis on wheat is almost a cry of hope in present circumstances. For the wheat economy is deep in a crisis which has already brought Saskatchewan to the edge of disaster and which has grave implications for the whole country.

Canada's wheat exports have been falling steadily for several years as world production has increased. This fall, as the farmers harvest a near-record crop, barely a bushel has been sold.

With no sales even at reduced prices, the farmers are short of cash and the economic squeeze is backing up throughout the economy.

Retail sales are down about 10 per cent in Saskatchewan—14 per cent in some rural districts. Sales of new cars and farm machinery are said to be off 40 per cent, and already some implement dealers have gone out of business.

Tax Revenues Dropping Fast

Other enterprising and publicity-conscious businessmen are taking wheat in place of cash, and then wholesaling the grain to cattle feedlots. Even the University of Saskatchewan is accepting wheat for tuition fees, because the grain can be used to feed animals on Indian farms normally subsidized by the provincial government.

The provincial government itself is suffering as revenues from income and sales taxes drop. It estimates it will lose about $12 million this year. And the situation will be so bad next year—unless the economy improves—that the federal government will have to rush in with emergency support.

Eastern city dwellers conditioned by mostly mythical yarns about prairie farmers who work only a few months in the year and laze away the winter in Florida or Hawaii find it hard to relate to the Saskatchewan crisis. They probably won't appreciate the seriousness of the situation until the business slowdown backs into their manufacturing plants, their taxes are raised to bail out the wheat economy, and the loss of export income weakens the nation's balance of payments and the dollar.

The lack of apparent understanding and concern in the east is intensely frustrating to westerners and confirms their feelings of isolation and alienation.

"I don't think frankly that Ottawa is cognizant of how serious it is," says Thatcher. "It is not that they are hostile—they are apathetic."

Manitoba's Premier Ed Schreyer makes much the same complaint when he says that Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau seems nonchalant about the wheat crisis.

The federal government, in fact, has eased the immediate cash crisis by doubling advances it makes to farmers against unsold wheat. Big farmers are drawing loans up to $6,000 this year, depending on acreage.

This has put some money into circulation on the prairies. But the farm organizations claim that it has really only postponed the showdown until the spring, when—in the absence of new sales—the farmers will again be running out of cash.

New sales of wheat are of course the key to the problem, and the major question is whether the present difficulties are temporary or represent a permanent change in the world wheat economy.

Thatcher, NDP Opposition Leader Woodrow Lloyd and many others keep their fingers firmly crossed and say they expect the difficulties to pass. They remember previous times when the world was glutted with wheat, but there was always a drought or a crop failure to renew demand for Canada's crops.

Grain Barters For Oil, Cotton

In a hungry world, it is impossible to believe there is no market for Saskatchewan's wheat, says Thatcher. He expects Ottawa to ship about $70 million of foodstuffs, mainly wheat and flour, in its aid program this year, and he is hopeful of sales of about 200 million bushels of wheat to China and Russia.

Meantime, he is urging Ottawa to explore the possibility of bartering surplus wheat for Iran's surplus oil and Egypt's surplus cotton, to cite two examples.

This is the optimistic view — the view that any politician has to take in public — that it is a short-term crisis and that markets will revive.

The United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization, other economic survey institutions and such farm groups and the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool all fear that the difficulties for Canada are deep-rooted and perhaps permanent. Expanding world production means not only that countries such as Pakistan that used to buy from Canada no longer do so, but that they are actually competitors in selling to third countries.

There is also the fact that improved technology makes the prospect of major crop failure in Russia, China or anywhere else less likely each year. In Canada and every other country, farmers are steadily improving their ability to master the elements and avert outright disasters.

The Saskatchewan Wheat Pool is asking Ottawa for immediate cash support for the wheat economy by acreage payments of up to $2,000 per farmer as a straight grant, a guaranteed price for export wheat, and an extra $1 a bushel for wheat used in Canada to be paid by putting three or four cents on the price of a loaf of bread.

Aid to Farmers Or Social Chaos

But these measures will not solve the problem if there is a permanent contraction in the world market. So the pool is proposing also a $400 million fund to be used over the next four years to help farmers adjust to the new situation — by taking loans to convert to beef production, to train to work in the potash mines or in some other industry, or just to leave the land.

Finally, says the pool Ottawa should be prepared to buy land from farmers who want to sell but cannot now get a reasonable price.

The Thatcher government is preparing to do its best to help farmers adjust by providing millions of dollars in loans to convert from wheat to beef production. The legislation will be announced shortly.

Some farm experts say that the objective should be to cut the number of wheat farmers in the province by about one-half — down to 40,000 — but even this would not entirely solve the problem unless world prices rise.

Aid on a massive scale to wheat farmers would be politically unpopular everywhere in Canada, except on the prairies. As Trudeau has said, it is hard to justify giving money to farmers who have land and machinery worth $100,000 and up.

The alternative to planned rundown of the industry, however, may be economic chaos and social disintegration. Woodrow Lloyd points to the evidence that the drift of rural poor into the cities helped to spark the urban violence in the United States. He warns that we have perhaps 10 years to prevent the breakdown of rural society in Canada and the mindless repetition of U.S. experience.

Only One Party Runs Candidates For Quebec Seats

QUEBEC (CP) — Nominations closed Wednesday for four provincial byelections Wednesday, Oct. 8, and all but four of 20 candidates are running as independents.

The Union Nationale is the only party name that will appear on the ballots in the ridings of Montreal Ste. Marie, Montreal St. Jacques, Vaudreuil-Soulanges and Trois-Rivieres.

The governing party will field four candidates, whose opponents include four members of the Quebec wing of Real Caouette's Ralliement des Creditistes, all entered as independents.

The provincial Liberals are not contesting the vacant seats. Jean Lesage, who plans to resign as Liberal leader, said Wednesday the byelections are meaningless and the Liberals are "in a period of transition."

No other party in the running had 10 official candidates in the last provincial election, a requirement under the Election Act for "recognized party" status.

CONTEST STE. MARIE

Montreal Ste. Marie, a populous downtown riding, is being contested by Lawyer Jean-Jacques Croteau, 35, of the Union Nationale and six independents: Paul Aubut, Reggie Chartrand, Jean-Paul Cloutier, Richard Hebert, Jean-Paul Trudel and Lucien Vallee.

In Montreal St. Jacques, Union Nationale candidate Jean Cournoyer, a 35-year-old lawyer, is opposed by Andre Coallier, Jean Desautels, Jean-Marc Fontaine, Henri-Georges Grenier and Jean-Paul Poulin.

In Trois-Rivieres, lawyer Gilles Gauthier, 33, the Union Nationale standard-bearer, is running against three independents—Aime Lefrancois, Roger Simard and Jacques Vachon.

Edouard Beliveau, a 41-year-old notary, is the Union Nationale candidate in Vaudreuil-Soulanges. He is opposed by Joseph Ranger and Marcel Lessard.

Vaudreuil-Soulanges is the only riding formerly held by the Liberals. Paul Gerin-Lajoie, one-time education minister, drew 11,120 votes in the 1966 provincial election compared with 8,490 for the Union Nationale candidate.

Mr. Gerin-Lajoie resigned in June to become vice-chairman of the federal prices and income commission.

GABIAS RESIGNED

Trois-Rivieres was held by Yves Gabias, former provincial secretary and immigration minister in the Union Nationale goverment who resigned last spring for health reasons.

He defeated his Liberal opponent by more than 1,000 votes in 1966.

Edgar Charbonneau, former minister without portfolio in the current government, won by a 3,650-vote margin over the Liberal candidate in Ste. Marie and Paul Dozois, former finance minister, outstripped his Liberal opponent by a similar edge in St. Jacques.

Party standings in the Quebec's 108-seat legislature are: Union Nationale 53, Liberal 48, independent 3 and vacant 4.

Describing themselves as Creditistes were Mr. Fontaine in St. Jacques, Mr. Lessard in Vaudreuil-Soulanges, Mr. Simard in Trois-Rivieres and Mr. Trudel in Ste. Marie.

The Creditistes, with 14 seats in the House of Commons, have never contested a provincial election or byelection.

Two other candidates—Mr. Poulin in St. Jacques and Mr. Ranger in Vaudreuil-Soulanges—said they represent the United Social Credit.

Three Fined $1,000

CALGARY (CP) — A New York probation officer, a real estate broker from the same city and a Calgary woman were each fined $1,000 Wednesday after they pleaded guilty to joint charges of possession of marijuana and LSD. Fined were James J. Finale and Marc Mendler, both 22, and Judy A. Enns, 20. They were arrested Friday after and RCMP constable stopped a speeding car and confiscated a small amount of drugs.

Rail Strike Averted

WASHINGTON (AP)—A strike of seven United States railways scheduled Oct. 4 was headed off Wednesday when the National Mediation Board notified President Nixon that an emergency situation exists. The action puts into motion federal mediation procedure which will delay a strike by the four shopcraft unions for at least 60 days. Nixon will set up a mediation panel.

Quiet Revolutionist May Return

By ALEX FARRELL

OTTAWA (CP) — Paul Gerin-Lajoie is out of the Quebec political arena, but with the Liberals in his home province looking for a leader he might not be out much longer.

Mr. Gerin-Lajoie resigned his seat in the Quebec national assembly in June to accept a two-year appointment from Prime Minister Trudeau as vice-chairman of the new prices and incomes commission.

But since then former premier Jean Lesage has resigned, and the Quebec Liberal party will hold a leadership conference to choose a successor.

In an interview in his office in the old Ottawa railway station, Mr. Gerin-Lajoie made it clear that he is still interested in Quebec provincial affairs. But would he, or could he, be a candidate for the leadership? He did not commit himself either way, but left the impression that his options are open.

At 49, Mr. Gerin-Lajoie looks like the sort of man Hollywood could cast as a middle-class French-Canadian professional man and politician. Married and father of four children, he is dark-haired, short in stature, elegantly handsome, polished in manner, and wears a trim moustache. He dresses soberly, although occasionally he sports a flower in his lapel, and he is schooled in the classics.

ENGLISH IS ACQUIRED

But Hollywood would probably prefer somebody who speaks English with a strong Gallic accent. Mr. Gerin-Lajoie speaks unaccented English, albeit with a rather slow precision that marks it as an acquired language.

Indeed, he could be the very model of a bicultural Canadian. He is, in fact, a Rhodes Scholar. He went to Oxford in 1939 after graduating in law from the University of Montreal.

Back home by 1942, he was admitted to the Quebec bar and practised law, achieving enough prominence to become president of the Canadian Bar Association in 1950.

His entry into politics came only 10 years later, when he formed part of the Quebec Liberal team that Jean Lesage led to power in 1960. He won his home riding of Vaudreuil-Soulanges, between Montreal and the Ontario border, and held it through each subsequent election until his resignation this year.

From 1960 to 1966, when the Lesage government was defeated, he made his mark in a cabinet full of strong-willed activists. In fact, when people asked in those years who might be "le dauphin," the likeliest successor to Mr. Lesage, the name of Gerin-Lajoie was mentioned more than all the rest.

Mr. Gerin-Joie's colleagues included such diverse types as Rene Levesque, now Quebec's best-known separatist, Eric Kierans, now a prominent figure in the federal cabinet, Claude Wagner, former Crown prosecutor who has become a crusader for law and order in Quebec, and Pierre Laporte, long-time political correspondent for the newspaper Le Devoir until he decided to get into politics.

In Mr. Gerin-Lajoie's view, the remarkable thing about this cabinet was that it functioned so well as a team.

"From 1960 to 1966, Jean Lesage was truly the man for the situation. He knew how to make strong personalities get along and work together."

This was the period already known to history as the Quiet Revolution. The Lesage government set out to initiate or promote reforms in virtually every area of Quebec life.

EDUCATION REFORMED

The main thrust was in the domain of education, where the Lesage government took over from the churches the ultimate responsibility for school administration and set up a royal commission that produced a blueprint for top-to-bottom reform of the education system.

Mr. Gerin-Lajoie guided the formation of a government department of education and in 1964 he became Quebec's first education minister in this century.

Over the years, too, he developed an absorbing interest in economics.

He says his views on education policy, first as minister and now as critic of the province's Union Nationale government, are dominated by economic considerations. People should emerge from school and college capable of running an advanced industrial society, he contends, and conversely, society should have jobs for them to do.

This, he says, is what is most lacking in Quebec today. The provincial government must give urgent priority to efforts to quicken and expand the economy.

Quebec was on the verge of spawning a frustrated intelligentsia on a large scale—frustrated by the lack of job opportunities good enough to engage their talents.

Three years from now the annual total of graduates from Quebec's institutions of higher learning, including the new junior college system, would be about 40,000. Three years ago it was 10,000.

"There will be such an increased number of graduates that we have to be worried about the possibility of jobs," he said. "If you have 20,000 university graduates who have no jobs, these are the terms of revolution."

This is a problem Mr. Gerin-Lajoie appears eager to tackle, if the opportunity comes his way.

SCHOOLS MUST CHANGE OR FACE MAJOR UNREST

HALIFAX (CP) — Dr. H. L. Willis, deputy superintendent of the Ottawa Collegiate Institute Board, Wednesday predicted an unprecedented increase in student unrest unless changes are made by school teachers and administrators.

He was addressing the Canadian Education Association convention here.

A Halifax university student, Andrew Cochran, said he had learned "four times as much" through his own reading and extra-curricular activities as he had in high school.

He warned the CEA delegates they should examine the school system and find out "if what is going on in your school is relevant today."

Dr. B. T. Keller of Edmonton told another discussion that Canada could look forward to increasing militancy among its teachers unless they were able to accomplish certain objectives.

Dr. Keller, executive secretary of the Alberta Teachers' Association, said that teachers were more dissatisfied with their lot than ever before. They and status in society.

"They are even more concerned about conditions under which they render service and about sharing in all educational decision," he said.

At a third session Murdoch MacDonald of Toronto, asistant superintendent of public schools for the Toronto board of education, said teachers and principals should be closely involved in planning new open space schools, which feature wide areas in which students may gather informally for classes and use audio-visual materials.

"If they are not involved in this way they will surely feel threatened, will not accept, and certainly not use the open spaces as they might be used."

The CEA convention ends Friday.

A fall parent-teacher workshop will be organized at a Victoria and District Parent-Teacher Association meeting tonight at 8 p.m. in Central Junior Secondary.

Quebec Police Recover 38 Paintings

QUEBEC (CP) — Thirty-eight paintings stolen from the provincial art gallery in 1965 and valued at $800,000 were recovered by provincial police Tuesday night.

The paintings included 23 works from a collection of the late Quebec premier Maurice Duplessis.

Two men were arrested.

Police said a patrol officer had tried to stop a suspicious-looking car during investigation of another matter. The car sped away and police saw a package being thrown from the window.

After arresting the two men, police returned to examine the package and found seven paintings.

Police had been looking for the paintings since May, 1965, when three armed and masked men overpowered a guard at the gallery and escaped with the collection.

Discussions Probe Role Of Family

A series of discussion groups that trace "the growth and development of a child from the planting to the harvest" will be offered by the Foster Parents' Association throughout the fall.

The series, co-sponsored by the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association, will present six lecturers including university, kindergarten, and public school teachers and Charles Barber of Victoria Cool-Aid.

"Our aim is to encourage a greater understanding of the factors that promote healthy family life," a spokesman said.

Sessions will be informal "buzz groups" over coffee, following the lectures.

The first speaker in the series will be Prof. Richard Courtney of the University of Victoria's theatre department. He will speak on "Spring planting — the Family" Sept. 29 at 8 p.m. in the Common Room of the Ewing Building, Richmond and Lansdowne.

MPs HEAR PUBLIC PROTESTS

Reserve Army Cuts Unpopular

By JOHN BEST

OTTAWA (CP) — Some MPs are getting a strong reaction from their constituencies against the government's intention to slash the strength of the reserve armed forces.

The reserves, traditional source of recruits for the fighting forces when Canada goes to war, are to be chopped by a reported 33 to 50 per cent. The cut will parallel drastic, though less heavy, cuts to be made in the strength of the regular forces during the next two years.

Carl Legault, Liberal MP for the Northern Ontario riding of Nipissing and a wartime airman, is preparing a letter to Defence Minister Leo Cadieux on the basis of protests he has received against the planned cuts.

Terrence Murphy, Liberal MP for Sault Ste. Marie, has already sent one to the minister. Written protests against the government move also have been received by a third Ontario MP, Gaetan Serre of Nickel Belt.

In each of these constituencies, the Canadian Legion has got behind the reserves in an effort to stave off the planned cuts.

Present strength of the reserves is 27,100: 23,500 army militia, 2,700 navy and 900 air force. In the present fiscal year, 45,000,000 has been budgetted for the reserve force program.

If the reported extent of the planned cuts is correct, the defence department, operating under severe government-imposed spending restraints, could presumably save $15,000,000 to $22,000,000.

CADIEUX DISAGREES

Mr. Legault says a reduction in the reserves would weaken Canada's ability to mobilize for war. In the same sense, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield has argued that with regular force strength declining, more emphasis should be placed on the reserves rather than less.

Mr. Cadieux disagrees. The old idea of general mobilization of the reserves in a time of emergency is "not on" any more, he maintains. It's been replaced by the concept of forces in being—trained men pre-selected to step into designated positions in the regular forces should war break out.

Mr. Legault and others argue that slashing the reserves will adversely affect the high school cadet movement, which is to be maintained at the present strength of 100,000 cadets. The cadets, they say, are heavily dependent on the reserves for instructors, transport and other facilities.

A defence department spokesman says that, in fact, the air force and navy cadets already operate quite independently of the reserves, and a move is afoot to give army cadets the same capability.

Though the proposed cut in the reserves probably will affect nearly all parts of Canada in some degree, the negative reaction from voters has by no means been universal.

For example, two British Columbia MPs, Harold Winch (NDP—Vancouver East) and Bruce Howard (L—Okanagan-Boundary), say they have received no mail on the subject.

Train Pushes Britain

By MERLE SECREST

WASHINGTON (WP) —When the Flying Scotsman goes by, people still stand and wave and some have tears in their eyes.

"There is an awful lot of sentiment attached to this locomotive. It's hard to explain until you have actually been in the cab and experienced the movement, the feeling of it coming alive.

"One gets very attached to it."

With this classic understatement, Alan Pegler, a British millionaire industrialist, attempted to explain why he saved the Flying Scotsman, a steam engine, from certain destruction by buying it from the British Railways a few years ago.

The locomotive, built in 1922 to run non-stop from London to Edinburgh as a crack passenger train, will be seen in the U.S. for the first time next month.

Promote Trade

It is at the moment in mid-Atlantic, on board the Cunard liner Saxonia, en route to Boston. It arrives there next week and leaves Oct. 8 on a 2,200-mile journey to 12 U.S. cities. It will travel with nine cars to promote British trade, customs and culture; from pottery and pubs to the Royal Shakespeare Company.

Pegler, a brisk, cheerful businessman with the kind of passion for speed records that distinguishes the confirmed railway enthusiast, is here preparing the way for the tour.

He said that the Flying Scotsman inaugurated the first non-stop service from London to Edinburgh, a distance of 393 miles, in eight hours and 15 minutes.

Pegler said he has always wanted to bring the Flying Scotsman to the U.S.

Costs High

"But when I investigated the idea three years ago, it was clear that the cost of bringing it here was beyond one man's pocket."

So he hit on the idea of using the train to promote British exports and won British government approval. Along with special exhibition cars, the train will pull the two Edwardian Royal Pullman coaches used by Prime Minister Churchill and Gen. Eisenhower dufing the Second world war and a glass-walled observation car that is being converted into an Edwardian pub. On board will be John Spencer Churchill, nephew of the late prime minister, and Pipe-Major Bob Crabb, personal bagpiper to Queen Elizabeth II.

Pegler is not surprised that American trains have lost the battle with planes because the distances are so enormous here.

"When I was on the British Railways board, I was the only member who was interested in passenger trains. They were all saying that the money was in freight."

Short Runs

In recent years, trains in Britain and the continent have begun to concentrate again on fast passenger traffic. Pegler thinks that American trains could follow suit and could compete successfully with planes for short runs, such as that between New York and Washington.

He has nothing but praise for the Metroliner and is delighted that it is inaugurating hourly service the same weekend that the Flying Scotsman arrives in Washington.

Wherever goes the Flying Scotsman Pegler will be in his favorite spot, in the engine cab. That's where he will be for next month, every mile of the way.

LSD Victim Improving

Police said the small child thrashed, screamed and, at times, beat her frail body with her small fists after being brought to the hospital Tuesday morning by her sobbing mother.

The mother said the toddler had swallowed at least one yellow pill that "a friend must have dropped on the floor."

Love's Labors Resurrected

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Retired Executives Can Aid Public

By AB KENT

A hue and cry for REBs who have infiltrated Greater Victoria's way of gracious living was launched today, but their surrender is expected to be voluntary.

They will be rewarded with labors of love.

REBs are senior corporate officers, directors and executives from a wide range of business, industrial and financial pursuits who have come to Victoria in retirement, and one of them—Norman E. Horton—is seeking them out.

He wants to enlist them as members of a Retired Executives Bureau, a unique voluntary agency of Victoria Chamber of Commerce. They would form a permanent committee of superior persons expert in their fields and capable of lending their talent to worthwhile local undertakings.

●

But since the Chamber has no money for such services, and because they would in any case be directed toward the public interest, the members would work for love, said Horton.

Recently, Horton told chamber directors he wrote to Ottawa, Toronto, Montreal and Washington endeavoring to track down similar undertakings and could find none.

The only ones nearly alike were commercial consulting firms of government-sponsored agencies.

Horton said REB ideally would contribute on a part-time basis to feasibility studies, project surveys, creative advisory services, economic analyses, advance ideas for community betterment and offer research aid to chamber committees.

There will be no "superstructure" of management and staff to co-ordinate the bureau, which will operate through the chamber office, Horton said.

NORMAN E. HORTON
. . . leads hue and cry

Members must be bona fide retired, of senior status with professional background or member of an accredited professional society and of independent means. The bureau will not act as an employment agency, Horton said.

Of the estimated 900 retired executives in the capital region, Horton expects about half will be unable to work for the bureau because of health and others will be from less than senior positions.

The volunteers will be screened for cataloguing into financial, engineering, executive and other groups according to their background.

"These men represent a wealth of knowledge, experience and ability, which in many of them is stagnating at present," Horton said, explaining his campaign to find senior talent.

"Once they have surfaced, we will contact them and ask them to complete a questionnaire."

Horton gave a careful assurance:

"We must not usurp the functions of management consulting firms."

If a small business asks for expert help, for instance, the bureau will explore its problems and if it is solvent a course of action will be recommended, possibly through the services of a professional consultant.

If there are no funds for this, the bureau would follow through "with our own expert help," Horton explained.

●

He said age in only relative in considering the man.

"Age is chronological; it's outlook that counts."

Horton himself is an example of an active, concerned individual with organizing ability who promised himself at the age of 30 he would retire at a certain point. That time arrived in 1958 when he sold out Cole Furniture Manufacturing Co. and Ingersoll Casket Co., of Ingersoll, Ont. after having business interests in Montreal, Toronto, New York and Detroit.

For three solid years he and his wife travelled, always on the lookout for a place to settle.

St. Joseph's Gets 50-Bed Prefab Unit

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark has verbally approved a $400,000 cash program to provide 50 progressive-care beds in a prefabricated structure at St. Joseph's Hospital.

But Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen and Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis wish he would put it in writing.

Stephen told the Capital Region Hospital District Board Wednesday that Loffmark Tuesday promised instant approval of the 50 beds for St. Joseph's to alleviate the waiting list at that hospital.

"I asked him if he would put that in writing but he, for his own reasons, declined to do so," said Stephen.

Curtis said he found Loffmark's position "curious and troubling."

"There is more than one municipality represented here where grave trouble has resulted from other ministers refusing to put things into print."

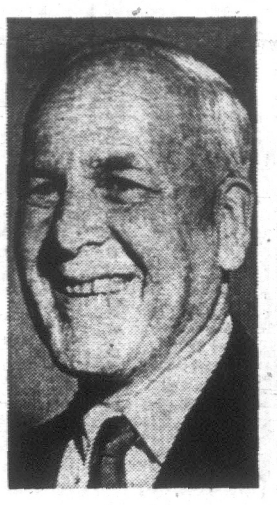

Despite the nervousness about verbal commitment, the board approved a $10,000 expenditure to permit planning for the 50 beds.

The beds will be used to cut down the time spent by patients in the more expensive acute-care beds. Progressive-care beds cost only a third as much as acute-care facilities.

Savage Plunges Into Mayoralty Against Baird

The possibility of Ald. Robert Baird being handed the Victoria mayoralty by acclamation in December disappeared this morning with the entry of Ald. Clyde Savage into the race.

The 61-year-old Savage, a four-year veteran on city council, said there was definitely a "clear-cut choice" between himself and the outspoken Baird, 63, a council member for six years.

SAVAGE
. . . divergent views

"I've heard rumors that others may enter the race as well," said Savage.

"Alderman Baird and I differ quite extensively on many things," he said.

STEPHEN OUT

Baird, in June, announced that he would be a mayoralty candidate if Mayor Hugh Stephen decided to step down.

Stephen has stated publicly several times that he will not seek re-election.

Savage believes he will have Stephen's support in the coming campaign.

"I've worked closely with the mayor for several years and I am sure he will support my candidacy," he said.

Savage said he decided to "accept the challenge" after being approached in recent months by many concerned citizens, asking him to run.

He ran unsuccessfully for mayor against Stephen, in 1966.

Savage said by trimming the frills from public expenditures "there is no question that we can hold the tax line, if not reduce it.

"We're coming into a very important period in our development," he said.

"We will be faced with programs during the next few years that will cost millions of dollars — sewers, hospitals, pollution control, urban transit, Wharf Street urban renewal and many others.

"It is imperative that the next mayor have the ability to see that reason and stability prevail in his council in order to deal with these programs."

A native Victorian and a retired druggist, Savage said he would outline his policies in detail during the campaign.

FAVORS AMALGAMATION

He and Baird agree that there should be amalgamation of the four Greater Victoria municipalities and that capital spending must be concerned with essential services during the next five years.

On many other issues their viewpoints diverge, however. While Savage was chairman of council's youth services committee and promoted youth programs, Baird has carried on a running battle with some youth organizations.

This year he battled unsuccessfully against a $1,000 council grant to Cool-Aid which operates a youth hostel. Baird charged "immoral conduct" on the part of young people who came to the hostel.

Savage was a supporter of the grant.

Baird and Savage both feel the city should not be involved financially with a new convention centre in Victoria.

Savage said today the convention centre is not a dead issue however. He predicted that in 1970 a convention centre would be built "without any expense to the taxpayers."

"This is an important election and with changes on council teamwork is essential in order to complete programs such as swimming pool, convention centre and the capital budget."

Soldiers Grappling For Rifleman's Body

Soldiers from the Esquimalt-based Queen's Own Rifles battalion today are searching the rain-swollen Sooke River for a young member of their battalion missing and presumed drowned in a training exercise Wednesday.

RCMP from the Sooke detachment have joined the search for Rfmn. Harold Wayne George, 19, of Vancouver, missing since the rubber boat he was travelling in capsized in fast water.

Two other riflemen were injured in the incident, described as a routine training exercise, when one of four rubber boats, carrying nine men each down the river, capsized and a second swamped.

Rfmn. J. G. Headrick, 18, was taken to hospital at CFB Esquimalt with leg injuries. Rfmn. R. Weeks, 22, is in Royal Jubilee Hospital with head injuries.

Two other soldiers were examined at hospital and later released.

36 MEN

Four 17-foot rubber boats carrying the 36 soldiers left the Leechtown area about 1 p.m. Wednesday in what was called a routine exercise in a year-round training program. The boats capsized in the fast-moving water three miles downstream about an hour later.

"There are 31 men from Queen's Own with the RCMP now searching with grappling hooks and they are going to stay until the body is found," said Capt. James Pass, battalion adjutant.

HEADED FOR SHORE

Capt. Pass said as the rubber boats approached a narrow section of the river the first tipped dumping its occupants in the water. The second and third boats managed to stop and head towards shore and the fourth filled with water attempting to get to shore.

The missing man was in the last boat and unaccounted for when the others reached shore.

An immediate search failed to locate George and messengers were sent for help.

TOO RISKY

"The river has deep potholes that are too dangerous to use divers, Pass added explaining the use of hooks.

A net was spread Wednesday night downstream when it became too dark to carry on the search.

Capt. Pass said the river was unseasonably fast as a result of the recent rains.

Major Derek Bamford of the QOR opens an inquiry today.

Byers' Case Hearing Postponed

Hearing of an application to the Supreme Court of British Columbia to remove a criminal trial from the provincial court of Judge J. A. Byers has been postponed until Monday at 11 a.m.

Scheduled for today, the hearing was postponed for "the convenience of all parties," a court official said.

The application was filed at Victoria Law Courts last week on behalf of Robert Edward Davies of 105 Island Highway.

Davies was charged last Aug. 28 with trafficking in LSD. Through his counsel, Robert A. Price, he pleaded not guilty and elected to be tried before a provincial court.

The application, in the form of two writs filed by Davies and Price, alleges that Judge Byers conducted the trial unfairly by denying Davies the right to have legal counsel. It asks that the trial be moved to another court.

Loan Application Called Answer To Critics of Big Sewer Project

Preliminary application for a $5.4 million loan from Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. for Saanich sewer construction in 1970 has been made by the Capital Regional District Board.

The board plans an $8.2 million sewer construction program.

Producing a schedule which showed the system, including an extended sewer outfall at Macaulay Point, completed by March 1971, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said it should answer critics of the district sewage program.

"This should give the lie to the suggestion that nothing is happening," said Curtis, chairman of the district sewer committee.

The Macaulay Point sewer is the only one in the area where an extended outfall without primary treatment plant has been permitted by the provincial government.

COMMITTEE STUDY

The board agreed to appoint a committee to make a before-and-after pollution study of the effects of the extended outfall.

Members of the committee will include representatives of the Pollution Control Branch of the provincial government, the fisheries research station in Nanaimo, the University of Victoria, the Capital Regional District and consulting engineers responsible for the outfall design.

SAMPLING

The committee will carry out a sampling and surveillance program at Macaulay.

Coliform densities in shore waters, effects on fish, changes in marine ecology and possible deposition of sludge on the ocean bottom will be examined.

The board hopes the Macaulay Point outfall proves successful, eliminating the need for expensive primary treatment plants at three other outfall locations in the Greater Victoria area.

PANHANDLE PROJECT

The board also agreed to finance a $167,000 sewer program for the Panhandle area of Esquimalt.

The district was asked to finance the program because of Esquimalt's difficulty selling debentures.

Esquimalt council, after the board's approval Wendesday, held a special meeting to give first reading to the local improvement bylaw for the sewer.

$3,200 an Acre Too High—Frampton

A price tag of $3,200 an acre for parkland adjacent to Beaver Lake drew an objection Wednesday from Victoria Alderman Percy Frampton.

The Capital Regional District Board approved the purchase, for $91,500, of 28.6 acres south and southwest of Beaver Lake as an addition to Beaver-Elk Lake park.

"That seems a very high price to pay for parkland," said Frampton.

"Why do we have to spend this much money?"

Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich replied that any land close to lakes within the capital region can be expected to carry a stiff price tag.

Arthur Mayse . . .

LEAVE THE ISLAND east coast behind at Royston or Courtenay, drive inland a few miles over good blacktop, and you arrive at the two Cumberlands. One remains stubbornly alive, even though the coal seams that brought it into being 117 years ago haven't been worked for a long time.

The other Cumberland, a Chinatown that once rated second only to San Francisco's, is no longer even a ghost town.

Except for a patchwork shack or two, no buildings now stand in the sheltered valley that became an expatriates' homeland to 3,000 Chinese. What's left lies underground, in a spade-pocked midden that may hold far more collectors' treasure than it has yet yielded to the diggers.

★

He lifts out wine jugs of graceful shape, their dark glaze flawless, their mouths unchipped. Then he produces a square soy-sauce pot of antique charm.

"I tell you," says Shendall, whose house overlooks the valley where Cumberland Chinatown flourished and died, "the whole place is a bonanza! You can dig all day and not find a thing. Or you may sink a spade and turn up a whole crate of opium lamps in perfect condition."

★

We met Shendall not long after we left the living Cumberland behind. Along the coast, the air had been no more than pleasantly warm, but on this flat below wooded slopes, the heat lay heavy, with scarce a breeze to stir it.

A gravelled lane turned in past a weathered grey shack. Someone had painted 'OCCUPIED' in large letters along its side . . . a warning aimed at over-enthusiastic treasure-hunters.

We had a hoe and a couple of spades in the car trunk, and we knew that digging fees of $2.50 a head were payable at a trailer parked down the lane.

But the trailer, occupied through the summer by the Islander who holds Chinatown's acres in lease from Weldwood of Canada, was gone. The valley was left to silence that a gush of water from a broken pipe only accentuated, and to its memories.

This until Shendall strolled down the lane. He identified himself as the site caretaker, collected a reduced late-season fee, and invited us to drop in on him later.

Where to dig?

Well, almost anywhere, he told us. One spot was as good as another, and you never knew where you'd turn something up.

He jogged off, leaving us to the heat and the silence.

We followed a steep little path down-slope past a cherry tree that could have been planted the best part of a century ago. Close by was an apple tree that looked no younger. Its apples had grown small with age, but the one I reached up for was still sound and sweet.

★

It was boggy in the hollow. Only the fruit trees and a few canted fence palings showed that men had once lived here. We found a spot of untouched grass between earth mounds piled by previous hunters. Under the grass were roots that fought the spade.

We were in situ, as the archaeologists describe their digs, and I for one would have preferred to be in a cool lake.

Something glinted in the first spade-load of dark earth. It was a shard of china, the colors in the pattern still bright as when the little bowl was whole and new. Strange to find a fragment so vivid and so delicate in this lost place!

★

We cut more roots and turned more earth. Win raked cautiously with the hoe, and turned up a tiny, patterned saucer intact save for a chip out of the rim.

It was then that we heard the voices, high-pitched and busily conversing, somewhere in the brush-tangles that had taken over a once-thriving community.

The muggy heat of the hollow seemed to cool for an instant: but the voices came no nearer.

So we returned to our digging. We were putting our heads together over a trove of three small pearl-white fantan counters, with the ghosts of vanished Chinatown forgotten, when a voice addressed us from close by.

I stiffened like a startled cat. But the owner of the voice was plump, smiling, and very much alive.

The old man was one of the last inhabitants of this other Cumberland. He had been showing a visitor where to find good apples, and it was them we heard. At least, I prefer to believe so.

We made one more find—a perfect bottle, no more than two inches long, of thick-walled glass with the shrivelled cork still inside.

This we took up to show Shendall. He pronounced it an opium bottle. Then he let us view finds that included a 10-gallon clay urn, and showed us the steel-tipped prod which sophisticated relic hunters use to locate and even identify buried objects.

★

Later, we worked the cork from the little bottle with a needle. It released scent that I haven't smelled since childhood. Oil of peppermint, to ease a tooth that ached its last very long ago.

Sometime that night, untouched by human hand, the phial shattered into three pieces. The result of exposure to air, perhaps. Or it could have been a judgment upon us.

Pickets Leave Old Bridge, Youngsters Back to School

Youngsters at Port Renfrew all went back to school today, and their parents stopped picketing the Harris Cove Bridge.

But they still want a new bridge, and will discuss it at a meeting at 8 tonight in the community hall.

There has been no response to an invitation to the meeting sent Wednesday to Highways Minister Wesley Black and his deputy, H. T. Miard. Herb Bruch, who represents the area in the legislature, was also invited, but he is reported to be in the Okanagan.

An inspection of the wooden single-lane bridge Wednesday by engineers from the highways department and B.C. Forest Products Ltd. satisfied picketing parents that some action might be taken.

The old bridge has been reinforced with wood planking, and BCFP trucks will obey the five-ton load limit.

Of Port Renfrew's 82 elementary school pupils, 25 returned to school Wednesday. The rest went back today.

High schoolers, who boycotted a bouncy, nauseating, 108-mile bus ride to Sooke, returned when the highways department graded 12 miles of the West Coast Road on Wednesday.

YOUTH FACES ROBBERY CHARGE

Charged with robbery with violence, Robert J. Juneau, 19, formerly of Alberta, was remanded today without plea until Monday.

Bail was fixed at $1,500.

He is accused of knocking down and stealing the purse of 73-year-old Mrs. Florence Mary McDowell, Apt. 305-1130 Pandora Ave.

The elderly woman received bruises to her knee in the incident at Pandora and Cook Wednesday at 7 p.m.

A 14-year-old boy and 17-year-old girl are also being held in juvenile detention home in connection with the case.

Insured Income Real Necessity

(This is a service provided by the Times and by the Institute of Chartered Accountants of British Columbia.

By EDGAR A. DOWNEY, C.A.

Providing an adequate supply of income is one of the main objects of working for almost everyone in our economy. But too many people overlook the fact that their income needs to be continuous, as well as adequate, during their whole lifetime.

They do insure, and even over-insure, against premature death and then cannot afford to provide protection for loss of income by any cause other than death.

With the various hospital and medical insurance schemes in effect, the direct cost of long term sickness is covered for the majority of our population but the ordinary continuing living expenses are not.

The apartment rent or house mortgage payments, the family food and clothing costs, and all of the other day to day expenditures must still be met even though the principal income earner is out of action.

Some employers can and do provide a short term form of insurance for this by varying periods of sick-leave with full pay or part pay but few businesses can afford the cost of continuing to pay a sick employee indefinitely. Most sick-leave arrangements extend for a few months and rarely more than a year.

CRIPPLING

It is the very risk of continuing incapacity after a year, which is financially crippling, that is left unprotected. The short term sickness may consume a man's savings program but it is the long term or permanent loss of income which brings financial disaster.

The necessary insurance coverage is still relatively expensive but it can often be coupled with a life insurance policy, or arranged on a group insurance basis at prices which an ordinary man can pay.

Ironically when such insurance is purchased the amount of the coverage is often more than the actual requirment. It is not necessary to insure income from the first day of sickness. It is much more economical to hold a small savings reserve for minor misfortunes than to pay the extra premium to cover the high risk of being sick for a week with a cold.

CUTS PREMIUM

Generally the first few weeks, or months, or even a whole year can be left as the uninsured waiting period to obtain a substantial reduction of premium.

Then there is the factor that the total cash requirement for the insured income is much lower than the requirement for earned income. Firstly there is no income tax deduction to provide because such insurance benefits are not taxable. Then there is the often large factor of costs related to earning income, such as lunch and transportation, working clothes and grooming expenses, and the many other minor expenses which diminish or discontinue completely.

As a rule of thumb it is practical to get by in modest comfort on insured income of 40 to 60 per cent of earned income and it is wasteful to insure much more than this.

It is the very man who believes that he cannot afford to insure his income who really cannot afford not to insure it. He would likely be wiser to cut down on his life insurance premiums, if that is the only area he can reduce expenses, and spend the difference on income insurance.

4-DAY WEEK DRIVE URGED BY UNIONIST

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The steelworkers' union president, I. W. Abel, Wednesday urged an all-out labor campaign for a four-day week, declaring that automation will soon threaten the jobs of millions of Americans.

Industry already has the technical knowledge to replace assembly line workers with computers and the next economic downturn could permanently wipe out jobs on a massive scale, Abel said.

"I would suggest that we strive for a work week of four days with work-free weekends of three days," Abel said.

Costs Mount To Transport Alaska Oil

NEW YORK (AP) — The cost of transporting oil from the Alaskan North Slope to United States east coast markets is likely to be higher than originally estimated, Humble Oil and Refining Co. says.

Humble's icebreaking tanker Manhattan recently opened a route through the Northwest Passage which the company says would be commercially feasible for moving oil from the Slope, reported as having vast petroleum reserves.

W. T. Slick Jr., manager of Humble's supply department, told a meeting of directors of the National Petroleum Refiners Association in Washington that transportation costs of moving oil through the Northwest Passage to the east coast probably would be 90 cents to $1 a barrel.

Humble's earlier estimate was as low as 60 cents a barrel.

STILL BEST

Slick said the estimated icebreaker tanker transportation cost still would be well below three alternative means.

He estimated it would cost between $1.35 and $1.45 a barrel to move the oil either by a direct pipeline through Canada or through a route using accombination of transcontinental U.S. pipeline, conventional tankers and the Trans Alaska pipeline.

Shipping the oil by way of Panama would cost $1.50 to $1.60 a barrel, he said.

Earlier this month, oil companies paid a total of $900,000,000 to the state of Alaska for leases on the Slopes.

Facsimile Newspaper Developed

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese newspaper Ashai Shimbun has announced it has been licensed to transmit a facsimile newspaper into homes by radio for an experimental period of a year.

At the same time Asahi unveiled a new facsimile receiving set which it said could be supplied under mass production for $50 to $100. It was developed in co-operation with Toshiba Electric Co. and produces in five minutes a newspaper page 12½ by 18 inches on electrostatic recording paper.

Asahi and Toshiba Electric earlier developed a method of transmission utilizing the frequency modulation voice channel of television broadcasts. Authorities refused to license this on grounds that newspapers might eventually monopolize the television industry.

The new transmissions will use a five-kilowatt transmitter, broadcasting on 469.1 meghertz with a frequency band 200 kilo hertz wide.

Denis Humphries Named Director

One of seven directors named to the executive of the Society of Notaries Public of B.C. this week is Denis G. J. Humphries, of Victoria.

All the others are from Vancouver and the interior, including Vernon H. Hargreaves, president, of Vancouver.

The society ended its two-day annual meeting at Harrison Lake Wednesday after a program that included Victoria accountant Clifford Horwood speaking on changes in the Estate Tax Act.

Loblaw

Loblaw Co. Ltd. will show improved sales and net profits for the first six months of this current fiscal year, Chairman George C. Metcalfe told the annual meeting Tuesday.

He gave no figures, but in reply to a question from a shareholder he estimated first quarter earnings at about 19 cents a share. He said no comparison could be made with the previous quarter because the company has changed its year-end.

Bow Valley

Bow Valley Industries Ltd. had a net income of $707,390 during the three months ended Aug. 31, an increase of $214,161 from the same period in 1968.

The income was on a gross revenue of $10.68 million, up from 1968 when revenue was $6.9.

The increases in revenue came mostly from the operation of Wonderley and Kershaw Petrochemical Services Ltd. and Griffith Brothers Drilling Ltd.

EDP

EDP Data Centres Ltd., a Canadian computer service firm, and Tymshare Inc., of Palo Alto, the largest independent American computer time-sharing company, have agreed to link systems.

A new company, Tymshare Canada Ltd., will operate as a joint venture beginning next year enabling Canadian clients to have telephone access to more than a dozen computer centres across the continent. Service will be offered first in Toronto, later in the major cities of Canada.

Permit Sales

The Alberta government received $234,409 Tuesday in a sale of petroleum and natural gas permits for exploration of 13 parcels.

The highest price was $59,212 for 23,040 acres northwest of the Bonnyville region 125 miles northeast of Edmonton. The successful bidders were Whitehall Canadian Oils Ltd., Northern Development Co. Ltd. and Wintershall Oil of Canada Ltd.

Syracuse Oils Ltd., Kanata Exploration Co., and Ireton Petroleums Ltd. paid $50,250 for 12,160 acres, also in the Bonnyville region.

Newsprint Price Hiked By Bowater

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Bowater Paper Corp. announced Wednesday it would increase its newsprint prices to $152 a ton effective Jan. 1. Most competitors took a "we are studying it" stance.

If the other major competitors follow Bowater, it would mark the third general increase in two years. Prices were raised $3 across the board in 1967. Earlier this year, prices were upped again with the east paying $1 a ton less.

Bowater eliminated the differential Wednesday by hiking prices $5 in the east and $4 in the other markets.

In Montreal, Domtar Pulp and Paper Products Ltd., a Domtar Ltd. subsidiary, said the Bowater move was unexpected but reserved further comment.

Canadian International Paper Co., an International Paper Co. subsidiary, said there was justification for another newsprint price increase and said it was studying the Bowater move. The company said prices have risen substantially since the last increase.

While not in the eastern market, Crown Zellerbach said "we are subject to the same heavy cost pressures in our western market." A spokesman in San Francisco said the company was studying the price situation carefully.

U.S. OIL INDUSTRY

Tax Allowance Will Be Reduced

By CARROLL KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Nixon will accept a congressional decision to cut the 27½ per cent depletion allowance for the oil industry to 20 per cent although he favors the higher figure, the White House said Wednesday.

At the end of a day in which the administration appeared to be divided on the issue, White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler explained the president's position.

The evidence was clear that the president does not want a row over whether the tax allowance is to be 27½ or 20 per cent that could produce a deadlock on the tax reform bill.

The tempest developed early Wednesday when Harry S. Dent, deputy counsel to the president, was reported to have written a letter reversing a position secretary of the treasury David M. Kennedy took Sept. 4.

At that time, Kennedy told the senate finance committee that the administration would go along with the provision in the house tax reform bill cutting the allowance from 27½ to 20 per cent.

The oil industry was much upset by the Kennedy statement, which seemed to be in direct contradiction of a Nixon campaign pledge to support the 27½ per cent allowance.

"The president will abide by the judgment of Congress," Ziegler added when pressed as to whether the administration would attempt in the senate to change the house figure.

"The secretary will make clear" the administration's support of the 27½ per cent figure, Ziegler said. But Ziegler said that "the president will abide by the judgment of Congress. He feels that tax reform is of the highest priority."

Oil Industry Expands Search For Riches in Offshore Waters

By WALTER KREVENCHUK

CALGARY (CP) — The oil industry is expanding its search for the billions of barrels of crude oil geologists believe lie beneath Canada's offshore waters, although it has spent 10 years and $170,000,000 with no hint of a commercial discovery.

The quickening exploration pace indicates the industry is willing to spend the $1,000,000,000 that one marine geologist has estimated it will take to obtain a reasonable evaluation of offshore petroleum potential.

Off the eastern coast alone, a study by the Canadian Petroleum Association early this year projected ultimate oil reserves of 56,000,000,000 barrels in an area of 900,000 square miles.

Mobil Oil Canada Ltd. launched the petroleum hunt in 1959 when it grabbed the first offshore permits—covering 1,000,000 acres on the Grand Banks off Newfoundland and off Nova Scotia near Sable Island.

Within the next 10 years, dozens of firms had spread into the Atlantic, Pacific and Arctic oceans, Hudson Bay and the Great Lakes, with permits covering almost 500,000,000 acres.

All Were Dry

Seventeen offshore wells have been drilled—all dry, although two ran into gas "shows."

Shell Canada Ltd. drilled 14 wildcat wells in two years off the British Columbia coast, but wrapped up the Pacific exploration program last May.

"Exploratory efforts were not encouraging," David W. Smith of Calgary, manager of offshore exploration and production, said in announcing Shell's intentions to move east.

Dr. B. R. Pelletier, head of the marine geology department at the federal government's Bedford Institute in Dartmouth, N.S., rates East Coast prospects excellent.

He said underwater seismic research has revealed the possibility of an oil-producing area off the East Coast "equivalent in size to that of the Prairie provinces."

But, he said, oil explorers will have to improve their drilling capabilities if they hope to tap the probable new field—located on the continental shelf from the southern tip of Nova Scotia to Baffin Island beyond the Arctic Circle.

"Our studies indicate that favorable horizons may be discovered at greater depths"—beyond the capacity of contemporary drilling methods.

Dr. Pelletier said that in an area off the East Coast equivalent to 40 per cent of the land area of Canada, about two-thirds is prospective territory for petroleum exploration.

Shell Moves In

Shell plans to move into the territory this year with two rigs, including a $10,000,000 mobile offshore drilling platform being built at Halifax by Commonwealth Southeastern Drilling Ltd.

Shell expects to spend about $10,000,000 to $12,000,000 a year on each rig, about 10 times the cost of a land operation. The cost includes the rental of the drilling rigs, supply vessels, helicopters and drilling supplies and equipment.

Commonwealth Southeastern will also build a vessel to drill for Amoco Canada Petroleum Co. Ltd. and Imperial Oil Enterprises Ltd. on the Grand Banks off Newfoundland next year.

Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Co. Ltd. and Canadian Fina Oil Ltd. plan to drill two deep tests offshore from Prince Edward Island next year and others are likely to start drilling in 1970 or 1971.

What happens if oil is found in an exploratory well?

Shell says the first step would be to evaluate the discovery, moving the drilling vessel to other locations in the area to determine the extent of the reservoir.

Reservoir Needed

The company said the most efficient and economical method of producing offshore wells is to abandon exploratory holes and construct a permanent platform as a central location from which a number of wells can be drilled and produced.

But Shell said a reservoir of at least 100,000,000 barrels would be needed before the costs of going into production could be justified.

Then comes the problem of marketing offshore oil.

"It will create quite an impact," said Lorne W. Frame, an adviser to Mobil. "It will upset existing marketing patterns."

Kept out of markets east of Montreal by the national oil policy and faced with United States import quotas, Canada's oil industry now is producing at only half its capacity.

There is also the question of ownership. With both the federal and provincial governments claiming offshore mineral rights, the industry played it safe and obtained work permits from both.

The Supreme Court of Canada last year ruled in favor of Ottawa, at least in the case of B.C.'s offshore claims, but Mobil is still paying bo th Nova Scotia and the federal government.

To ensure that a minimum amount of work is carried out, Nova Scotia charges 7½ cents an acre for the first three years, 15 cents for the next three years, 20 cents in the seventh year, 30 cents in the eighth year and 50 cents an acre in the ninth year. Federal charges are the same, except that the levy for the first three years is five cents an acre.

The money is paid in the form of promissory notes which are returned if the work is performed.

Then there are the natural obstacles.

In June, 1968, the drilling vessel Glomar Sirte was caught in a storm on the Grand Banks. High waves caused deck equipment to break loose and the drilling controls were damaged. Sea water entered the diesel system through a broken fuel connection and the Sirte lost its power briefly, but managed to limp into St. John's, Nfld., for repairs.

In July, this year, ice conditions delayed the first test in Hudson Bay, preventing a reinforced drilling barge from moving onto location near the centre of the bay.

Bennett Seeks Foreign Money For Industries

LONDON (CP)—Premier Bennett said Wednesday "the sky's the limit" in British and European investment funds he is seeking to keep his province booming.

"British Columbia is growing twice as fast as the rest of Canada and we need lots of capital to create additional employment for the people coming to us from other parts of Canada," he said in an interview.

Bennett, who arrived here Tuesday, said he is looking for private investment money here and in Germany and France, which he will visit in the next two weeks. He leaves for the continent Thursday.

He said he is looking particularly for development money for B.C.'s huge pulp and paper industry—for joint investment with the existing industry—and also for money to develop mines and secondary industries.

"We have excellent prospects for capital from any country," he said. "British Columbia now is the centre of the Pacific rim trading area and our trade with the east by the Panama Canal is coming along nicely. So is trade with Japan."

While in Europe, the premier said he plans to do some work in connection with his province's bid to have the 1976 Winter Olympics held on Mount Garibaldi. His first stop will be Austria, where he will talk with officials experienced in staging major winter events.

On his later visits to Germany and France, he said, he plans to talk with government officials, industrialists and financiers. He had similar discussions here.

The premier, just turned 69, was exuberant over last month's sweeping general election victory—the seventh for his Social Credit party.

'U.S. Would Dispute Arctic Sovereignty'

OTTAWA (CP) — The United States wants unrestricted freedom of navigation through the Northwest Passage, a Canadian MP just returned from Washington said Wednesday.

Michael Forrestall PC—Dartmouth - Halifax East) said U.S. government officials had told him the U.S. would contest any move by Canada to claim the waters of the Arctic archipelago as inland territorial waters.

If Canada made such a claim, Washington likely would take the issue to the World Court.

Otherwise, said Mr. Forrestall, Washington officials made it plain the U.S. has no intention of disputing Canadian sovereignty in the Arctic.

They likewise did not intend to contest Canada's ownership of minerals that might be found in the Arctic seabed.

At the same time, they felt it was time for a new law-of-the-sea conference to thrash out such questions as ownership of seabed resources and responsibility for navigation aids and pollution control in areas such as the Arctic.

Mr. Forrestall was one of a group of Canadian MPs who visited Washington at the expense of the U.S. government and had private, informal talks with high officials of the Nixon administration.

Nigeria—Once War Over—Ready to Slice Juicy Money Pie

By JIM HOAGLAND

LAGOS, Nigeria (WP) — Nigeria's planners and administrators are happily wrangling over the carving up of the juicy financial pie they expect the country to produce once the civil war with Biafra ends.

Despite the debilitating war, now in its third year, the Nigerian economy shows a buoyancy that most African countries cannot obtain even in the best of times.

Oil Boom

There are troublesome points of stress. But over-all, Nigeria's economists have dampened a classical inflationary situation, and they have done so with a deftness that draws the admiration of American planners faced with the same problems.

Through skillfull manipulation of import restrictions and currency controls, the Nigerian planners have pulled the industrial output back to the pre-war level.

Agriculture has continued a slow but steady climb. And Nigeria looks forward to an oil boom that will make it the Libya of the tropics.

"Before the war, we never knew how rich the country really was," says Allison Ayida, the top civil servant in the Ministry for Economic Development.

"Now we face challenging political decisions on what to do with our resources."

Ayida identified the major problems as the division of the nation's expanding revenue among the 12 states that will make up the federation, and the reconstruction of war-ravaged areas in the east.

Both problems assume, as does all official Nigerian thinking that Nigeria will win the war and bring Biafra back into the federation as the twelfth state.

If it does succeed militarily in its quest for unity, Nigeria will then have to turn to political union, which may be an even more difficult problem.

Revenue allocation — and especially the splitting up of the $1.7 billion that oil production is expected to bring Nigeria in the next five years — will be one of the key factors in building a strong federation, a high-level government committee pointed out recently in a report that has not been made public.

The committee, according to sources who have seen the report, recommended a strong federal role, and budget, in areas such as higher education and industrial research.

Realist

It also plumped for equal sharing among the 12 states of most of the oil revenue. Both of these provisions would have meant financial losses for at least six of the eleven states who considered the report, and so it was defeated. A compromise is reportedly now being sought.

Most Nigerian officials discuss the reconstruction of the war areas in vague, optimistic terms. But Ayida, who is permanent secretary of his ministry, seems to be more of a realist.

"Again, this is primarily a political problem" he said, glancing out the window of his 23rd floor office." "The situation will be somewhat similiar to Europe's after the Second World War.

"There you had the defeated country, Germany, being rebuilt while the victors, England and France, went into decline.

"There have been areas here — like Maiduguri and Ibadan — that have been unable to get foreign exchange to repair roads because of the war.

"Now, do we ask them to wait while we rebuild the area that seceded? Are they going to ask, 'Do we have to secede to get help?' These are the kinds of problems we have to think very clearly about," Ayida said.

The war is estimated to be costing Nigeria at least $250 million a year, and it has forced Nigeria to plow almost all of its foreign exchange into buying arms.

Paid Cash

The Nigerians apparently have paid cash for their hardware, mostly British and Russian, and have almost no arms debts. A study of balance of payments estimates indicates that around $105 million flowed out of Nigeria last year for war costs.

The figure will be higher this year. Heavy arms buying in the past few months, plus a seasonal slump in exports, has drained the country's foreign reserves to a dangerously low level. The foreign exchange position is unlikely to improve until the end of the year, as exports pick up again.

To preserve its convertible currency the nation has severely restricted the foreign-made goods its businessmen can import.

The summer's slump in foreign exchange caused the restricted list to jump from 97 items to 319. That has produced a voracious market for domestically produced consumer goods such as processed food, beer and whiskey, and textiles. (Until now, most of the cloth for the colorful robes that the world identifies with Africa has been made in places like Manchester and Holland.)

Six-Month Wait

"In many ways, this was a blessing to established industries, who have been able to expand," says Philip Asiodu, the permanent secretary for industry.

But, as Asiodu is quick to admit, this has not meant an even level of prosperity in Nigeria. Smaller industries have had rough going because of the import and currency restrictions, and almost no new small industries have been able to get off the ground.

The government takes the foreign currency it needs for the war and allots the small remainder to the nation's banks, which parcel it out to businessmen who want to buy materials and goods abroad.

The current waiting period for the foreign exchange is about six months after it is committed. With transport taking perhaps another two months, investment can be tied up for three quarters of a year.

And while consumer goods production booms, there has not been a corresponding upswing in capital goods production, seen by many as the key to solving the severe unemployment problem Nigeria will face if there is a rapid demobilization at war's end.

Finally, the transportation system is beginning to creak under the twin weight of prosperity and war. Lagos has had to take over almost all of the goods that flowed into and out of other ports closed down by the war. The harbor at Lagos is snarled, and there are lengthy delays in loading and unloading.

The railroads have been disrupted by the war, and little money has been put into repairing badly deteriorating roads. A businessman says it takes one of his trucks about two weeks to travel the 700 miles of road between Lagos and Kano.

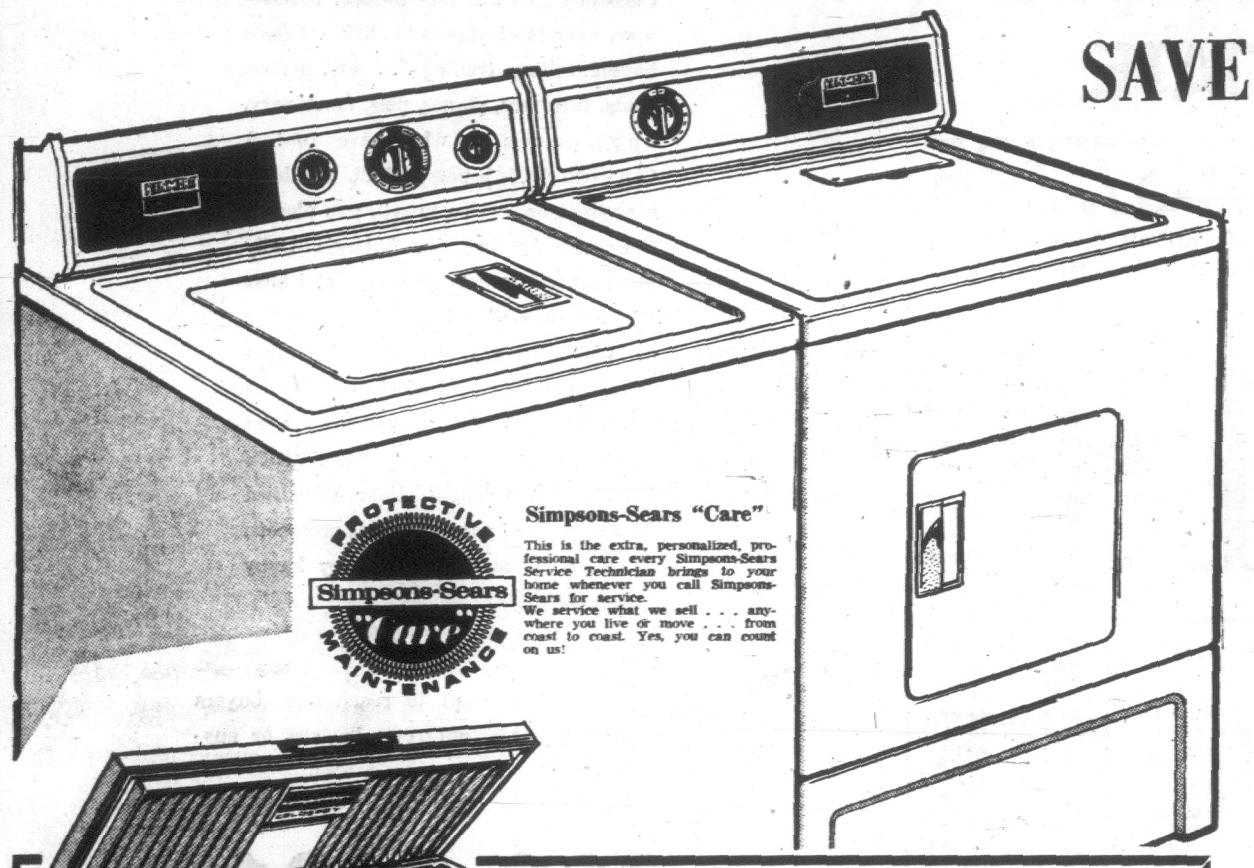

Most of all, it is the small middle class which is being severely pinched by the war. The import restrictions have caused shortages and large price increases on items as diverse as automobile tires and tomato paste, an essential part of much Nigerian cooking.

Panamanian Junta Curbing Graft

By ROBERT BERRELLEZ

PANAMA (AP) — As the story goes, one of Panama's military rulers disguised himself as a civilian and went out among the people.

In a downtown bar, he became friendly with another customer and finally asked him: "What do you think of the government?"

The other fellow at first refused to commit himself, saying he didn't discuss politics in bars. After some prodding, however, he relented and said, "OK, I'll tell you, but not here where we can be heard." After checking the men's room thoroughly to see that they were alone, the fellow whispered, "Frankly, I like the government."

A favorite at business lunches, the joke is supposed to illustrate the unpopularity of Panama's military regime, now 11 months in control of this miniscule republic.

Actually, of the four Latin American countries now under imposed military rule —Argentina, Brazil and Peru are the others—Panama's regime appears to be the only one with something of a popular base.

The consensus among businessmen and politicians is that the government has a sizable following among the lower classes. Since taking over last Oct. 11, the military bosses seem to have concentrated on wooing this sector.

A $45,000,000 public works program has widened job opportunities. The little folks say government offices and clinics are opening on time with full staffs.

"We no longer have to pay coimas to get attended," said a housewife. She means bribes.

"For once the law is being applied without discrimination," said an old cab driver, "even to the privileged rabiblanco." Rabiblanco, literally white tail, is the way the lower classes refer derogatorily to the wealthy.

Even at higher levels, among those opposed in principle to authoritarian rule and quick to censure excesses in dealing with political adversaries, there are kind words for some things the military bosses have done.

Official graft and corruption, believed to be among the worst in the hemisphere, have been sharply curbed. Streets are being repaired, many extended and widened and some new thoroughfares are under construction. This and the tightening of traffic regulations are easing urban problems. New schools, water and sewage systems, housing and electrification programs are under way here and in the interior.

Government policy aimed at buoying a sagging economy and arousing the confidence of investors has been praised as imaginative and positive. Less acceptable has been the government's emphasis on old-fashioned muscle rather than persuasion to curb opposition political activity. Newspapers

By enforcing old regulations, authorities got rid of some 3,000 National University students—and most of the political activists—who failed to maintain a C average or better. All students now are required to carry a minimum of study hours. Representation in university governing councils has been limited to the top 10 students.

A 10-foot fence surrounds the campus grounds, which are patrolled by a police force appointed and paid for by the university. After a few exploratory efforts at agitation drew sharp official responses, students at high schools and the university have been quiet.

Peat Can Wreck Roads

CAMPBELL RIVER — Roads and underground pipes should be built to avoid peat areas where possible, the annual convention of the Public Works Association was told today.

A 14-page paper by John Cowlin, assistant engineer in Saanich, and H. W. Nasmith, of R.C. Thurber and Associates, soils engineers, reviewed experiences in the municipality.

They said the most positive solution is to locate roads to avoid peat, which has little strength and very high moisture content.

"In many cases this will prove the most economical solution even if the length of the road is increased," they said.

A second alternative, for high-quality roads, is to remove the peat and replace it with granular fill. This reduces settlement of the road to a minimum.

"The last choice is to build the road directly on the peat using one of a number of techniques to minimize settlement but at the same time accepting the fact that settlement will occur," they said.

Discussing installation of underground pipes, for drainage, sewage and so on, Cowlin and Nasmith said it is advisable where practical to reroute the pipe to avoid the peat.

Where this was not possible, the pipe may be floated in the peat if grades are not critical provided precautions were taken. If grades were critical, the pipe should be rigidly supported.

Tighter Drug Checks At Border

SEATTLE (AP) — The U.S. customs service is making "a more intensive search" of traffic passing between Canada and the United States, district customs director Roy Peterson said here Wednesday.

Peterson said the closer scrutiny "has nothing to do with Operation Intercept," a search for narcotics and dangerous drugs at the U.S. border with Mexico.

"We will check more cars when traffic is light," Peterson said, "and that's exactly what's happening now." He said the traffic volume was so great during the summer that a close check could not be maintained.

The result of the recent intensification, he said, was confiscation of three ounces of marijuana Wednesday at Blaine, the main port between Vancouver and Seattle.

At Sumas, Peterson said, the service picked up a shipment of "several hundred pounds" of salmon taken illegally from the Fraser River in British Columbia.

The service also intercepted nine packages containing marijuana during the past two weeks, he said.

"We also get a little more booze," Peterson said; "that's the main ingredient between Canada and the United States."

He said vehicular traffic was moving freely without delays.

Operation Intercept, Peterson said, "is only on the Mexican border."

Earlier, Fred McMillan, port customs director at Blaine, said Operation Intercept, which caused a massive traffic jam at Tijuana, Mex., last weekend, went into force at Blaine Sunday.

"I'm not sure if the idea behind the thing is to catch any particular operator," Mr. McMillan said.

Recreation Issue Gets Referendum

NANAIMO — Regional organization of recreation will go to a referendum in the district of Nanaimo Oc. 18.

Municipal councils within the district may choose to join the referendum or accept the bylaw without a vote.

The referendum will ask ratepayers if they favor the regional board taking over recreation by setting up a regional commission to provide organization, staff and funds to member municipal recreation programs.

Although not stated in the referendum, it is understood the per capita cost would be $3. The necessary $148,000 per year would be raised by a one-mill increase in school tax assessment.

Nanaimo members of the regional board, Gertrude Hall and Ken Medland, said their council would probably accept the bylaw without a referendum.

Barn Blaze Kills 17 Show Horses

Maynard Casler, owner of the stable, estimated the value of the horses at more than $200,000. He said he could not put a figure on the cost of the barn and its contents.

PATIENT FANS FINALLY GET . . .

. . . CHANCE TO CELEBRATE

NEW YORK (AP) — For the last five years Karl Ehrhardt of New York has trudged to Shea Stadium on opening day, closing day and Friday nights with 70 signs under his arm.

But Wednesday night he only took 40.

"Tonight's special," he explained. "I left home the 30 signs I use to knock the Mets and took only the good ones . . . to celebrate."

It was the first time Ehrhardt, an advertising artist, and the thousands of Mets fans had a chance to celebrate. And what a celebration it was.

In the locker room it was bedlam as the Mets poured champagne after beating St. Louis Cardinals 6-0 and completing one of the most incredible turnabouts in sports history by clinching their first championship, the National League's East Division title.

But the real story still was on the field 30 minutes after the game had ended. It was there the fans, who had waited through seven incredibly bad years for this sudden windfall, celebrated.

More than the Mets themselves, this was a triumph for their fans. About 2,000 of the standing room only 56,587 present stormed onto the field shouting "We're No. 1." They sat on the outfield fences, walked on the dugout, climbed the scoreboard.

There were streamers, confetti, firecrackers and horns and wall-to-wall people raising their hands in a triumphant V-for-victory sign.

It took more than 300 policemen to clear the field with several arrests and numerous injuries, including broken arms and legs. One of the scoreboard climbers fell to the ground and was taken to hospital.

But this still was their night. They had cheered every batter, every play, and in the ninth inning, every pitch.

There was never a Mets crowd like this.

And of the hysterical mass swarming on the field, many others certainly had to be original Met fans who suffered through those first seven years with a team loved more for its bungling than its talent.

Those fans tried to steal every base off the field after the game, but, maybe as a reminder of old Mets, they missed first base.

PRETTY BUBBLES

Celebration is enjoyed by pitcher Nolan Ryan (left) and catcher Jerry Grote as champagne makes pretty bubbles for Mets in New York dressing-room following title-clinching triumph. (AP Wirephoto.)

Bill WALKER

Well, now that the Lions are back on the track, for isn't it so that Jackie Parker will take an undefeated record into Empire Stadium on Saturday night, how about some quickies.

Everybody's saying it: "If they don't soon put some teeth into the stick-swinging rule in hockey, someone's going to get killed."

True, and about time, and perhaps Harold Ballard, of the Toronto Maple Leafs, has the most solid suggestion of all.

Don't you dare believe it.

And although NHL president Clarence Campbell weaselled a bit when he first commented on the Ted Green incident in which Green was laid out by Wayne Maki, by saying "they're only letting off steam," NHL referee-in-chief Scotty Morrison didn't.

In his directive, Morrison said that a match penalty would be immediate for a stick swinger, not necessarily making contact, that suspension would follow, and would remain in effect until the case was reviewed.

That appears basic enough. Now all that Scotty needs is for the league governors to give him the backing his authority demands. Completely. There is no other way.

The players themselves want a rule that has some teeth with a bite in it.

That was evident here this week when new Western Hockey League president Gene Kinasewich warned them before Monday night's exhibition game between San Diego and Salt Lake City that a stick duel such as the Green-Maki affair, in which Green was seriously injured, would never be condoned in his league.

One of the players immediately challenged Kinasewich to make the rule so tough, it would hurt, and in effect said;

"Give us the directive, make it stick, and you'll have our complete co-operation."

For this is their livelihood, and perhaps their life. Sure, the worst hasn't happened yet. Let's be sensible. Why wait?

Kinasewich, for his part, said the league ruling will be issued shortly and will have the desired effect, because he personally will never condone such action

And more hockey. And why not take the $6 million that Vancouver has been asked to give to the NHL for the right to play in the big-time, add a few hundred thousand or so from the other Western Hockey League clubs, and go outlaw?

Sounds ridiculous, doesn't it? But don't think for a moment that it hasn't been bandied about, and if you want to get in on the conjecture, try these points for size:

Seattle, San Diego, Phoenix, Salt Lake City, Vancouver all have arenas that could accommodate NHL-size crowds. Portland has been a hockey hotbed for years. Denver, a question mark, is just back in the fold. Edmonton has a new complex on the drawing board that includes an ice palace.

Calgary's existing arena could be enlarged.

Mexico City can't be ruled out for any particular reason, and even Los Angeles and San Francisco might agree to play in their own bailliwick if things appeared lucrative enough.

Certainly if all the clubs concerned have to pay $6 million, or more, for the right to play with the big boys, then it's time someone took a second look.

No, we're not headed for the booby hatch. Not yet. Think of the economics, and think, too, just how thinly the hockey talent is going to be spread out with expansion.

And after all, the Stanley Cup is a challenge cup, isn't it? You don't have to belong to the NHL to win it.

●

And don't forget tonight's NBA pre-season game at the Arena between Los Angeles Lakers and Seattle Supersonics. Los Angeles may be king of the castle now, but the Sonics appear to have a sound program in hand and may, under coach Lenny Wilkens, have a little more going for them than has previously been indicated. See you there.

And I can't leave without expressing the complete shame felt, by all aboard, for our fishing guide of last Sunday in the VSIAA press-radio-TV executive derby in Saanich Inlet.

It wasn't so much that we didn't catch any fish. What else is new?

But, to the abject degredation of all fishing guides, the aforementioned Stan Williams was seen, following the post-derby ablutions, proudly carrying an eight-pound coho down his walk and into his abode.

For that larceny, he should be drummed out of the guild immediately. For I state here categorically that it was not his, if there ever was any doubt.

Beautiful, Beautiful, Beautiful

By The Associated Press

Those amazing, incredible, miraculous, implausable Mets today are No. 1.

The New Yorkers climaxed hitherto fruitless years in the National League Wednesday night by trouncing St. Louis Cardinals 6-0 to clinch the NL's Eastern Division title.

During their previous seven seasons, the Mets languished at or near the bottom of the league standings so it was little wonder 54,928 Shea Stadium fans joined the team in celebrations that lasted until the small hours of the morning.

Cries of "Beautiful . . . beautiful . . . beautiful" echoed through the Mets' dressing room as the players dumped bottle after bottle of champaigne on each other and anyone else who happened to be near.

"It's a great thing for the owners and the organization," said manager Gil Hodges, one of the original Mets during the fading days of his playing career. "I remember 1962 when the Mets won only 40 games. . . .

"We've got ours (the division title) now, and we'll just have to wait and see about the West."

Tony Gonzalez and the lowly San Diego Padres did their best to help give the Mets a post-season trip south, instead of west.

Gonzalez hammered a solo homer in the eighth inning to snap a 1-1 tie as surging Atlanta Braves won their sixth straight, a 2-1 conquest of Houston Astros.

LEAD BY 1½ GAMES

That, combined with the Padres' 3-2 win over second-place San Francisco, and Juan Marichal, gave the Braves a 1½-game lead over the Giants in the West Division chase.

Cincinnati Reds, meanwhile, remained just three games off the pace with a 7-2 victory over Los Angeles that knocked the Dodgers out of contention.

Chicago Cubs defeated Montreal Expos 6-3 in the only other game played. Philadelphia Phillies and Pittsburgh Pirates were postponed because of wet grounds at Pittsburgh.

Donn Clendenon slammed two homers and Ed Charles one while Gary Gentry pitched a four-hitter in blanking the Cards —the 34th victory in 44 games for the Mets, who climbed from 9½ back of Chicago during that span.

HODGES CALM

"In the spring I felt the club was an improved one and when a team is improved anything can happen," said Hodges. "But I never dreamed of this."

Hodges, who suffered a heart attack just a year and one day before the Mets' clincher, appeared calm amid the hysteria that prevailed in the Mets' dressing room.

"It's not that I'm not excited," he laughed. "I'm happy, I'm thrilled for them. But I'm a little older than they are. Take off about 25 years and I'd be running wild, too."

Steve Carlton, who struck out a modern major league record of 19 in his last start against the Mets, managed just one strikeout Wednesday night — and it was the only out he got.

TWO HIT HOMERS

Clendenon tagged him for a three-run homer and Charles slammed a two-run blast as the Mets exploded for five runs in the first inning.

Gonzalez's blast to the centre field bleachers broke up a tight pitching duel between the Braves Pat Jarvis, 12-11, who finished with a three-hitter, and Tom Griffin.

The Astros had grabbed a 1-0 lead in the first on Joe Morgan's 15th homer, but Atlanta came back in the second on Orlando Cepeda's walk and Bob Didier's double.

San Diego combined Ollie Brown's RBI double with a two-run error by outfielder Jim Ray Hart on a dropped fly ball for a three-run first inning in whipping the Giants for the second straight night.

JOE NAMATH RETURNS TO BACHELOR BUSINESS

BOSTON (AP)—Joe Namath, New York Jets star, who had to give up his interest in Bachelor's III, a New York night club, heads a group that won approval Wednesday of a liquor licence for a night spot in Boston.

A spokesman said the licence was issued to Namath; Bobby Van, who was associated in the New York place; Ray Abruzzese, former New York Jets player, and Jim Colclough, retired Boston Patriots player.

Derek Sanderson, of Boston Bruins, also was included in planning for the Boston outlet but was not named on the licence.

A spokesman said the club, again to be called Bachelor's III, will open next Wednesday.

Three Share Lead In Homer Derby

Harmon Killebrew has earned a rest. But he probably won't get one as long as Frank Howard and Reggie Jackson keep swinging their big bats.

Howard slammed his 47th home run Wednesday night in the opener of Washington Senators' 8-4, 7-4 doubleheader sweep over Detroit Tigers and tied Killebrew and Reggie Jackson for the major league lead.

Killebrew, still starting for Minnesota two days after the Twins' lock-up of the American League West Division title, went 0-for-4 in a 2-1, 10-inning victory over Kansas City Royals. Oakland's Jackson was 0-for-3 as the Athletics bowed to Chicago White Sox 2-1.

Baltimore Orioles, East Division champions, nipped Cleveland Indians 4-3 in 11 innings; Boston Red Sox edged New York Yankees 1-0 in 14 and California Angels topped Seattle Pilots 3-1 in other AL games.

Twins manager Billy Martin would prefer to rest Killebrew for the pennant play-off against the Orioles, but will continue to write his name on the lineup card while the home run crown is up for grabs.

Howard's bases-empty homer, a two-run shot by Bernie Allen and Ken McMullen's three runs batted in carried the Senators past Denny McLain, Detroit's 23-game winner, in the first game.

In the second game the Senators broke a 4-4 tie in the eighth on Del Unser's two-run triple off Mickey Lolich.

The White Sox slipped past Oakland on Bill Melton's two-run homer in the fourth inning and the four-hit pitching of Tommy John.

Brooks Robinson cracked a run-scoring double in the 11th at Cleveland, giving the Orioles their 107th victory—four short of the Indians' 1954 record. Tony Horton's ninth inning homer off Baltimore ace Mike Cuellar sent the game into overtime.

Walker Gets New Contract

HOUSTON (AP) — Manager Harry Walker and his coaches received 1970 contracts Wednesday after leading Houston Astros to the best season in their eight years.

With nine games to play, the Astros held a 78-75 record and were eliminated mathematically only Tuesday from contention in the National League's tight West Division pennant race. The old club record of 72 victories for a season was set in 1966 and equalled in 1968.

Cooper Receives OK For Clash With Ellis

LONDON (AP) — Henry Cooper, British heavyweight champion, has been declared fit after knee cartilage trouble and now will fight Jimmy Ellis of Louisville, Ky., for the American's piece of the world crown at London's indoor Wembley Stadium Nov. 1.

The fight originally was arranged for Sept. 27.

The ABC television network will telecast the fight live to the United States.

Ellis is recognized as world heavyweight champion by the World Boxing Association. Joe Frazier of Philadelphia is considered the champion in six American states and by some other countries.

The 35-year-old British champion was knocked out by Cassuis Clay in a world title fight in May, 1966.

Jake Rules Touchdown Was Illegal

TORONTO (CP) — Commissioner Jake Gaudaur of the the Canadian Football League ruled Thursday that officiating errors gave Montreal Alouettes an illegal touchdown in last Sunday's 41-35 Eastern Football Conference victory over Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

The game, which was not officially protested by Hamilton, will not be replayed for a number of reasons. It will stand in the CFL record books as a 41-35 victory for Montreal.

★ ★ ★

Gaudaur ruled, after studying game films for three days, that the Alouettes scored the first touchdown of the game on a fourth down although there are only three downs in Canadian football.

"In our continuous grading of officials . . . the number of mistakes . . . are taken into account when considering future officiating assignments," Gaudaur said.

Referee Jim Lysack, head linesman Floyd Cooper and downbox official Art Faguy were all involved in the incident.

'Conflict Over Facts' Delays Campbell Probe

By The Canadian Press

The Ted Green-Wayne Maki stick-swinging incident was left hanging indefinitely Wednesday by National Hockey League president Clarence Campbell.

Campbell said in Montreal "there is a conflict over facts" and he will wait until Green has recovered from head injuries inflicted in a stick-swinging duel with Maki of St. Louis Blues in Ottawa Sunday.

The league president said he wanted to hear Green's side of the story.

Green, a Boston Bruin defenceman, suffered a skull fracture. His condition Wednesday was reported by Ottawa hospital officials to be satisfactory.

Both players were ejected from the game, won by St. Louis 5-1.

Maki continues to play in the Blues' pre-season exhibition games and scored a goal Wednesday night in an 8-2 win over Oakland Seals at Sudbury.

PENGUINS EDGE STARS

In other games, Pittsburgh Penguins edged Minnesota North Stars 2-1 at North Bay, Ont., Chicago Black Hawks downed the Maple Leafs 4-1 at Toronto, Philadelphia Flyers played to a 2-2 tie with Quebec Aces, their American League farm club, at St. Georges de Beauce, Que., and Los Angeles Kings subdued their Springfield, Mass. AL farm club 6-2 at Barrie Ont.

The Kings also announced that goalie Wayne Rutledge will undergo surgery Friday in Toronto to remove calcium deposits from an upper leg muscle and will be out of action for several weeks.

In tonight's only game, the Black Hawks meet New York Rangers at Kitchener, Ont.

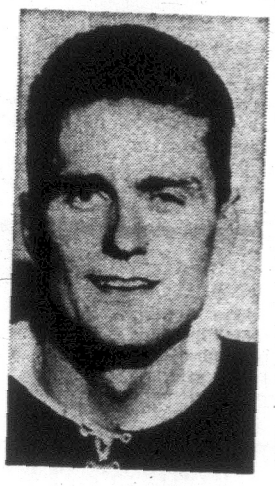

Earlier in the day, veteran Flyer defenceman Allan Stanley said he was retiring from pro hockey to devote full time to his hockey school at Fenelon Falls, Ont. The 43-year-old native of Timmins, Ont., was in the NHL for 21 seasons, second in longevity to Detroit's Gordie Howe.

Stanley's career, which included three Stanley Cup championship teams, had stops in New York, Chicago, Boston and Toronto.

Stanley collected 100 goals and 333 assists in regular-season play while picking up 792 minutes in penalties.

He appeared in 109 playoff games and scored seven goals and assisted in 36 others. Stanley also played on three NHL all-star teams.

Earlier he had been offred the position as coach of Quebec Aces of the American Hockey League — Philadelphia's farm team — but declined the job which subsequently went to Walter Turk Broda.

Season Ended For Cranmer

CALGARY (CP)—Dave Cranmer, a halfback for the Calgary Stampeders, is to undergo surgery Friday for chest injuries and will be out of action for the rest of the season.

General manager Rogers Lehew said Cranmer, rookie of the year in the Western Football Conference last season, would "definitely be out for the rest of the year."

Cranmer was injured in a pile-up when he apparently was hit by a knee.

Brewer Slight Choice For Alcan Golf Title

PORTLAND, Ore (CP) — Bob Cox of Richmond, is one of 24 golfers who started today in the Alcan Golfer of the Year tournament which offers a massive purse of $55,000 for first place.

One of the newest international competitions, the tournament which ends Sunday, is being played at the 6541-yard, par-72 Portland Golf and Country Club course.

The tournament, initiated in Scotland in 1967, was played in England last year.

Gay Brewer of Louisville, Ky., has won the two previous tournaments and is a mild favorite to win it again.

During practice rounds earlier this week the players hoped good weather would help dry the course, but showers are forecast for three days of the four-day, 72-hole tournament.

Nearly five inches of rain have fallen during the last few days and Bill Casper, one of the U.S. competitors, said Wednesday it will be a "miracle if the course is dried out" by the time the tourney starts.

Casper is rated as Brewer's chief rival in the tourney, but weather conditions could be a deciding factor.

The U.S. is represented by 13 golfers, including Gene Littler, while Britain is represented by six.

EDMONTON (CP)—The Alberta government has postponed indefinitely the first part of the 1969 pheasant and Hungarian partridge season pending further tests on levels of mercury found in the birds. Dr. J. Donovan Ross, minister of lands and forests said Wednesday.

Further consideration may have to be given to the advisability of going ahead with the latter part of the season, said the minister.

TO REVIEW REPORTS

The season was to have run from Oct. 10 to Dec. 6 in most districts but hunting will not be allowed until Nov. 1, Dr. Ross said after a Social Credit caucus meeting.

He said cancellation of the Oct. 10 to Oct. 30 period will give the government time to receive and review reports on 70 to 80 birds taken recently for analysis.

During the early part of the season, hunters would have been allowed to take three pheasant and 10 Hungarian partridge each day. On Nov. 1, the bag limit for pheasant increases to five a day.

SOME BIRDS UNAFFECTED

Several parts of the province have been open to hunting for about 10 days, but birds in these areas were not affected.

It is believed seed grain treated against fungi and certain worms may have been responsible for the high mercury levels. Results of an early summer survey indicated mercury build-up in the flesh of the game birds was four to 10 times higher than the level considered safe by the World Health Organization.

Dr. Ross said results of the latest survey should be known in two to four weeks. Meantime, the government is taking a province-wide sampling of pheasant and Hungarian partridge.

In Lethbridge Wednesday, Jack Lakie, an official of the city's chamber of commerce said he wondered if the government was not "being a little premature" in closing the early part of the season.

Don't Forget Those Rookies

Eyes of Victoria fans will undoubtedly be on the stars of the National Basketball Association at Memorial Arena tonight, but don't be surprised if some of the unheralded rookies stir up the most excitement.

When Los Angeles Lakers and Seattle Supersonics step out on the Memorial Arena floor at 8 p.m. for the first pre-season exhibition clash for both clubs, some of pro basketball's most famous performers will be on view.

Scheduled to work with the Lakers, for instance, are the talented and touted Wilt Chamberlain, Elgin Baylor and Jerry West.

Lining up with the Sonics will be people like all-star guard Lenny Wilkens, who will be making his debut as a pro hoop coach; center Bob Rule, fourth in NBA scoring last season; forward Tom Meschery; Art Harris, member of last season's all-rookie team, and Bob Boozer, a six-nine forward.

While the established stars continue working themselves into condition for the coming season, a flock of tall and eager graduates from the collegiate ranks will be bidding for recognition, hoping to muscle into the pro hoop business.

Both clubs are trying out several college stars and those rookies are the ones who could steal tonight's spotlight.

Wests Whip Labatts 5-1 To Gain Final

Victoria West of the Victoria and District Soccer League's first division advanced to the McGavin Cup final Wednesday by downing second-division Labatts 5-1 in Royal Athletic Park.

Labs jolted Wests on a play from the opening kickoff when Onelio Asquini rifled a 45-yard shot into the net.

Dockers Surprise Defending Champs

Esquimalt Dockers, traditionally also-rans in the Inter-High School Soccer League, came up with a few surprises Wednesday to take over the league lead.

Dockers clubbed host and defending-champion Mount View Hornets 2-0 on second-half goals by Doug Casperson to move one point ahead of the Hornets and Victoria Tyees.

Coached by Russ Ball, former Pacific Coast League player, Dockers were given strong checking games by George Pakos and Rick Saby on Hornet stars Bob Bolitho and Dan Green.

Stu Taylor paced Tyees with three goals while double efforts were turned in by Rob Williams and Ian Gibson. Bob Bjornason counted the other tally.

Oak Bay clouted visiting Belmont 8-1 to move into a fourth-place tie with idle Claremont.

BUT BOTANIST OPTIMISTIC

Poisoning of Land, Water Will Continue for Decades

By BOB MITCHELL

The botanist was once seen as an absent-minded scholar who spent much of his time collecting leaves of exotic plants.

And botany was seen as an interesting and harmless science — one that could never expect to lay claim to the prestige of, say, nuclear physics, or the money that went with the prestige.

But that was before the word "pollution" became part of the layman's vocabulary and before a biologist called Paul Erlich predicted world famines for the 1980s.

Last week as classes began at the University of Victoria Dr. Alan Austin, a bearded little Welsh biologist who speaks incredibly quickly, asked students in a second-year botony class to write down why they were taking the course.

'Law of Land'

One student wrote:

"Today when disaster is staring mankind in the face, people in the science of botany . . . must stand now. The science must come out of the Ivory Towers and become the law of the land for the sake of survival."

Another student, a future physician who signed himself MD, said he was taking botany only because he was required to.

"He's either forgotten or he doesn't know that the science of pharmacology is still largely dependent on the pharmaceutical herbs," said Dr. Austin.

"Mind you, I don't think botany is the key to man's survival. I think that may lie more in the field of political science."

As time runs out for the world's hungry millions, and the news media multiply pessimistic reports of pollution, Austin is decidedly optimistic.

Optimistic

"It stands to reason if we can put a man on the moon, then surely we have the technological know-how to solve our pollution and food-shortage problems — and we do.

"I'm optimistic — perhaps because I'm involved at the bottom end of the pollution scale, because I can see how it's affecting life in its minutest forms.

"And I'm optimistic because botanists are playing a major part in understanding pollution. The only thing we have to be pessimistic about is the realization we can't do all we would like to do."

Optimism, yes. But optimism tempered by the knowledge that the world food shortage probably won't be solved before the great famines have run their course; that poisoning of the earth's water, soil and atmosphere will continue for decades.

Dr. Austin says the main impetus for control of pollution and salvation for the ravaged planet will come through education — engendering in children a simple respect for other living organisms.

He quoted Campbell River judge and naturalist Roderick Haig-Brown:

"You've got to have a feeling for the fish you catch, you've got to have a feeling for the fir tree — you've even got to have a feeling for the weed you pull out of the ground.

Fertilizer

"Look at this," said Austin, grabbing a book from his desk. "I think it's the hottest thing between two covers."

It was entitled "The Subversive Science," a collection of essays by various writers leading to a general understanding of ecology.

"This is the kind of book that might lead people to think automobiles should be banned from the highways of California, or teach that food can be grown from pools of sewage."

A study in California recently showed as much as 20 tons per acre of dryweight algae can be grown annually on pools of sewage. The algae is used in fertilizer and poultry and fish food.

Six thousand scientists attended the International Botanical Congress in Seattle last month, and their prime concern was how to provide enough food for the world between now and the end of the century.

Water's Wealth

Some believe the solution lies in increasing productivity of land already under cultivation. Others, like Austin, believe governments should co-ordinate the efforts of scientists and industry in long-range development of aquaculture — harvesting the wealth of coastal waters.

"We've got things more or less tied down on the earth's surface — in dirt, that is. Now we've got to look to aquaculture.

"Things like high-yield varieties of wheat are fine, but they depend on a lot of fertilizer, and in a country like India the supply of fertilizer is susceptbile to political controls.

"In a war the supply might be cut off, then you would have to revert to growing native varieties. But you'd be faced with the prospect of feeding more people who'd been born or kept alive under the false economy of the high-yield wheat."

The British Columbia coastline with its islands and innumerable inlets has one of the richest and most easily harvestable seaweed crops in the world.

But before harvesting of marine plants and animals can develop into a viable industry immense amounts of data will have to be collected: information on growth cycles, growth rates, seed production, affects of pollution and uses in industry.

Hence the need for a major marine laboratory on the B.C. coast. A big stumbling block is the total lack of government co-ordination of research now taking place in lakes and coastal waters.

Since 1965 Uvic biology students have been working with Austin to collect data on the effects of mine tailings dumped into Buttle Lake by Western Mines Ltd. But the Uvic team is only one of six groups investigating Buttle, and it's fair to say no one group is precisely aware of what the others are up to.

He plans to complete a paper on the Buttle Lake research next spring.

"I wouldn't be surprised if we were the first to come out with a biological interpretation of what has happened since they began dumping the tailings."

He estimates that since he came to Uvic six years ago he has sampled water from every Vancouver Island lake south of Campbell River in order to assess water quality — or the degree of pollution.

But his most important contribution to pollution detection could be contained in the results of two years of water sampling at Elk Lake.

The presence in water of algae can be interpreted as a sign of pollution. Through regular sampling and analysis of Elk Lake water, Austin was able to determine which of the microscopic animals represents various degrees of pollution.

Thus in future scientists and non-scienctists alike in other parts of the world may be able to quickly assess the quality of a body of water. All they will need is a small microscope and a list of the various microscopic algae.

Elk Lake Study

Results of the Elk Lake study were contained in a paper entitled "The Use of Periphyton in Assessing Water Quality," which Austin and research assistant Sharon Brown presented at the recent Botanical Congress in Seattle.

No, says Austin, not if "polluted" means the health of persons swimming in the lake or drinking its water will be affected.

He added sports fishermen can often detect the effects of pollution before biologists by noting changes in the fish population.

Pollution tends to upset the balanced environment of a lake, causing the decline of some plants and animals and permitting the proliferation of others.

Thus a lake, which 50 years ago might have had six species of fish, today might have only two or three species—smaller than their ancestors, but greater in numbers.

Here Come De Judge

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Spectators at provincial court Wednesday fell out of their seats laughing.

A man charged with speeding was testifying and the court stenographer told him:

"You're going too fast."

"Yes, that's what he's charged with," replied the judge.

Spectators in the front bench threw back their heads and laughed, tipping the bench over backwards. After righting the bench, the red-faced spectators moved to a more secure spot.

Course in Religions Proposed

The Gulf Islands school board will ask support for a proposed secondary history course in the world's great religions when delegates attend the annual B.C. school trustee's convention Oct. 5-8 at Vancouver's Bayshore Inn.

B.C. students complete their education "without exposure to, or recognigtion of, man's constant quest to adjust philosophically to his environment," says the preamble of the Gulf Islands resolution.

"In overlooking this area of instruction, students are denied the educational opportunity of assessing the part religion has played in history."

DELETE READINGS

One proposed resolution by the Vancouver school board urges the government to delete the requirement for Bible readings and the Lord's Prayer from the Public Schools Act during the next session of the legislature.

A third resolution sponsored by the Surrey board simply asks the minister of education to assess the impact of religious practices on students.

Trustees will vote on 53 motions at their 65th annual convention. Keynote speaker will be Dr. Laurence J. Peter, author of "The Peter Principle — Why Things Go Wrong."

There are three resolutions arising out of the government's school financing formula, under which excess operating costs to boards must be approved by local ratepayers.

ALL TO VOTE

The North Vancouver board urges outright removal of the principle of submitting operating budgets to referendum.

The Coquitlam board proposes that not only owner-electors, but all Canadian citizens and British subjects over 21 in a district be allowed to vote in school board elections and on bylaw referendums.

SPECIAL TAX

Strong opposition to the new policy developed last year when several boards, faced with rising costs, had budgets vetoed by ratepayers.

The Greater Victoria board has submitted a resolution proposing total financing of education by the provincial government through a special tax on personal income and business or industrial profits.

In the preamble to its resolution the board points out that while education is not a service to land, 40 per cent of the annual cost of education is paid for through property taxes.

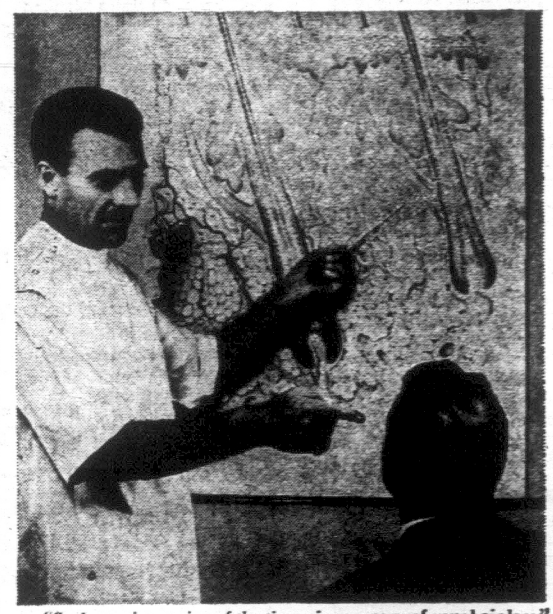

In related motions, the West Vancouver board urges reduced property taxes for homeowners over 65, and the Cowichan board calls for a $50 increase in homeowner grants to old age pensioners.

Other resolutions recommend:

- Abolition of department of education exams for grade 11 and 12 students (Williams Lake);
- Dropping the requirement of secondary students to provide a written excuse for absence or lateness (Williams Lake);
- Provincial government support of education research through an annual $100,000 grant to the Educational Research Institute of B.C. (Richmond).

Bear Killed

CHURCHILL, Man. (CP) — RCMP shot and killed a 300-pound polar bear Tuesday after it trapped two young boys atop an elevated sewer pipe. The bear could not reach them but foiled police attempts to chase it away. Several persons were attacked by bears here last year and a teen-age Eskimo boy was killed.

"Scalp tension, a sign of the times, is one cause of your hair loss," says Harrison trichologist to balding man. Harrison directs the famous Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists, whose main office is in Vancouver. They are sending a specialist here to advise men and women how to correct hair troubles by home treatment.

How to save and improve your hair demonstrated by expert here Fri. and Sat.

New home treatment methods for preventing baldness — and growing thicker hair—will be demonstrated in Victoria this Friday and Saturday, September 26 and 27. This news was released here today by A. B. Harrison, internationally famous director of Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists.

In the announcement, Harrison named staff trichologist T. Cronshaw to conduct the Victoria clinic. Cronshaw will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the Hotel Sussex.

Examine You Free

"I want to make it clear that you incur no obligation by seeing Mr. Cronshaw," director Harrison said. "Your only obligation is to yourself—to free your mind of worries about hair loss, dandruff, itching, or other scalp disorders, by learning how to take care of your hair. If your trouble is beyond the scope of Harrison Home Treatment, we will frankly tell you so."

"We always make a personal examination before suggesting any treatment," he pointed out. "There is no one cure-all that will correct every one of the 18 scalp disorders that cause baldness."

Who Can Be Helped?

Will this new treatment cure baldness? "No," said Harrison sincerely. "We cannot help men who are slick-bald after years of gradual hair loss. But where your scalp still grows hair, we can at least save and improve what you have. Usually, we can grow more hair even where you have only 'fuzz' now."

The important thing is: Don't wait until it's too late!

Best evidence of the success of Harrison treatment is the phenomenal growth behind it. Harrison trichologists hold clinics in all major cities across Canada.

"Our biggest problem is not in doing what we claim to do," declared Harrison. But to overcome the average man's initial skepticism is sometimes difficult. He's usually quite desperate — and baldish — by the time he nerves himself to see a Harrison trichologist. He's 'tried everything.' So he starts consoling himself with one of the old superstitions about hair: That baldness is hereditary; that men naturally lose hair as they get along in years; that nothing can be done to stop hair loss—and a lot of other notions that we know are not true today."

Free Scalp Examination

See Mr. Cronshaw in person. Learn how baldness can be corrected, and new hair grown. The new Harrison method permits you to actually correct your baldness and improve your hair in the privacy of your own home.

For a free examination and discussion of your hair problems ask the desk clerk at the Hotel Sussex Friday or Saturday between 1 p.m. and 8 p.m. for Mr. Cronshaw's suite number.

You don't need an appointment. Examinations are given in private.

Germany's Dark Horse Runs Hard

KARLSRUHE (CP) — The Nazi ghost haunts West Germany's election campaign, a generation after Adolf Hitler's Reich was smashed to rubble.

While the Christian Democrats and the Social Democrats fight for power in next Sunday's voting, the splinter National Democrats, called neo-Nazis by their critics, are trying to win their first seats in the federal parliament.

The leader of the National Democrat party, Adolf von Thadden, 48, says the Nazi ghost never will materialize.

He called the neo-Nazi label "utter nonsense" in an interview with a group of foreign reporters here during the tulmultuous election battle.

He said the Nazi regime was the product of the personality and ideas of Hitler, existing in historical circumstances that will not be repeated.

EXPECTS 25-50 SEATS

Von Thadden, whose party has won seats in seven of 10 West German provincial legislatures since it was founded in 1964, is aiming at between 25 and 50 seats in the 496-seat Bundestag, lower house of parliament.

Judging from the opinion polls, he will not make it. Yet many Germans are terrified at the prospect of his winning any seats at all. They fear this will be interpreted as a sinister revival of nazism in the hearts of the Germans.

Von Thadden himself does not look like a man to inspire fear. He is unimpressive in appearance and speaks in a low, dull monotone that is impossible to hear when the heckling gets rough at his rallies, as it often does.

To individual questioners, he is easily accessible—when they can catch up to his fast-travelling schedule—and he turns on charm easily.

He was in a happy mood meeting the foreign press. Only three hecklers had been thrown out of his rally that night and he had been able to speak in the open instead of from the glass-enclosed cage he sometimes uses for protection against rocks, rotten tomatoes and other missiles.

Von Thadden professes that the physically violent opposition actually will help him. It would make more Germans listen when he tells them they need a government that will "restore" law and order.

MINISKIRTS OUT

His program glorifies paternal authority in the nation and in the home. He says women "need care and protection." He is against miniskirts, pop art and career women.

He also is against West German membership in NATO and the European Common Market, and he wants West Germany to switch to a self-sufficient and inward-looking economy in contrast to present conditions rooted in a thriving foreign trade.

This political and economic program is in total opposition to those of the three parties represented in the last Bundestag—the Christian Democrats and the Socitl Democrats, who formed a coalition government, and the Free Democrats.

Von Thadden says the word "national" in his party's name frightens the government because of what Germany did under the Nazis—the National Socialists—and it will not acknowledge the fact that West Germany is a nation with as much right as any other to determine its own destiny.

There is no evidence that von Thadden is anywhere on the road to power. The hostility of much of the young generation of voters is plain to be seen.

But he is campaigning vigorously—his party is running candidates everywhere—and he is draining off considerable energies from the two major groups. Leaders of the Christian Democrats and the Social Democrats are watching him over their shoulders instead of paying strict attention to their own fight for domination.

Afro is Out Says Airline

CHICAGO (AP) — United Air Lines announced Wednesday that it has fired a Negro stewardess who refused to alter her Afro hair style.

An airline spokesman said the stewardess, Deborah Renwick, 27, was fired Tuesday at the end of a 21-day suspension period.

He said her hair style did not fit the airline's short-hair look and that Miss Renwick had made no effort to change her appearance during the suspension.

Miss Renwick, of Chicago, had been an airline employee for six years, the first three years in the reservations office.

The airline spokesman said about 40 of United's 2,000 stewardesses based in Chicago are Negro.

Opposition Priming Guns For 'Long, Bitter' Session

OTTAWA (CP) — Looking tanned and fit following a summer of stumping his constituency, George Hees let it be known Wednesday that he is priming his guns for a showdown parliamentary battle.

"The approaching session will be the most bitterly contested session that Parliament has seen in many years," he predicted.

"The government has created the atmosphere which makes it impossible to be otherwise."

Despite Prime Minister Trudeau's optimistic outlook that the animosity marking the final few days of the pre-recess session will be forgotten when the House reassembles Wednesday, Oct. 22, Mr. Hees said he feels the opposition will be coming back in a fighting mood.

"It has to be this way," he said. "Do you think we are going to let the government emasculate the role of Parliament?"

OUTLINES PROBLEM

The root of the problem lies in the debate-limiting measures the government "pushed through" earlier this year, said Mr. Hees, Conservative MP for the Ontario riding of Prince Edward-Hastings.

"Speeches made by the Prime Minister and members of his cabinet left no doubt that, in the minds of the present government, Parliament is no more than a nuisance which will be tolerated only because the laws of Canada require that legislation must pass through it before it becomes law.

"The prime minister had the temerity to change the role of Parliament.

"Okay, we've gone far enough. No, sir, we're not going to see this country put in the hands of a virtual dictatorship."

What is the opposition planning to do?

"You don't disclosure your game plan before the game starts," said the front-bench Conservative. "But there are many ways in which it can be done."

YEAR IS UP

Mr. Hees said there is another reason why the atmosphere of the forthcoming session will toughen. "When there's a new leader, he usually is given a year or so to show what he can do.

"Mr. Trudeau's time is up."

"The trouble with this government is that they want to operate Parliament like a computer. They want to decide what's best for Canada, process the legislation through Parliament, and have it come out on a prescribed schedule.

"We're going to do our job."

The 59-year-old former trade minister was asked whether there was any residual resentment from Mr. Trudeau's July remark that Opposition MPs were "nobodies" when they were 50 feet away from Parliament Hill.

"Not at all. Not at all. We couldn't care less. Why, we've been insulted by experts."

HEES

Hunter in Hospital

VANCOUVER (CP)—Reginald Smith, 37, was in fair condition in hospital Tuesday after being lost for 51 hours with his son, David, 16, on a hunting trip on Burke Mountain, near Coquitlam.

Aid to Needy Nations Tops Commonwealth Talks

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (CP)—Finance Minister Edgar Benson of Canada and 27 other Commonwealth finance ministers begin a two-day conference here today, reviewing world trade problems and aid to needy nations.

Benson said on arrival Wednesday night he is mainly interested in Britain's report to the conference on the inprovement of its sterling position.

He said Canada had no new initiatives to take at the meeting, but might have to continue its accustomed role as a moderator between the newer, developing nations of the Commonwealth and its older members.

Benson was immediately briefed by Canadian officials on progress at meetings with the Commonwealth secretariat here earlier this week, in preparation for the ministers' conference.

Three days of argument by foreign aid officials of the Commonwealth governments, prior to the ministers' meeting, was expected to result in a recommendation that a new central fund be created for intra-Commonwealth aid.

FAVOR BILATERAL AID

Some of the donor countries, particularly Australia, were understood to prefer keeping their Commonwealth aid programs on a strictly bilateral basis—between the donor and receiver. Australia's Commonwealth aid goes mostly to Papua and New Guinea.

Canada would prefer a multilateral approach. The Canadian International Development Agency, formerly the external aid office, has funds earmarked for this approach. Canada's aid goes largely to South Asia and the Caribbean, but is widely diversified.

Among Commonwealth officials there is regret that some of the excitement that accompanied international assistance in is early post-war years has disappeared.

There is, therefore, some anticipation for next week's World Bank annual meeting in Washington when Lester B. Pearson, former Canadian prime minister, is to present a report on his world-wide study of foreign aid.

The problem, as seen by some officials here—including those of Canada's CIDA—is how to get this enthusiasm going again.

VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1969 —PAGE 25

Farm Wagon From Montana Ready for School Fun Fair

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kitzke, their five children and 33 horses have just moved to a 40-acre farm from a 2,400-acre ranch in Montana.

Originally, the Studebaker wagon was a standard piece of farm equipment, used for a number of farm chores with the use of interchangeable decks.

The Kitzke's bought it primarily for the guest ranch they operated along with the cattle ranch, to take guests out for cook-outs.

They have brought it to Victoria with them, for the year they plan to spend here while looking for land for a ranch in northern B.C.

"We've come to Canada as landed immigrants," Mr. Kitzke said, "because we found parts of the B.C. wilderness so fascinating. With air travel, these lovely remote places are so much more accessible now."

Meantime, the Kitzke's children, although missing the ranch, are enjoying Victoria. Jolaine and Brent are attending University of Victoria, young Joseph is at St. Michael's, while John and Beth are at St. Margaret's.

That's why the historic wagon's first appearance in Victoria will be at St. Margaret's Fun fair, to be held Saturday at the school's newly acquired property, opposite Lake hill Elementary School.

Besides wagon rides over the rolling meadowland, the fair will feature a number of new attractions this year.

There will be treasure hunts in the wooded areas, and a Punch and Judy show. Also new is a Dutch auction for which articles have been collected from many far-away places.

The arts and crafts corner will feature works by versatile Victoria artists, and the ever-popular home cooking and garden stalls will be well-stocked as usual. Other stalls will include attic treasures and toys, and there will be games for the children.

Box lunches, tea and coffee will be available for adults, with hot dogs, cold drinks and doughnuts for the younger set.

A corn roast will end a day of fun at the fair, which will be opened at 2 p.m. by Mrs. G. R. Pearkes, a former pupil of the school.

MINIMAX IS THE ANSWER

Life in the Old Coat Yet

Any old coat will do now.

Even the ankle-length antique with the moth holes, if the moths have eaten only around the hem.

For New York designers have invented the minimax.

According to an Associated Press report, the minimax coat has three sides maxi and one side mini.

There are several possibilities.

For the brisk walker the designer has lopped off the front to mini-length, leaving sides and back maxi and cosy.

Another version is more symetrical. Fringed like a poncho, it's long in front and back but short at the sides. To make getting into cars easier? Oh well, who needs a reason.

Another puzzler is the thrift shop fur. The report doesn't make clear why the fur has been dyed to make it look "used." This one is worn with a long patchwork skirt topped with a fringed shawl. "Both made of fur scraps from the workroom floor."

French Women Claim Job Discrimination

PARIS (CP) — French women campaigning for economic equality between the sexes say female job-holders in France still are paid far less than men for doing the same work.

The equality advocates blame discrimination but concede that lack of qualification, absenteeism and shorter time spent in particular posts also are significant factors in lower pay for women.

Specialists in such matters insist that France needs machinery for enforcing bans against any pay discrimination based on an employee's sex.

They maintain too that women must be ensured equal treatment in advanced job training and promotion.

Latest to set out the demands is a Paris-based committee which regularly issues the results of studies in the problems of working women.

Called La Comite d'Etude et de Liaisons des Problemes du Travail Feminin, the group notes that France subscribes to international agreements aimed at eliminating job bias against women.

LACK RECOURSE

But it argues that this country lacks legislative provisions giving women a course of action in cases where they consider themselves to be victims of discrimination.

The committee says the latest precise statistics about salary levels in France date from 1966.

It adds, however, that there is no reason for thinking the situation has improved for women since then.

At that time, the average salary for men in professional categories was 36 per cent higher than that for women similarly classified.

In terms of exchange rates established with this year's devaluation of the franc, the statistics indicate that French men employed in higher brackets make about $8,500 a year compared with $5,500 for women doing the same work.

In a professional bracket of medium salary level, men might make an average of about $4,000 annually as against $3,000 for women.

At the officer-worker level, the male salary would be $2,500 for men, compared with $2,000 for the opposite sex.

Advocates of equality argue that steps to give women an equal break in specialized training would be a vital initial move towards balancing the job qualifications of both sexes and thus bringing salaries into equilibrium.

MEN RESIST TREND

More recently have come demands by women architects for improved status in that predominantly male profession.

Elsewhere there are signs of growth in the female population of professions once considered male preserves.

Such was the case in 1968 among engineers and in the higher levels of administrative work.

Behind these trends is the benefit accruing to girls from greater educational opportunities and the growing glamor of jobs enjoying high social status.

Yet, to a foreigner residing in France, first impressions are that women here enjoy less prominence in public life —apart from show business— than is granted them by North American and British society.

Strong indications persist that some influential French males, especially of the older generation, still consider woman's role to be one of self-effacing devotion to men, preferably against a background of eye-pleasing high fashion and elegant home life.

Pot-Luck Lunches Get Gourmet Touch

By PENNY SAVER

A chef who just couldn't retire—and who chose Victoria to not retire in—has recently opened a delicatessen worth remembering.

At first glance it looks a lot like other delicatessens, with piles of sausages, cheese and tinned goods from all over the world. These are the "old standbys".

The difference in this as in any delicatessen, lies in what comes out of their own kitchen.

As I stood chatting with the chef's wife about their store a regular customer came in. "Have you any curried shrimp, today?" she asked, wistfully, glancing over the trays on the warming table.

"You missed it; we had curried shrimp yesterday," was the reply, and the woman left after a long look at the rest of the displays.

"Each day we have a different menu," my new friend explained. "It comes hot out of the oven at 12 noon and all the people from the stores near here come in for their lunch.

"We serve it on these disposable tin plates. A full meal with meat and vegetables is 95 cents. We can do it for that price," she added at my incredulous gasp," because we aren't a restaurant—we don't have to wash the dishes and we don't have to pay rent for table space.

"Some of the women come back and get some for their dinner that night—it's great for the working wife and mother."

That's what I call pot luck gourmet style!

Cater for Parties

The store will also cater for parties, though they do not come and serve the meal.

Call early in the morning (the chefs start work around 5 or 6 a.m.) and you can have a platter of sandwiches for your bridge party that night. Minimum cost: $1 per person.

Hot meals can be arranged too, to be picked up and kept warm until it is time for them to go on the table.

"We never turn anyone down on a full day's notice," she told me, but a little bit more couldn't hurt and as any housewife who has prepared for a party on her own will know, would definitely help.

There are so many things in this shop, I could never list them all—roast beef, 4 and 5 pound pre-cooked chickens, boneless turkeys, head cheese, salads of every kind.

Even the imported items included some I had never noticed before—sticks of vanilla for 25 cents, canned chestnuts at $1.29 a tin, curry soup with rice mix for 33 cents that could become a curry sauce if less water were used.

If you would like to see this shop for yourself, please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. for the location.

Tall Girl Passes State Trooper Test

JUNEAU (AP) — Frances Jean Howard, a thoughtful, thoroughly feminine lass of 25, says she became Alaska's first female state trooper because she likes police work—not because she's out to prove anything.

"I'm not a women's rights advocate," the blue-eyed brunette said. "It just sorta happened."

It started when Miss Howard, a trained dental technician, decided "there were different things I wanted to see that I couldn't see at an eight-to-five job in a dental office," and she left Grants Pass, Ore., for Alaska.

She got a job as a clerk typist with the department of public safety last year and later began to think that there was a place in the department for a female trooper.

State regulations for state troopers do not mention that an officer has to be a man. And, Miss Howard, nicely built and tall, passed the five-foot-nine minimum height requirement. She also passed all the written and oral tests.

Miss Howard is a little doubtful of the physical regimen at the police training academy.

"They say you have to run a mile before breakfast," she said. "I can't even move in the morning before a cup of coffee."

The department has despaired of putting a pretty girl—who looks just right in a blue flowered, mini-length dress with a big broad white collar—into a man-tailored shirt and tie.

"It looks pretty unfeminine," Fran said. The uniform style is still on the drawing board.

New York Novices Given Good Advice

TORONTO (CP) — Young women planning to settle in the vast impersonal metropolis of New York face unknown problems and dangers.

In a city notorious for violence, what safety rules should they take? How do they find a room-mate, a job, a doctor or lawyer?

There's one woman in New York who can deal with all these problems for a newly arrived Canadian girl. She is Dorothy Jessop, an ex-Torontonian who operates a service known as Mamselle in New York. The complete service, including counselling and finding a roommate, costs $60.

Before accepting a client, Mrs. Jessop asks her to fill out a four-page questionnaire. She asks each girl why she left her last job, why she decided to go to New York, what her drinking habits are, whether she goes to church, what her special interests are, whether she is neat or sloppy and how she feels about men staying overnight in the apartment.

TURNS SOME DOWN

The questions are designed to make sure she's dealing with a responsible woman and also as a guide to matching her up with a compatible room-mate.

"I've turned down girls who are so spoiled and so hostile that they would have been impossible to deal with. I also won't take on divorcees who are still up-tight about their shattered marriage."

Asking about all-night male visitors is not primarily prompted by moral considerations. "A girl is looking for another girl to share her apartment with—not a couple," explains Mrs. Jessop.

"New York today is a very dangerous place," she said. "People who need money for drugs are desperate and will take unbelievable risks. We try to make our clients aware of the dangers without turning them into nervous Nellies."

She recommends apartment buildings located in the upper east and west parts of town, as opposed to places like the lower east side of Greenwich Village, notorious centre of drug use and traffic.

The girls are specifically cautioned never to leave apartment doors open, even during short trips down the hall.

"I'd advise girls to put chains on their door and to use only special locks which take professional criminals four to eight hours to open."

Out-of-town girls are also advised never to include their phone number in an ad. That's an open invitation to men who make obscene phone calls.

"But it's not only the men who harass you these days. Women also get calls from lesbians."

In counselling the girls about how to meet eligible men, Mamselle steers them away from "singles" clubs and bars. She supplies them with a list of selected organizations where they can meet both men and women.

Mrs. Jessop says she is probably conservative in her attitudes because of her background. She was the daughter of a Toronto minister and after her marriage in New York spent five years in Iran teaching.

She says her favorite clients are Canadians because they are easy to match and are popular with Americans, Europeans and Australians.

Craftsman Should Be Designer

TORONTO (CP) — "The ideal setup in any craft results when a good craftsman is also a good designer," says award-winning jewelry designer - craftsman Tommia Vaughan-Jones.

Tommia, who has won awards and exhibitions almost every year since graduation from the Ontario College of Art in 1954, says she was attracted to the craft because she has always loved jewelry.

"I would never be able to afford good pieces so I decided the only way to get them was to make them."

She says she always wanted to create jewelry that would wear forever, "the heirloom pieces that would become an investment like any other rare thing."

"Sometimes I know that I have — but I know the feeling should be more constant," she says, casting a critical eye over her work.

YOU'RE SEW RIGHT

By DALE CAVANAGH

A Fitting Shortcut

from VINCENT MONTE SANO

Mr. Vicnent Monte Sano believes it is always wise to make a trial copy to test the fit of a garment and to see if the design selected is comfortable and becoming.

Today's clothes, for the most part, call for full underlinings. That is, lining cut the same as the outside pieces, excluding facings, basted to the wrong side of the outer fabric and then handled as one layer.

This lining can be extremely useful as you will see.

Before you cut into that precious outer fabric, take out a little "fitting insurance," Cut the lining first.

Make all darts and pleats in the lining and assemble sections together just as you would the outside, only with basting instead of stitiching. Machine baste if you wish.

Once the underlining is assembled, try it on with the seams away from the body. Any minor deviations in fit will be apparent, can be adjusted, and carefully marked with colored tailor's chalk or contrast colored basting thread.

USE BASTED UNDERLINING FOR CUSTOM FITTING

When the adjustments are marked, the underlining is completely disassembled and pressed. The marked underlining can then be pinned to the wrong side of the outer fabric and be used in conjunction with, or as a substitute for, the tissue pattern.

When the outer fabric is cut, baste the underlining to the wrong side (it's already pinned in place) and proceed with the construction of the dress.

Gross National Product Leaves Out Housewives

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's gross national product in 1968 was undervalued by $27,000,000,000 because it didn't include the output of goods and services by the nation's housewives.

Sylva Gelber, director of the women's bureau of the labor department, made the claim today at a meeting of the Engineers Wives Association. The time has come, she said, for housewives to demand that a value be placed on their services.

Miss Gelber said economists have failed to come up with an accurate means of including housewives' services in the national product even though to ignore such service distorts calculations of the standard of living.

At the same time, she said, if housewives successfully insisted on a value being placed on their services they would acquire a new respect from Society. Housewives, she said, "have too long remained the silent servicers."

DEAR ABBY . . .

He Prefers Fish

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My daughter married a 30-year-old mama's boy who is in love with tropical fish. He has 13 tanks of them. He's got a fortune sunk in those fish. Just to give you an idea, he paid $14 for one little fish.

Well, after four months of marriage my daughter got pregnant against his wishes so he got mad and went home to his mama. He says they can't afford a baby yet. (Fish he can afford.)

He left the fish tanks in her apartment, and even though she hates the fish she had to feed them and clean the tanks. The fish-lover came by once in a while to see the fish. My daughter cried her eyes out and lost the baby, so now her husband decided they should kiss and make up and start all over again.

She took him back, and so far all is calm, but I know this isn't going to last. The priest says she can get an annulment on the grounds that this man is a boy. How can I convince her she ought to forget him once and for all? — Her Mother.

DEAR MOTHER: You can't. Water seeks its own level — even in a fish tank, so keep your oars out of their water and let your daughter sink or swim.

DEAR ABBY: My sister's daughter, Arlene, is being married soon, and the whole family is all excited about the coming wedding, which will be a large, formal church affair.

Arlene has asked all the girl cousins near her age to be bridesmaids — except my daughter, Nancy. Arlene and Nancy have never been close friends due to jealousy on both sides. And although my sister and her husband have always been very close to me and my husband, I just don't feel that I should put my sister on the spot by begging her to ask Arlene to include Nancy.

Naturally my daughter is deeply hurt, and now she doesn't even want to go to the wedding with us. Should we insist that she go and pretend she doesn's care? Or should we let her stay away? Now I don't know if my husband and I should go to the wedding either. It is certain to be a very unhappy day for my immediate family. Please advise. — Bewildered.

DEAR BEWILDERED: Don't insist that your daughter attend the wedding if she prefers to stay away. (Perhaps the weekend of the wedding she could take a little trip out of town to cheer her up.) If you and your hubsand want to go, by all means go. But don't stay away in order to protest the slighting of your daughter. And by the way, I think you used excellent judgment in refraining from putting your sister on the spot.

DEAR ABBY: I am 16 and have a question I hope you won't think it too dumb to answer.

When a girl (me) goes riding with a boy (he is not a steady—he is just someone I like a real lot) how close should I sit to him?

I feel so foolish pressing against a door like I am afraid of him. All we do really while he is driving is talk — Judy.

DEAR JUDY: Sit close enough to talk — but not close enough to be talked about.

CONFIDENTIAL TO LUCY (and to all the others who wrote to tell me that cats do carry ringworm): Yes, I know, but the writer condemning cats stated that all cats carry ringworm and transmit it promptly to babies. Any animal (or person) afflicted with a contagious disease carries and transmits it, of course.

Mint Used as Surprise Seasoning In Cabbage Salad and Hamburgers

By HILDA BEASTALL

Men cooks have an annoying way of using imagination when preparing even a simple dish. On these all too rare occasions there are sure to be loud demands from the kitchen for the most unlikely ingredients to make up a ham sandwich or bacon fritters.

One I know has been experimenting with using fresh mint leaves in new ways. He claims that his home-grown potatoes and garden peas have too fine a flavor to be disguised with it, but it has lots of possibilities otherwise.

The mint we like best for its fine aroma and flavor is grey green and quite hairy, or woolly. There is little use in trying to name it, for no two authorities agree, so we call it simply the woolly grey mint, as opposed to various green and variegated mints with all kinds of fruity odors.

For cabbage salad, or any green salad, I take about four young mint leaves, break them into tiny pieces with my fingers and add them to the sour cream dressing. A teaspoon of applesauce in place of lemon juice or vinegar does wonders too, stirred into this cream dressing.

To take the place of onion with hamburgers, try four mint leaves torn into small pieces to a cupful of ground beef.

Another dish that is becoming quite a favorite in our house is a sort of beef casserole with a light crunchy topping made from pancake mix with an egg, two tablespoons of shortening and a half-cup of skim milk added.

About a half-teaspoon of chopped mint can be added to either the meat when it is lightly cooked, or to the topping mixture.

By adding a different kind of herb seasoning to the crunchy topping at each making, we can help slay the dragon that says men cooks are more imaginative than women, and keep alive the myth that some women are born cooks.

Gromyko Will Visit Ottawa Next Week

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — External Affairs Mitchell Sharp announced Wednesday night that Andrei Gromyko will become the first Soviet foreign minister to visit Canada since the Second World War.

Sharp said at a news conference that Gromyko, who has been attending the UN General Assembly session, will arrive in Ottawa Oct. 1 and spend two full days with Canadian officials.

Sharp, here for talks with his opposite numbers attending the opening stages of the assembly, was to talk to Gromyko today. It is expected further details of the trip will be discussed then.

Sharp said that Gromyko will talk with officials in Ottawa about various issues including the Middle East, East-West relations and bilateral matters such as trade. Wheat would be one of the subjects.

It was hoped that Prime Minister Trudeau would meet Gromyko and it was expected that Trade and Industry Minister Jean-Luc Pepin would be one of the ministers participating in the talks.

Sharp said Gromyko was returning a visit made in November, 1966, by Paul Martin, then external affairs minister.

SEEKS UN SUPPORT

In other matters, Sharp announced that Communist China has asked Canada's support on the question of Peking's membership in the UN and said that "frank and useful talks" were held with Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann of France about Quebec.

He started his day by visiting Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad of Egypt then held talks with Foreign Minister Tran Van Lam of South Vietnam, Schumann and State Secretary William Rogers of the U.S.

He met Liberian officials at a reception and was interviewed on television.

His schedule today calls for talks with foreign affairs officials of Nigeria, Australia, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, the Soviet Union and perhaps Chile. There is a reception for members of the Canadian UN delegation tonight.

Sharp told reporters that China has asked Canada's support in the UN. But he did not specify what was meant by support.

For the last two years Canada has abstained on the annual vote in the assembly on resolution calling for the expulsion of Nationalist China and the seating of Communist China.

WANTS TO JOIN

Sharp said last week that he has concluded from the talks with the Communist Chinese in Stockholm on recognition of the Peking regime that the Chinese would like to join the UN.

He said Wednesday that it is unlikely that Canada will change its vote in the UN this year unless agreement has been reached in Stockholm. But agreement "might have an effect" on the Canadian vote.

Sharp discussed China with Rogers and Schumann. He said Rogers gave no indication that the U.S. would change its negative vote on the China resolution this year.

The minister has said that China has not demanded that Canada vote yes as the price for recognition. He said progress was made in the talks in Stockholm last Saturday and another meeting will be held at a date to be set.

Sharp talked to Schumann about education conferences, evidently the conferences of French-speaking countries that has caused trouble in the past.

He said that he and Schumann agreed there should be friendly relations between Canada and France but that they also expressed some differences of opinion. He did not go into details.

SUSPENDED RELATIONS

In 1968, Canada suspended relations with Gabon because the African country had invited only Quebec to an educational conference. At another conference held in The Congo last January, Canada was represented by a delegation from Ottawa, Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick.

A second stage of that conference was to be held in Paris in May but was postponed. No invitations have been sent out for the Paris conference.

Sharp also said he is optimistic about relations between Canada and France under the new government of Georges Pompidou.

Sharp also discussed the European security conference proposed by Warsaw pact countries with Schumann. He said there was a "fair amount of agreement" between them.

He said that the conference should not be held without proper preparations and unless there was a reasonable chance of success.

He said he talked to Schumann and Rogers about the Middle East situation and found "refreshing" the fact that both said there was some progress in big-power talks. He pointed out that speeches in the UN gave no indication of that progress.

He also discussed Biafra with others. The American and Frenchman expressed concern about relief supplies to Biafra. Sharp said Canada is "influenced" by the feeling of Secretary-General U Thant that the Nigerian civil war should be settled in an African setting.

FRIGATE SUNK IN 1759 GIVES UP FRENCH RELICS

CAMPBELLTON, N.B. (CP) — Relics of a long-ago forlorn-hope attempt by France to reconquer Canada after the fall of Quebec in 1759 are emerging in a long-term project by an Ottawa archeological team.

The archeologists from the national historic sites services are bringing to the surface artefacts from the sunken frigate Le Machault, largest of three French vessels sunk in the Battle of Restigouche in 1760—the last British-French naval fight for possession of Canada.

The scene is the Restigouche River off Mission Point, two miles from this northern New Brunswick city. Recovery work started in April this year and may continue for several years with winter pauses.

Artefacts raised from the hulk, many in unexpectedly good condition, include porcelain, stemware, cutlery, crockery, ceramics, an unused pair of boots and 10-foot cannon. Recovery of at least 10 of the cannon is anticipated.

After the fall of Quebec France sent a relief force. Part of it sought refuge in the Restigouche area after learning that the St. Lawrence River was barred by the British. But word reached the British force, and warships set out to search for the French. The two sides drew up for battle in June, 1760.

Montreal Italian Weekly Gives Minority View on Languages

MONTREAL (CP) — The Italian-language weekly Il Cittadino Canadese publishes in its current issue an article it says summarizes opinion in Montreal's Italian community on school language friction in suburban St. Leonard.

The northeast suburb of 35,000, where the non-French population has grown to about 48 per cent, mostly persons of Italian origin, was the scene of a riot Sept. 10 sparked by a police-banned demonstration organized by the Ligue pour l'Integration Scolaire.

Its Roman Catholic school board last year began a policy of eliminating the teaching of English in bilingual schools and has made instruction in the French language obligatory. Grades 1 and 2 are affected this year and Grade 3 will be added next September.

Here is a partial translation of the article in the Italian-language weekly:

"Immigration is essentially an economic fact, and given the pitiless laws of the economy we are obliged, after landing here, to learn the English language, the language spoken all over the continent, even all over the world, despite our natural tendency towards rapid assimilation of the French language, despite the difficulties of learning English, despite the affinities we have for French-speaking Canadians.

"We chose the English language because in Canada it is the language of the majority, not because English-speaking Canadians are more sympathetic towards us, not because we have any deeper feelings of friendship towards English-speaking Canadians. We didn't link the language with the person.

"We chose English because it is the language that gives us our daily bread, the instrument that integrates us into society and promises a better future in this new world. . . .

"Distrust, resentment and indifference towards immigrants, and especially towards Italians, on the part of French-Canadians has also been an important factor in causing us to choose English. . . .

"We have reached the point, especially in St. Leonard, where Canadians of Italian origin and those of the French language avert their eyes when they me in the street. That is an unacceptable fact, for we have been and we must remain, whatever the cost, brothers. Our children must continue to play together and must not hate each other on account of problems which have no reason to exist."

Bug-Drowning Theory Tested by SFU Man

It's called water.

"The theory is simple," said Dr. Brian Beirne. "You just spray a plant with a heavy stream of water which knocks off the small insects, and they drown on the ground."

Dr. Beirne is director of the pestology centre at Simon Fraser University in suburban Burnaby.

He said that this summer one student worked at the federal agriculture department research station at Summerland in the Fraser Valley spraying mites off apples with a water stream instead of using insecticide.

Dr. Beirne said it appears a spray made up of large droplets is more effective than just using a mist.

And he noted the new method has a double benefit. It not only gets rid of pests and grasshoppers—but it waters the troubled plant as well.

Jamaica Girds Against Hippies

KINGSTON (Reuters) — Hippies are generally regarded here as undesirables and the Jamaican government plans to make it tough for them to enter the island.

A group of American hippies hit the luxurious resort of Montego Bay on the north coast recently, camped on beaches and did not pay their bills. A flood of complaints reached Kingston.

Four hippies were classified as undesirable and ordered to leave the country. Now the government is planning ways to stop other "undesirables" from entering and upsetting tourists.

"The government of Jamaica cannot and will not tolerate the entry of undesirables," said Home Affairs Minister Roy McNeill. "Such people are not an asset to Jamaica's tourism, and they can be a serious liability."

The minister announced that the government will prepare a "protocol of qualifications" to be applied to anyone entering Jamaica.

Dutch Yacht Anyone?

TORONTO (CP) — The Dutch Orange Line has come up with the perfect answer for people who really want to impress the crowd at the yacht club.

For $400,000 or 1,500,000 Dutch guilders, the Orange Line will sell the Prins Philips Willem, a 17-year-old, 5,120-ton freighter.

The ship now is tied up in Toronto with a huge For Sale sign on the bridge. So far it has attracted much laughter, but few cash offers.

Some people who saw the sign as the ship came up the St. Lawrence seaway shouted: "How much?" But her captain, K. J. Wieling, says a Greek shipowner's agent went aboard in Montreal and is still carrying out an inspection.

New Pollution Control Technique for Sewage

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Energy Minister George Kerr announced here Wednesday night that Ontario has discovered a "revolutionary new process" for removing from sewage the phosphorus and nitrogen nutrients that threaten to destroy the Great Lakes.

Kerr said the discovery, a type of lime precipitation process, was developed by the Ontario Water Resources Commission and has proved highly successful in trials at the Richmond Hill sewage treatment plant just north of Toronto.

Both the phosphorus and nitrogen content of sewage treated at the plant had been cheaply reduced by 92 per cent, compared to the 39-per-cent removal so far achieved by the hitherto-best-known treatment methods being used throughout North America.

Kerr said in a speech at the Oakville public library that the new process offers a solution to the major pollution problem of the Great Lakes, the buildup of algae that has already caused experts to pronounce Lake Erie a dead lake.

OXYGEN LOST

Nitrogen and oxygen dumped into lakes through sewage speed up a process called eutrophication—the natural aging process of lakes—by feeding algae, which multiply at increased rates, removing the oxygen from the water and destroying fish and plant life.

This process could be halted if the new lime treatment method was used at sewage treatment plants in municipalities bordering the lakes.

Kerr said earlier in Toronto that the OWRC intends to test the new process at other sewage treatment plants in the province where different conditions prevail.

Since the process is cheap and since it could be installed at even the most rudimentary treatment plants, he would expect all municapities to adopt it if further tests verify the Richmond Hill results.

Kerr said that OWRC researchers are also testing a second process, based on the same principle, which could greatly increase the over-all efficiency of sewage treatment plants.

Man Faces Trial On Libel Charge

Donald R. Sykes of Edmonton, charged with defamatory libel, was committed for trial in a higher court following a preliminary hearing here Wednesday before Judge J. A. Byers.

Sykes, formerly of Victoria, faces two charges of unlawfully and without justification or excuse published a mimeographed document which contained references to Victor Williams and Jack Rennie of Victoria.

The Crown alleges the references constitute defamatory libel.

Sykes conducted his own defence.

When asked by Judge Byers if he wanted to enforce a new section of the Criminal Code to stop the press from publishing evidence given at the hearing, Sykes said he didn't want to interfere with freedom of the press.

Detective Lorne Johnson testified he and Det. Tom Smith spoke to the accused at the Victoria Law Courts on Sept. 4.

Sykes was shown a letter (in mimeograph) and was aked if he was the author or composer of the letter, the officer said.

"I don't want to say anything until I see my lawyer," Johnson quoted Sykes as saying.

NOTHING TO FEAR

The accused, he said, looked at the letter again and said: "It's all true, and I have nothing to fear, but fear itself."

Sykes then asked for the paper so that he could initial each page, he said.

On the following day, Johnson said Sykes was shown a list containing 23 names and addresses and acknowledged he had sent a five-page letter to each person listed.

Jack Rennie, 4656 Pipeline Road, president of Metropolitan Security Services Ltd., 738 Fort Street, testified that Sykes was business manager of the firm in 1968 when the company was known as the Three Cees Veterans Security Service.

He said his wife turned over to him a five-page letter.

ALLEGATIONS

"Some of the allegations made in the letter are they true or false?" the prosecutor asked.

"I believe them to be false," he replied.

Victor Williams, 1625 Davie Street, called to the witness stand, also said that certain references in the latter "are false to my knowledge."

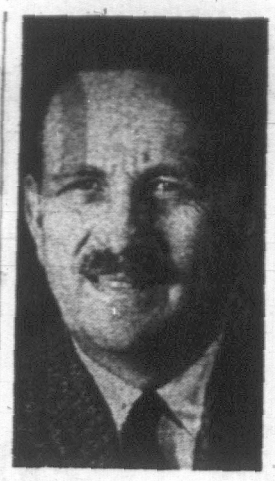

Other witnesses included Alfred Comeau, business manager of Metropolitan Security, who said he received a five-page letter which he gave to Rennie.

Ti-Cats Born

SANDUSKY, Ohio (AP) — Princess, a 500-pound lioness, and Rajah, a 700-pound tiger, are parents of three half-tiger, half-lion cubs at an amusement park near here, a park spokesman said Tuesday. The cubs are tan with black stripes, the spokesman said.

LIVE IN SWEDEN

There are about 8,000 Lapps living in Sweden.

NAMED by the federal forest service as new regional forest disease survey officer in Victoria is Joseph A. Baranyay. He is responsible for appraisal and survey of special forest disease problems in the B.C. region and succeeds Dr. Jim Ginns now with the department of agriculture in Ottawa. Baranyay spent the last nine years as research officer for the service in Calgary. Prior to that he was with the forestry faculty, Sopron divison, at University of British Columbia.

Company Adds Deep Sea Ship

CAMPBELL RIVER — MS Star Atlantic has joined the fleet of deep sea vessels which transport the pulp, paper and lumber products of Elk Falls Co.

She is 564 feet long, 85 feet broad, has a speed of 16 knots and a dead weight capacity of about 30,000 tons.

NIXON CUTS BACK MEDICAL RESEARCH

WASHINGTON (WP) — Five major federal programs to prevent chronic and crippling diseases — including heart disease, cancer, diabetes and lung disease — are to be "phased out" in coming months, by latest Nixon administration plans.

The cuts, if applied, will practically wipe out the chronic disease control program of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

This would save $9.7 million a year, beginning in fiscal 1971, and something less this year—perhaps $3 million—as the cuts are applied.

The five programs to be eliminated are those in heart disease and stroke; cancer; arthritis and diabetes; neurologic and sensory diseases (like Parkingson's disease and multiple sclerosis); and respiratory disease (like pulmonary emphysema).

The only chronic disease control programs to be kept alive, by present plan, are those in smoking and health, kidney disease and nutrition.

The plans come on top of news the National Institute of Health is cutting funds for new medical research grants by some 10 per cent, and grant renewals this fall by 5 per cent. All come in response to President Nixon's order to cut $3.5 billion in all from last spring's Nixon budget.

The chronic disease cuts, like the research cuts, are sure to arouse anger in medical colleges and hospitals. In the words of one hospital director, "these are crucial programs to apply to patients what we're learning in the research lab, or to learn how to control these serious diseases."

NIXON SEEKS BOOST IN ANTI-TRUST FINES

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Nixon administration will ask Congress to raise the maximum fine which can be levied on corporations convicted of criminal violations of antitrust laws.

The purpose of the proposal is to make it more expensive for corporate antitrust offenders convicted of illegal activity.

Present law, enacted in 1955, sets the maximum amount an individual or corporation can be fined for each criminal antitrust count at $50,000.

●

Under the administration's proposal, already drafted but not yet sent to Congress, this upper limit would be inflated to $500,000 for corporations. The individual limit would remain at $50,000.

Richard McLaren, the justice department's top antitrust official, disclosed the plan Wednesday in an off-the-cuff comment delivered while testifying on another proposal before a Senate judiciary subcommittee.

"We think this (the new $500,000 limit) will be more of a deterrent," McLaren explained.

Several of McLaren's predecessors in the justice department post have remarked on the need for increasing corporate antitrust fines, but no enabling legislation was drafted.

The antitrust official commented favorably on a European Economic Community law which permits antitrust fines as high as 10 per cent of a company's annual gross sales.

Alaska Oil, Manhattan May Cool Middle East

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

New ingredients have been added to the murky mixture of oil and global politics.

The picture of world oil, the fuel that moves economies, always has been bafflingly complicated. Insatiable global demand requires a constant flow of vast seas of it. Any break or threat of break in the flow causes crisis.

Now the picture becomes even more complex because of recent events: a burgeoning Alaska oil boom, the Northwest Passage odyssey, political upheaval in Libya, hostilities in the Middle East, nervousness in the Arabian Peninsula. All these developments raise critically important questions.

Alaska's rivers of black gold should begin flowing from the frozen tundra of the North Slope by 1973. What will be the impact? What is the meaning of the tanker Manhattan's smash through formidable ice to demonstrate that a commercial route to Alaska's oil via the Northwest Passage may be possible?

Where will Alaska's oil go? What will be the effect on recurrent Arab Middle East crises? Will the power of Arab oil to threaten Europe's economies be lessened? Will there be less American dependence on Middle East oil? Will oil lose some of its power as an instrument of Arab politics?

NEED BIG SUPPLY

The importance of oil to any advanced economy can be imagined from the extent of U.S. consumption. In simple terms, to supply the United States today requires about three gallons daily for each man, woman and child in the country. Thus, the status of U.S. reserves is an important national security question.

Alaska's discovery is one of the biggest ever made. Estimates of reserves in the area run as high as 100,000,000,000 barrels, compared with U.S. reserves elsewhere of 40,000,000,000.

Because of oil, recurrent Arab explosions have caused crisis and near-panic elsewhere from time to time. That was so in the Suez crisis of 1956 and again in June, 1967, during the six-day war in which Israel defeated her Arab neighbors.

New discoveries have eased the situation. Europe gets 52 per cent of its oil from North Africa and Nigeria, most of the rest from the Persian Gulf area. But Libya, now an important producer, recently underwent a coup whose leaders promised to point that North African nation toward "Arab socialism."

There is skittishness, too, about the Arabian Peninsula. King Faisal of Saudi Arabia, a major producer, is having trouble with Pan-Arab elements which follow the lead of Egypt's Gamal Abdel Nasser. Should Faisal be toppled, it might not be long before Kuwait, the neighboring oil sheikhdom, went the same way.

In any case, if Arab-Israeli hostilities develop into yet another full-scale war, Arab rulers will be under severe pressure to shut off all supplies of oil to the West.

Thus, oil experts say, Alaska's reserves represent a form of insurance. The United States will be in a safer position to supply Europe on an emergency basis, because the reserves are there—even though Alaskan oil will not be flowing for a few years.

If the Northwest Passage proves profitably usable, this would have great impact. It would bring Europe close to the Alaska source.

Skeptics remain unconvinced, but if the Manhattan's breakthrough should ultimately demonstrate a feasible, safe and short route to the east coast and European markets, the impact a half-dozen years hence—with mammoth new ice-breaking tankers available by then—would be heavy. Europe, then, no longer would be at the mercy of wars and political crises in the Middle East.

CHEAP OIL PROBLEM

Some experts say the extent to which U.S. dependence on foreign oil will be diminished depends upon the status of the quotas which now restricts imports. The argument is that if controls are maintained, Alaskan oil will go primarily to foreign markets. The reason for this, they say, is that lifting of the quotas will permit a heavy flood of foreign oil from the Middle East, Venezuela and elsewhere. Middle East oil in particular is vastly cheaper to produce than U.S. oil and far cheaper to ship, since U.S. oil, by law, must be carried in U.S.-flag ships.

The controversy over import quotas has been going on 30 years, and came to a head during the Eisenhower administration with a decision that national security would be endangered by a liberal policy on imports.

The argument on the other side is that limiting imports keeps cheap foreign oil off the U.S. market and thus costs U.S. consumers heavily, and also that it depletes American reserves.

A presidential committee is reviewing the whole question of quotas, but the argument that the U.S. industry must be kept prosperous because of national security make it doubtful that there will be a drastic break with present practice.

Currently, about 21 per cent of U.S. consumption is foreign oil. Experts say that could be lessened to a point where it would be negligible and pose no threat in time of crisis. Thus, oil producers in the Arab Middle East, for example, would be deprived of considerable leverage.

Pot Cost $750

SMITHERS (CP) — William Daniel Gale, 22, of Prince George Wednesday was fined $750 and sentenced to one day in jail for possession of marijuana. Gale and Emil Nikol of Moricetown, B.C., were arrested in an RCMP check June 21. Nikol was also convicted of possession and will be sentenced Oct. 9.

YALE TO FIGHT STUDENT POWER

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (WP) — In a major dissent against a nationwide trend, Yale president Kingman Brewster Jr. took sharp issue Wednesday night with the argument that students ought to have a formal share in governing universities.

In a speech before the Yale Political Union, Brewster declared that giving students seats on boards and committees "is not the clue to university improvement" and "indeed . . . if carried too far could lead to disaster."

"The political symbolism of participatory democracy is an illusion," he said, "when applied to many of the academic and financial decisions which direct an academic institution."

In its place he offered Yale's students a new nostrum, "administrative accountability," and proposed what he called "radical reform to make real the promise" of that term.

Tanzania Requests UN Nigerian Force

UNITED NATIONS (CP — Tanzania made a strong plea in the General Assembly Wednesday for some form of UN intervention to bring the Nigerian civil war to an end.

Stephen Mhando, Tanzanian foreign minister, said opinion of the majority of African governments to the contrary, the Nigerian-Biafran war is not purely an African problem.

"The United Nations has no excuse for standing idly by," he said. "There is no excuse for ignoring the plight of millions of Biafrans, who for two years have been defending themselves courageously in the face of almost certain destruction."

It was the first plea for UN intervention made in the assembly this year. The war has been mentioned in many policy speeches but most foreign ministers have expressed willingness to accept the feeling of the Organization of African Unity that the war is an African problem that should be settled by Africans.

Tanzania is one of the five countries that recognize Biafra. Zambia, another one' said Tuesday that the two sides should meet at a round table to settle the war.

Mhando said that a war that is being fought on African soil with arms that are supplied by "three" super powers cannot be regarded as a purely African problem. He mentioned that Britain and the Soviet Union are supplying the federal Nigerian forces and openly questioned whether their motives are to achieve a unified Nigeria.

He did not mention the third power, but presumably meant France which in the past have been widely reported to be supplying arms to the Biafrans.

Labor Leads Mixed-Race Election

CAPE TOWN (Reuters) — The defiantly anti-segregation Labor party headed for almost certain victory today in South Africa's first nationwide mixed race election.

With 17 results announced, it had won 13 seats in the new colored persons Representative Council, created by government architects of segregation to be the new political outlet for those officially classified as mixed-race.

But the party still was not certain to gain total control of the council, whose establishment marks the final political separation of the mixed race population from the country's whites.

The council will have 60 members but 20 of them will be nominated by the government later.

Of the 40 elected seats, the Labor party needs only 20 to win the election but 31 to gain over-all power.

Reporter Defects

BELGRADE (AP) — Karl Jezdinsky, Czechoslovak radio correspondent in Yugoslavia, defected to West Germany Wednesday, protesting what he called censorship and purges of journalists in Czechoslovakia. Jezdinsky, 30, said his report from Yugoslavia had been subject to "brutal censorship, which was again introduced in my country in April this year."

Empires Have Been Built On Smaller Distinctions

By LAWRENCE LAURENT
The Washington Post

Just about everyone agreed after seeing a two-hour movie, Marcus Welby, MD (ABC), that the resulting one-hour weekly series would be one of the big hits of the new season.

The title role is played by Robert Young, a kindly, irascible general practitioner who has recovered from a heart attack. After the attack, he took in a partner, Dr. Steven Kiley.

The conflict-partnership that results is between the older man's methods and the younger man's techniques. Welby believes that a patient's family, his work, his temperament and ethnic background must be considered along with scientific evidence.

He keeps telling his young partner that many medical problems don't exist in textbooks.

If this sounds like a new TV version of "Young Dr. Kildare," the point hasn't been missed. Even the executive producer, David Victor, is the same for both programs. The difference, as Victor likes to point out, is that Marcus Welby has his office in his home—not in a hospital.

The difference may be small, but TV empires have been built on smaller distinctions.

LAWSUITS totalling $31 million have been launched against Columbia Broadcasting System by brothers Tom and Dick Smothers. CBS cancelled the popular and controversial Smothers Brothers show in April. The brothers announced the lawsuit total at a Beverly Hills press conference.

BOND'S SUPER SPY CAR BLASTS OFF TO VANCOUVER

VANCOUVER (CP) — The James Bond Aston Martin car, complete with machine guns, ejector seats and bulletproof glass, was purchased Wednesday by Vancouver restauranteur Frank Baker for $20,000.

The car, built at a cost of $47,000 for the movie "Goldfinger", became the property three months ago of London financier K. H. Luscombe-White, who sold it to Baker.

Baker also owns the cars used by King George V and King George VI on their prewar visits to Vancouver, a car driven by Prince Philip at more than 100-miles-an-hour when he and Queen Elizabeth motored through Vancouver Island (leaving the RCMP trailing), a London taxi that travelled more than 250,000 miles during the London blitz and two fire engines.

Youth, Energy, Talent

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — A musical with youthful energy and keen talent, Salvation, opened Wednesday night at off-Broadway's Jan Hus Theatre, a palpable hit.

The rockbeat sound of today roars, rattles and splashes in a no-intermission sequence of honest-to-goodness melody, earthy dance and sassy comment about sundry matters. Yet its ultimate charm—and that's the word—is a scrupulously honest disrespect about a lot of things that avoids actual irreverence or smugness.

Peter Link and C. C. Courtney have written and composed the show in the form of an oldtime revival meeting, with a Bible-thumping scamp to trigger a churning confessional that for a while concentrates upon under-30 fertility rights.

The focus gradually widens for broad and colorfully imaginative assault upon all the fright and frenzy of life in the late 20th century.

SHOWS DISCIPLINE

Adroit visual complements are Joan Larkes's assortment of psychedelic pictorial projections on multiple screens. Paul Aaron's spirited direction and Kathryn Posin's dance arrangements underline the basic discipline of the rattling performance.

The cast, in addition to Link and Courtney, consists of Yolande Bavan, Joe Morton, Boni Enten, Annie Rachel, Marta Heflin and Chapman Roberts—every one a splendid singer and each deserving spotlight attention.

The accompaniment is provided by an on-stage group called Nobody Else.

Release Near For Newsman

LONDON (Reuters) — Reuters correspondent Anthony Grey, confined to his home in Peking for the last 26 months, is expected to have his freedom of movement restored next week, a Reuters spokesman said today.

Chinese authorities have said the 31-year-old British newspaper man will have freedom of movement restored when all Chinese newspaper men detained in Hong Kong are released.

The last Chinese reporters held in the British colony under anti-riot regulations is scheduled for release Oct. 2.

"We know of nothing that has happened to change this situation," the Reuters spokesman said.

A foreign office spokesman said: "The position remains that the Chinese authorities have informed us that when the Chinese newsworkers in prison in Hong Kong are released Mr. Grey's freedom of movement will be restored."

SINGER Catherine McKinnon has quit Arc Sound because the company wants her to continue recording contemporary folk material while she wants to do some Broadway tunes. "Besides," says Arc executive Bill Gilliland, "we've replaced her with a discovery, 19-year-old folk singer Laurel Ward from Manitoba and we've planned great things for her."

There's Millions In Those Failures

By GENE HANDSAKER

—"Elizabeth Taylor had a three-flop year," weekly Variety headlined a listing of 1968 movie grosses. Yet Liz collects $1,000,000 or more a picture.

—Not even Julie Andrews' charm could rescue the $11,000,000 Star! A studio source admits: "Star! is a dud." But Julie, too, is a $1,000,000-a-flick actress.

"We've all had our flops," says Richard Zanuck, young production boss of 20th Century-Fox. "But the interesting thing, that's always baffled me, is if you make a lot of little flops you can get run out of the business.

"If you make big, smashing flops, you can keep going longer.

"The most successful failures in the business have made millions. The key has been that they made gigantic flops. They've always been associated with big stars, big projects. They're on the A team."

Variety said The Comedians, Reflections in a Golden Eye and Boom! subjected Miss Taylor "to some discount as box-office insurance."

Yet Liz gets either $1,000,000 a picture or 10 per cent of its worldwide gross rental to theatres—whichever is greater.

So does her husband, Richard Burton. The Burtons receive, besides, $100,000 in living expenses while working.

Says a veteran Hollywood observer: "For Marlon Brando, everything in the last several years has been one disaster after another: Mutiny on the Bounty, The Ugly American, The Appaloosa, The Countess from Hong Kong, Reflections in a Golden Eye.

"Yul Brynner has had scarcely a hit since The King and I, yet he remains a star."

Informed sources estimate Brando's services would cost $400,000 to $500,000 a picture and Brynner's $300,000.

ALL HAVE FLOPS

Says Jimmy Stewart: "Gary Cooper always said that if two pictures out of five are good, you're doing well, which I think is modest. I think that with three out of five you're doing all right. I've had some that just went out and died."

Right now, Hollywood sources say, Gregory Peck gets $600,000 a picture; Rock Hudson $500,000; Kirk Douglas $300,000-$400,000; Burt Lancaster $600,000-$650,00; and Glenn Ford about $300,000.

Yet it has been some time since that any of them have been associated with what is commonly called a smash hit, either critically or at the box-office.

Why then are studios willing to pay that kind of money? Especially when recipients have had box-office and-or critical flops?

It's because stars have a mystique, or charisma or, more simply, a loyal following that producers hope will throng box-offices, cash in hand.

"The Burtons are public figures who excite a large part of the population with their personal life," says a press agent. "They can do two or three bombs and still have staying power from the affection in which they're held by the public."

Police Seek Two Men After Slaying

CINCINNATI (AP) — Acting on a tip from a man in custody, authorities hoped to track down two other men wanted for questioning following the fatal shooting of four women during a robbery at a small savings and loan office.

Lieut. Herbert Vogel, chief of detectives, said an all-points bulletin was issued early today for the pair and that the manhunt was being intensified.

Vogel said that one man among several taken into custody earlier had undergone questioning and put investigators on the trail of two companions.

Authorities would give no other details about the investigation. No charges were filed.

The manhunt followed the robbery Wednesday by three men of the Cabinet-Supreme Savings and Loan Associaton in which the gunmen herded four women—including an employee who was a policeman's wife—into the vault and shot them.

The robbery netted $275.

The victims were Lillian DeWald, a secretary for the firm and a wife of Cincinnati Patrolman Walter DeWald; and three customers—Mrs. Joseph Huebner, 46; Henrietta Stitzel, 59, and her sister-in-law Luella Stitzel, 61.

Coroner Frank Cleveland said Mrs. DeWald was shot in the back four times and the other women were shot once in the head with a .25-calibre pistol.

The robbers, all believed to be in their 20s and white, fled in a car that was later found abandoned. One man wore a beard.

Diggers Unearth Settlers

ST. STEPHEN, N.B. (CP) — Bones of Canada's first white settlers have been unearthed in United States territory on St. Croix Island, also called Dochet's Island, in the St. Croix River forming part of the international border dividing New Brunswick and Maine.

Samuel de Champlain chose the island for settlement when he began to colonize North America for France 365 years ago. He had about 80 men, but some 35 died of starvation and scurvy in that winter of 1604-05 before the survivors set up a more successful habitation in the spring at Port Royal, in what now is Nova Scotia.

★ ★ ★

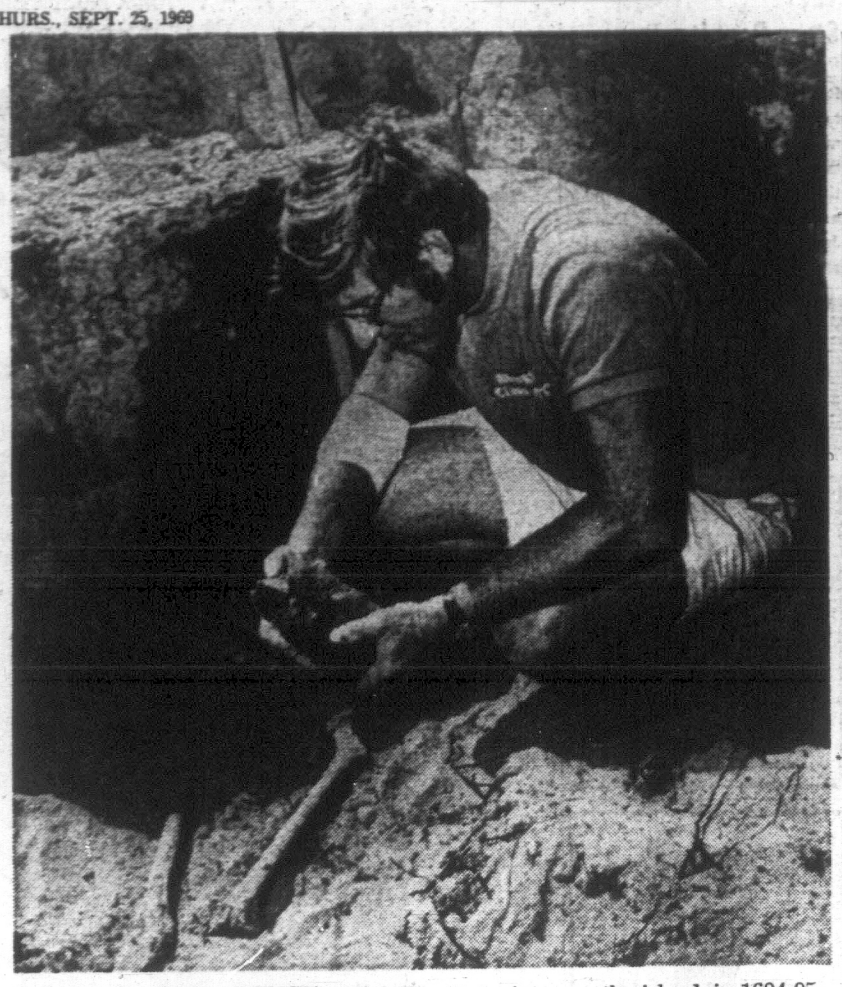

A field team sponsored by the U.S. national parks service spent much of this summer investigating three centuries of layers on the island, found the ancient graveyard and identified the remains of 23 men. Their teeth showed unmistakable evidence of death from scurvy.

Dr. J. W. Gruber of Temple University in Philadelphia led the study. His team included Dr. Elizabeth Gell as assistant director and 13 students in anthropology and archeology.

They found, in addition to artefacts left by the French settlers, others believed to date back to Indian use more than 2,000 years ago—primitive stone weapons, tools and clamshells.

The student diggers came from Temple University, University of Arizona, Oberlin College in Ohio and Bryn Mawr College in Philadelphia.

CN SAYS NO BEARD

Driver Wants Arbitration

TORONTO (CP) — A CN Express truck driver says he will ask for an arbitration board ruling if company officials stand by their demand that he shave off his beard.

Daniel Killam, 23, a father of two, was suspended two weeks ago for refusing to shave off his goatee. Company policy is that employees who meet the public must be clean-shaven.

Mr. Killam said he would meet today with the grievanc officer of Local 327, Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, to try to find a solution to the dispute.

"If I'm offered a job on the clerical staff at no drop in pay, I'll take the job and will be able to keep the beard," he said.

"If, however, the company decides I must keep my present job, I'll shave the beard and ask for a ruling from the arbitration board."

Cons Cheer Strike End

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Prisoners in Sydney's Long Bay jail cheered today when they heard through the grapevine that the jail's 200 warders had voted to return to work after a two-day strike.

Most of the jail's 1,630 prisoners had been confined to their cells by a small emergency staff since the strike began over the dismissal of a warder who was convicted of assaulting a prisoner.

The dismissed warder is to appeal his firing.

U.S. Senate Passes $75M Rent Subsidy

The proposal to provide $75,000,000 for rent subsidies was included in the $6,300,000,000 housing bill passed by voice vote.

Under the measure, the government for the first time would pay a portion of the rent of some public housing tenants and might even provide the entire amount for families in the most dismal circumstances.

Senator Edward W. Brooke (Rep.-Mass.) sponsored the Senate plan that would make it possible for the government to pay that part of the rent of a public housing tenant which exceeds 25 per cent of his income.

The bill contains other provisions aimed at public housing.

One of these would make it possible for the government for the first time to pay a part of the operating and maintenance costs of the projects.

In addition, the bill permits about a 55-per-cent increase in public housing construction costs in high cost areas such as New York City.

Swing-Wing U.S. Fighters For Australia

CANBERRA (Reuters) — Prime Minister John Gorton announced Tuesday that Australia will accept 24 F-111 aircraft it has ordered from the United States, subject to successful testing and with certain cost safeguards.

Gorton's statement, which gave no firm delivery date for the swing-wing fighter-bombers, said a team of Australian experts sent to the U.S. to study progress on the aircraft had decided it was "the best aircraft in the world" for the purposes of the Royal Australian Air Force.

He defended the plane's safety record as "better for example than the Super Sabre or the Phantom."

His statement said the agreed ceiling price was $5,954,000 for each aircraft, plus $1,500,000 for higher costs and modifications.

HOME GARDEN

Planting Season to Follow Rains

By HILDA BEASTALL

Conditions for planting will be just about perfect during the first dry spell after the September rains. The new gardening year will then begin in earnest. Most of our plans should be complete by this time but there are always a few spots in the garden for which we want special plants.

Hilda

Today we consider some with silver grey foliage, requiring full exposure to sun and thriving best in a well-drained soil with little watering needed even in summer.

One of these silvery plants seen in our parks the last three or four years is Cineraria maritima "Silverdust." It has proved most satisfactory for bed edgings and although the parks use it as an annual, the home gardener can keep the plants over winter and they will increase in size each year.

This hardy grey cineraria has beautifully silvered, cut leaves on plants growing to about 12 inches in height.

The artemisias are another family which contributes lovely silver-colored plants quite hardy to our variable weather.

Liking sunny dryish positions they fill the need for something delicately attractive in rock corners, in brown planter boxes on patios or balconies, or in groups where the sun is too hot and drying for anything else.

The most attractive of this group for its fine grey foliage is Artemisia "Silver Mound" or as sometimes known, Schmidtiana nana.

It reaches about five inches in height, with its mound of thread-like silvery leaves spreading to a foot or so in time.

Taller silver-grey hardy plants are Artemisia "Silver King" (apparently the same as "Silver Queen") to three feet with slender stems; Senecio laxifolius (greyi) of larger shrub habit; Phlomis fruticosa, a woody grey-green shrub to four feet, and Santolina incana, one of the greyest, with tiny leaves.

All these shrubby plants are better colored and hardier if cut back quite severely in early April just as growth begins. This encourages plentiful new growth which has the best silver coloring. It also prevents unattractive legginess.

Any of these grey-leaved plants are equally desirable in balcony planters as in sunny beds at ground level.

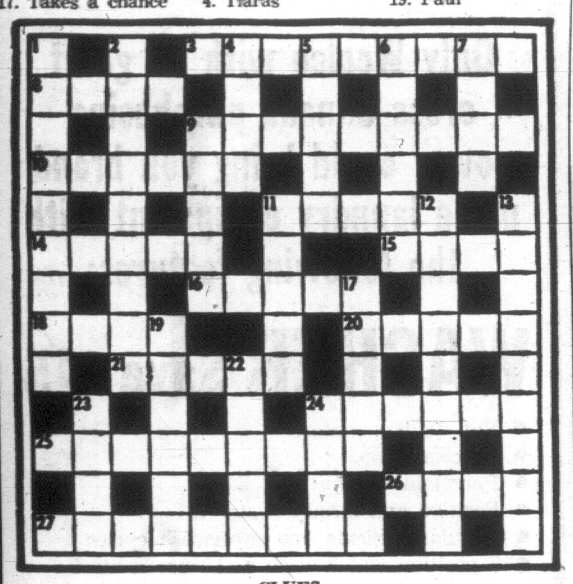

Apartment balconies are now an area to be considered carefully when fall and spring plantings are being discussed.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

When the deal diagramed here arose in the Masters Team-of-Four Championships of 1945, Waldemar von Zedtwitz and Lee Hazen were sitting West and East respectively. They came up with an inspired — and well-reasoned — defence to defeat South's game contract.

Neither side vulnerable. West deals.

Opening lead: King of ♡

After his king of hearts had won the opening lead, von Zedtwitz paused for reflection. By perceiving the dummy and his own hand, it became apparent that East had just about nothing in the way of high-card strength. Hence, East's raise to two hearts had to be based on four hearts, and, in all probability, the queen of clubs.

And so, to lead another heart at trick two figured to be a losing play, since South would trump it. Instead, at trick two, von Zedtwitz banged down his king of clubs!

Dummy won this lead with the ace, and a trump was then led, South's king being taken by West's ace. West now returned his remaining club to East's 10, after which East laid down the queen of clubs. As is obvious, West ruffed this lead with the eight of trumps, for the setting trick.

Despite East-West's excellent defensive play, South should have fulfilled his contract. When West played the king of clubs at trick two, it should have been permitted to win the trick. It would then have become impossible for East to have obtained the lead subsequently; and West would never have gotten around to ruffing a third club lead.

What is also noteworthy is East's play of the third club, rather than a heart. The explanation is a simple one: since West had not chosen to play a second heart at trick two, and had elected to make the gambling play of the club king instead, West must have known that South had no more hearts. So East correctly followed West's line of defence.

Aid for Venice

PARIS (Reuters) — Moves to help the Italian government save Venice from sinking into the sea were announced here Wednesday by the United Nations Education, Scientific and Cultural Organization. It decided to ask Director-General Rene Maheu to help Italy draw up a plan of action. Venice has sunk 5.3 inches since 1908 and unless something is done two-thirds of the city is expected to be under water by 1990.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Governing Country Was Rugged Task

By BOB BOWMAN

Some of the governors and lieutenant-governors who served in Canada during the struggle for responsible government appear to have been stuffy characters of the Colonel Blimp type, but they did not spare themselves. Durham, Metcalfe, Sydenham and Bagot all died from their exertions in Canada, the last two while they were in Kingston, Ontario, which was the capital.

John Graves Simcoe, the first lieutenant-governor of Upper Canada, lived in a tent formerly owned by Captain Cook when he was building York as the capital, and travelled throuth a large part of his domain between 1792 and 1796.

One of his first trips began in February 1793 when he was looking for a suitable site for a new capital. Newark (Niagara-on-the-Lake) was too close to the U.S. border. He travelled by horse and sleigh through backwoods trails, camping in the snow at night, and walked along the shore of Lake Erie when a sudden thaw caused the snow to disappear.

On another trip that began on September 25, 1973, Simcoe, his wife, and party, were in danger of starving to death. They went from York to Lake Huron by canoe and portage, and shot the rapids in the Severn River to Matchedash Bay. On the return trip an Indian guide disappeared with a large quantity of supplies, and there was only enough food to last two days. Then the party lost its way and the situation became critical until Simcoe found a surveyor's line that ran to Lake Ontario. The party celebrated by eating the last of its carefully conserved food when it was three miles from York.

CHILDREN BLAMED FOR CLASSROOM FIRE

Saanich fire officials said children shoved burning matches through the knotholes in the wooden structure's outer wall, but the quality of construction of the classroom, built by students at Victoria High School, saved it from destruction.

The fire, first noticed at 5 p.m., was confined to a foot-wide strip of wall

Islam's Summit Talks Break Down

RABAT (AP) — The Islamic summit conference broke down Wednesday night after Pakistani President Mohammed Yahya Khan refused to sit in the same meeting with a Moslem member of the Indian government.

In an effort to present a facade of Islamic unity against Israel, conference leaders suspended the final plenary session in this Moroccan capital, which was to have approved resolutions denouncing Israel, demanding the return of all Arab territory occupied in the 1967 war, and endorsing the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The summit meeting began Monday and was to have ended Wednesday. Yahya Khan's boycott plunged it into disarray. Delegation chiefs met behind closed doors until midnight Wednesday night, then announced that the conference would continue today.

Yahya Khan on Tuesday had agreed to inviting a delegation representing the Hindu nation's 60,000,000 Moslems. But he balked when India sent its minister of power, Fakhrouddin Ali Ahmed, at the head of the delegation. The Pakistani leader indicated only a non-governmental group was acceptable to him, not one representing the government with which his government has warred for years over Kashmir.

SOME OPPOSE

Some delegations urged withdrawal of the invitation to the Indians, but Algerian President Houari Boumedienne and other Arab leaders opposed this. On the other side, Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi of Iran and Turkish Foreign Minister Ihsan Caglaeangi assured Yahya Khan they would not attend a plenary session unless he did.

An Algerian spokesman attributed the Iranian and Turkish support for the Pakistani chief to their "well known military alignment." The three non-Arab nations are members of the Central Treaty Organization.

The Islamic conference was called to deplore the Aug. 21 fire in the Al Aksah Mosque in Jerusalem and to rally the world's 500,000,000 Moslems against Israel's annexation of the Arab sector of the city. But the resolutions drawn up for the conference to approve go far beyond that with their expression of support for the displaced Palestinian Arabs and their guerrilla campaign against Israel.

BLAMES NEGLIGENCE

In Jerusalem, a special commission of Israeli Jews and Arabs named to investigate the mosque fire said Wednesday that negligence by Al Aksah's administrators had been a major factor.

The Israeli-appointed commission said the Moslem Benevolent council, or Waqf, had failed to instruct its employees in the use of firefighting equipment, and that one of the mosque's guards had seen the Australian accused of setting the fire enter the mosque at an hour when visitors were forbidden but had not informed his superiors.

"This may have been done deliberately, in breach of duty, but may have been done inadvertently, through negligence only," the commission said.

The Australian, Michael Rohan, goes on trial Oct. 6. The commission blamed the fire on arson but said it did not want to speculate on who was guilty because it did not want to prejudice the outcome of the trial.

Allied Casualties Reduced

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. and South Vietnamese battlefield deaths dropped last week to their lowest levels in the last six weeks, headquarters announced today.

The U.S. command said 135 Americans were killed in action, the lowest toll since the week of Aug. 3-9 when 96 Americans died.

South Vietnamese battlefield deaths last week dropped to 297, compared with more than 500 during each of the previous two weeks. It was the lowest government toll since Aug. 3-9, when 225 government soldiers were reported killed.

The U.S. and South Vietnam commands reported killing 2,627 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong soldiers last week, compared to 2,361 reported last Thursday.

"The enemy activity continued to decrease last week, especially at week's end," the Saigon government said. "Compared to that of the previous week, it has come down by 29 per cent."

U.S. fighter-bombers bombed a North Vietnamese munitions depot 47 miles northwest of Saigon Wednesday, killed 22 soldiers guarding it and blew up a large store of rockets and mortar shells.

Mars Shots In May to Map Landing Sites

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The next spacecraft U.S. scientists send to Mars may play a major role in deciding whether men will visit the Red Planet.

Major mission of Mariners VIII and IX, scheduled to be launched a week apart in May, 1971, is to map 70 per cent of the Martian surface and find sites suitable for unmanned landings in 1973.

The 2,200-pound vehicles will be programmed to orbit as close as 1,000 miles for up to a year with television cameras capable of showing objects the size of a football field.

The cameras and electronic sensors are expected to return enough information to help planners decide whether manned exploration is feasible.

The success of Mariners VI and VII last August prompted proposals for manned landings in the next decade—and controversy over whether such a project would be worth its multi-billion-dollar cost.

Eskimos Ask Ban on Alaska Oil Leases

SEATTLE (AP) — The Arctic Slope Native Association, an Alaska group, has asked U.S. Interior Secretary Walter Hickel to oust the state of Alaska and the oil industry from the North Slope.

Oilmen recently paid the state about $900,000,000 for oil and gas leases in the Prudhoe Bay area of the North Slope, and the state has granted other leases in earlier sales.

The area is estimated to contain 40,000,000,000 barrels of oil, or as much as the total known reserves in the rest of the North American continent.

Frederick Paul of Seattle, attorney for the native association made the request in a letter to Hickel dated Sept. 22. Hickel, he said, is the U.S. officer responsible for enforcing the rights of U.S. Indians as their guardian.

"The Eskimos of the North Slope," Mr. Paul wrote, "have a right of occupancy and use to the entire North Slope and have had such since time immemorial."

Ontario Airfleet Kept Busy

By FRED HAMILTON

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's provincial air service is one of several in Canada, but the province's 43-plane fleet is better known abroad than to many Ontario residents.

Ontario's aircraft and techniques, built up from a small beginning 45 years ago, have been adopted in many areas in the war against an enemy that knows no national boundaries—fire.

At the Canadian National Exhibition here earlier this year, Ontario water-bombers dropped curtains of water around a brush fire set on vacant land at the CNE grounds—the government's way of showing taxpayers why Ontario is a world leader in developing new ways of protecting forests worth many millions of dollars.

It was a routine assignment for the three lands and forests department pilots taking part, all of them veterans of hundreds of low-level missions over the province's 313,060 square miles of forest.

The greenhorn of the three, Chuck Thompson, had more than 5,000 hours of official flying time to his credit at the end of 1968; George Beaushene had more than 6,000 hours and Reg Parsons had logged almost 9,000 hours in department aircraft.

USED FLYING BOATS

They aren't unusual among the department's 39 pilots—three are credited with more than 10,000 hours and one, D. J. Lefeuvre, has a record of more than 11,000 hours flying time.

Since the air service section of the department was formed in 1924, using First World War flying boats, its pilots have flown some half a million hours under some of the most hazardous conditions imaginable, with the loss of only 26 aircraft and 24 lives.

In its first year the air service section, formed to combat forest fires that annually were destroying hundreds of square miles of timber, kept 20 HS2L flying boats in the air for 2,500 hours.

Last year 50 planes flew for 15,905 hours.

The aircraft demonstrated at the CNE—a de Havilland Twin Otter and two de Havilland Beavers, all turbo-powered and supported by a leased Hughes 500 jet helicopter—showed the sophistication that 45 years have brought.

The department has another two Twin Otters, 26 more Turbo-Beavers, 10 Otters, one propeller Beaver and a Beechcraft Duke, used for flying personnel and equipped with the new infra-red gun which pinpoints ground-fires little larger than a burning match and draws a map showing where they are located.

FLEET IS SMALLER

It's a smaller but more efficient fleet than last year, when the department sold six of its old propeller Beavers and the Widgeon it purchased in 1956.

Ontario still doesn't own any helicopters—to the regret of Tom Cooke, air service supervisor stationed at Sault Ste. Marie where most of the pilots are based—but it leases five and has been using them since about 1960.

They have proved tremendously useful to the fire-fighters, hovering to direct air traffic over a blaze, dropping cargo and personnel, picking up water from nearby ponds and dropping it with pinpoint accuracy.

EARLY START

Stavanger, in Norway's Fjord country, was founded in the year 1100.

But their load capacity is limited, and the Turbo-Beavers and Twin Otters have become the workhorses of the department.

The Beaver's ability to make short landings and take-offs from virtually inaccessible small lakes has made it a best-seller around the world for countries with a wilderness frontier, and its 140-gallon water capacity makes it an ideal fire-fighting aircraft.

The Twin Otters carry even more water—450 gallons or 2¼ tons in specially designed floats. And their ability to reverse, turn and circle either in the air or on the water have made them an international bush-flying favorite.

COVER BIG AREA

When water bombing was adopted in fire-fighting many years ago, the missiles broke at tree-top level or below and covered only a small area.

Working with aircraft manufacturers, department pilots developed ways of spraying huge quantities of water from the planes, covering a broader area and damping down a fire until ground crews could attack with hand tools and hoselines.

Today's planes are equipped to taxi across a lake picking up water through special suction tubes and filling tanks built into the aircraft floats. It was an idea originating with department pilots and developed by Field Aviation at Malton, Ont.

A water-bombing Twin Otter can dump 8,000 gallons of water on a fire every hour if the fire is within two miles of a lake or river.

There have been fires, however, so hot and fierce that the densest aerial waterstorm was turned to steam before it reached ground level.

FIRE DAMAGE LESS

To control them, department planes recently began using gelgard, a fire-retarding chemical. Mixed with the water as the aircraft makes a pickup and colored pink so that the pilot can observe accuracy of his drops, gelgard makes the water adhere to trees before they have become fuel, cooling them out and controlling the boundaries of the blaze.

Statistics are dry, but they tell the story of how successful Ontario's air force has been in preserving valuable forests from fire.

With more people making more use of the forests, the number of fires in the province grows from year to year. But the number of acres burned has steadily decreased as more planes, new techniques and sophisticated equipment came into play. Last year, for example, there were 1,219 forest fires, but each one burned an average of only eight acres. In 1923 there were 1,343 fires, each one destroying 1,579 acres of forest.

There have been bad fires since planes came into use—one in 1961 burned 1,125,000 acres near Sioux Lookout, 13 years after a similarly large Mississagi blaze in 1948—and there will be more.

But there are longer intervals between major fires now, and history should never again ring as frequently as it has in the past with the stories of conflagrations: 1901, Lake Kesagami, 3,000 square miles; 1910, Rainy River, 300 square miles, 42 dead; 1911, Porcupine, 864 square miles, 73 dead; 1916, Matheson, 1,000 square miles, 223 dead; 1922, Haileybury, 2,000 square miles, 44 lives lost.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

Today's best television shows as previewed and selected by a staff of experts who watch screenings, attend rehearsals and analyze scripts in New York and Hollywood.

FAMILY AFFAIR. (Season's Premiere). A new time for the former Monday night winner opens its fourth season operating under the handicap of Anissa Jones' trials with her broken leg. Tonight, Anissa as Buffy, looking a little pale, sits down in most of her scenes and keeps movement to a minimum. The story revolves around Uncle Bill who's having a weekend at home without the family. Instead of peace and quiet, however, he's besieged by neighbors of all sizes and shapes. This show belongs to Brian Keith, and he plays a patient man pushed to the point of blowing his top for once. (Color) 7:30 PM CBS.

JIM NABORS HOUR. (Premiere). The Alabama kid gets a weekly variety hour to himself, and he's anxious to assure his fans tonight he's not about to become a city slicker. Jim appears in Marine garb and strips to mufti before introducing pal Andy Griffith, who switches character, playing a tough sheriff anxious to crush college kid Nabors in the show's top moments. Frank Sutton, Gomer's Sgt. Carter, pretends to play a mean guitar in an engaging monologue, then joins Nabors and Karen Morrow in a weekly "Brothers-in-Law" sketch that tends to drag. Guest Julie Budd sounds like a smaller Streisand in two numbers, and Jim closes the hour with the stirring "Impossible Dream." (Color) 8:00 PM CBS.

THAT GIRL. "Mission Improbable." Part II. The conclusion of this bright and breezy two-parter finds Ann Marie caught in the middle of a family feud between two brothers in the garment industry. Ann discovers that Lou Jacobi, who hired her to spy on nice guy Avery Schreiber, is actually Avery's brother and she does her best (or worst) to get the two together again. The dialogue is funny and the cast plays it for all its worth. (Color) 8:00 PM ABC.

THURSDAY NIGHT MOVIE. "The Guns of Navarone." (1961) Part I. One of the best World War II adventure films. A great cast headed by Gregory Peck, Anthony Quinn, David Niven, Stanley Baker and Irene Papas, bolsters this superb tension-filled tale involving a group of heterogeneous soldies and Greek guerrilla fighters who must destroy one of the most heavily guarded German fortresses in the Aegean. The suspense is infinite and the yarn unfolds in excellent scenes shot on-location in the Greek Isles. Don't miss this marvelous movie which will be shown in two-parts beginning tonight and ending tomorrow. (Color) 9:00 PM CBS.

THIS IS TOM JONES. Season's Premiere). Our Welsh singing star opens the season with a blockbuster cast. Guest Sammy Davis, Jr., sings a raft of songs alone in duet with Tom Jones, and joins his host and guest, wacky Jo Anne Worley, for a show highlight, "I'm-She's A Woman." Numbers range from Tom Jones' solos to "Love Me Tonight," "I'll Never Fall in Love Again," among others, to "Hey There," "Come Back to Me" from Sammy, and "We Do It" by Jo Anne. (Color) 9:00 PM ABC.

DEAN MARTIN. Elke Sommer and David Janssen give the hour a gamorous look. Miss Sommer wants to demonstrate that she can do more than display a profile and joins the men in a salesmen routine, sings with Dino, and tops it all off with a saucy burlesque number. Urbane David Janssen gives Dean a chess lesson; Don Rice III comes on for a monologue; and capable Charles Nelson Reilly of "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir," joins the variety show circuit after a season of waiting to be asked. (Color) 10:00 PM NBC.

IT TAKES A THIEF. (Season's Premiere) "Saturday Night in Venice." A nifty espionage yarn and the on-location splendor of Venice, usher in the new season. A beautiful Soviet spy slips Al Mundy (Robert Wagner) a deadly "mickey" at the outset of this tale, and he spends the rest of the hour trying to come up with an antidote. The Russians want to exchange Mundy's life for an important coded computer part Munday lifted, but the SIA turns a deaf ear to the proposal. Last-minute manoeuvres keep the story tight and the fans should enjoy it. (Color) 10:00 PM ABC.

Union-NDP Ties Attacked

VANCOUVER (CP) — Liberal leader Pat McGeer said Wednesday the British Columbia Federation of Labor should sever its connection with the New Democratic Party.

He told a Liberal Association meeting in suburban Burnaby that labor's association with the NDP is damaging to union members since the unions are always bargaining from a position of weakness.

He said union members "obviously do not approve of the affiliation."

"That was shown in the election."

Dr. McGeer said no power group should be officially committed to any political party. "People join unions because of their job and if they want political affiliation they can join the party of their choice."

Port's Future Under Review

WINNIPEG (CP) — Premier Ed Schreyer said today the idea of the three Prairie Provinces operating the northern Manitoba port of Churchill will likely be discussed at a meeting next Monday of the Prairie Economic Council.

The council is a body comprising the premiers of the three provinces and their advisers. It was set up to provide a platform for the exchange of ideas on matters of common interest.

Schreyer told reporters it has been suggested in certain quarters that Churchill will never be fully developed beyond its present grain handling facilities unless the port's operation is taken out of the hands of the National Harbors Board.

EATON'S WORLD IMPORT FAIR

Cannon Bucks Moral Decay's 'Howling' Wind

By SUSAN RILEY

NORTH COWICHAN — Introduction of Sunday sports and entertainment here would be another step towards the moral decay of civilization, Ald. John Cannon said Wednesday.

"To speak against Sunday sports is like howling against a hurricane, but I'm voting against it," he told council after first reading of a Sunday sports and entertainment bylaw.

His was the only dissenting voice although Mayor Don Morton said he is against "wide-open Sundays."

DERBY

Rather than getting customary three readings Wednesday, the bylaw will be read a second and third time at later meetings.

"Some might be in favor of just Sunday sports and not Sunday entertainment. By stopping proceedings after two readings it gives us a chance to amend the bylaw if we want," said Morton.

If passed, the bylaw will go to the people in December.

In February a bylaw for funds to build a firehall in Maple Bay will be presented to Maple Bay Fire Protection District residents, council decided.

'MOST PRESSING'

Ald. Tom Burge said a fire marshall's report called the Maple Bay's need for a fire hall "most pressing."

Burge's fire committee originally recommended purchase of new fire trucks plus a fire hall. In view of the marshall's report that there is sufficient fire-fighting equipment in the area, Burge said the fire hall takes top priority.

His committee also recommended a one-alarm system for four neighboring volunteer fire squads.

CHEAPER, BETTER

One phone would be set up in the Duncan RCMP office. When the alarm or phone sounded the appropriate force would be alerted by the police radio alarm.

It would be cheaper and more efficient than the present multi-alarm system, said Burge.

Four more letters from Arbutus Road residents complaining about hunters on Maple Mountain were read to council.

"Arbutus Road is now populated to an extent where hunting is no longer compatible with the basic use the area is put to. It is a residential area," wrote Fred Green.

Morton said Arbutus Road, which is an oceanside Maple Bay residential area, is already off limits for hunters but "it may be a question of enforcing the ban more strictly."

He said council will hear a presentation from the Cowichan Fish and Game Association next week before making a decision.

Midnight Kiss Worth $750 In Courtenay

COURTENAY, (CP) — An after-midnight kiss has cost an amorous young Courtenay man $750 and a day in jail.

That's the price a provincial court judge told Frederick Gordon Kerton, 23, Tuesday he would have to pay for climbing into a married woman's bedroom and waking her with a kiss.

Once awake, Mrs. Sharon Olivia St. Dennis told Kerton whom she said she had gone to school with, to leave. He did — but warned her to lock the window or he "would be back."

Mrs. St. Dennis told the court that Kerton had explained to her that a former resident of the house had let him "come in and sleep" when he wanted to.

Mrs. Mary Ellen Edwards testified she had let Kerton in her bedroom when she lived in the house.

Debris Threatens Chemainus Water

NORTH COWICHAN — Logging debris around the edges of Holyoak Lake is threatening to block Chemainus' water supply, Ald. Jerry Smith said Wednesday.

Smith said the lake, 20 miles west of Chemainus, is surrounded by felled trees, stumps, and branches. As water in the lake rises it will carry debris over a central dam and jam the water outlet at the head of the lake.

Pacific Logging Co. owns the land and should be forced to clear away debris, Smith said.

The municipality has water rights but the logging company owns all land adjoining the lake. Smith said North Cowichan made informal inquiries about buying a quarter-mile strip around the lake and was told it would cost $400,000.

"So they own the lake and it looks like there is nothing we can do," said Smith.

North Cowichan will consult with the municipal affairs department this week to see if the province can bring pressure to bear on the company, Smith said.

Mayor Don Morton said he'll visit Health Minister Ralph Loffmark if all else fails.

Quamichan Flights To Use Kinsmen Park

DUNCAN — A daily airlift from Quamicham Lake to Vancouver has been approved in principle by Duncan Kinsmen, president Tom Stanko said Wednesday.

The club has given Air West Airlines permission to dock at Art Mann Kinsmen Park off Indian Road, beside the lake.

The airline already has Department of Transport approval to land on the lake, Stanko said.

Kinsmen are now working out an agreement with North Cowichan municipality regarding the airline's contract after the Kinsmen turn the park over to the municipality.

As soon as Kinsmen have the park fixed up it becomes public property and "monthly rent from these people will help our work along," said Stanko.

FEAR REPEAT OF TIDAL WAVE DISASTER

Island Communities Protest Atom Blast

Protests over American plans to test an underground nuclear bomb in the Aleutians are beginning to come from Vancouver Island communities.

With the test expected sometime in the next three weeks, residents of Port Alberni are sending protest letters to President Nxon.

In 1964, a tidal wave, set off by an Alaska earthquake, did damage estimated at $5 million to homes and businesses after rushing up the 35-mile Alberni Inlet.

Residents fear the same thing will happen with the nuclear test according to a survey by the Alberni Valley Times.

Monday night, Port Alberni council decided to ask Tom Barnett, MP for Comox-Alberni, to register an official protest with the federal government.

The council of Campbell River is sending a letter of protest to UN Secretary-General U Thant. The Chamber of Commerce is also protesting to the UN.

Residents of the area are circulating a petition to be forwarded to Prime Minister Trudeau, asking him to intervene with the U.S. government on Canada's behalf.

The federal government has already warned Washington it will hold the U.S. responsible for any damage done in Canada as a result of the tests.

Action in the communities results from scientists' fears that a nuclear explosion in the Aleutians, near the Pacific Fault, could cause earthquakes and tidal waves along the West Coast.

Bus Line Purchase, Open Sundays Approved by Nanaimo Voters

NANAIMO — Ratepayers in Nanaimo and four rural areas on Wednesday approved purchase of Nanaimo Transit Ltd. by the regional district board.

The board will now purchase two buses for $75,000 and the company for $67,000. It will mean continued service for Nanaimo and parts of nearby Harewood, Northfield, Departure Bay and Wellington.

Transit manager Dave Swithin had predicted that, if ratepayers voted against the purchase, Nanaimo would be without bus service by Oct. 15

The ratepayers also voted in favor of paid entertainment on Sunday afternoons. The vote was 1,200 in favor and 271 against.

There were 6,885 ratepayers and 181 tenants eligible to vote.

Ald. Ken Medland said Nanaimo will soon have Sunday movies.

The bus referendum was common to Nanaimo, Departure Bay, Northfield, Wellington and Harewood.

The vote breakdown showed Harewood, 347 yes, 135 no; Northfield, 179 yes, 48 no; Departure Bay, 302 yes, 80 no.

Nanaimo voted 927 yes and 521 no.

As a result of the vote, a two-thirds-of-a-mill levy will be assessed the ratepayers within the area from which the voters' list was compiled.

CRIMINAL CODE CHANGES URGENT

Probers Slam 'Soft Crime' Laws

OTTAWA (CP) — The Ouimet committee on corrections recommends as urgently needed a comprehensive review and revision of the Criminal Code.

The committee, in its report released today, says continued piecemeal revision of the code will only "add further confusion."

It says that any act that is not substantially damaging to society should be removed from the code.

Murder, rape, theft and assault did not require extensive justification. The consequences to the victim obviously were grave.

But who were the victims of drunkenness, vagrancy, sale of contraceptives or marijuana use?

"There is considerable evidence to suggest that in prohibiting certain kinds of conduct and imposing criminal sanctions upon its occurrence, one may be providing the most effective and corrupting kind of publicity for the practice rather than the prohibition," the report says. "The practices of smoking marijuana and sniffing model glue come immediately to mind."

Drunkenness was regarded by many as a social deficiency that could be better dealt with by social or medical agencies than by the courts. Was vagrancy a crime or a "social misfortune" better dealt with by the welfare system?

Many regarded the sale of contraceptives as a matter of morals rather than crime.

A royal commission or committee should be established to weed through the "grey area" of the code, last revised in the early 1950s.

Justice Minister John Turner has plans to create a national law reform commission in this area.

The Ouimet committee emphasizes, however, that a comprehensive revision must be made. Unless an act represented a serious threat to society, it shouldn't be described as criminal.

The royal commission's job would be to develop a system of classification "that would distinguish between acts on a more realistic basis."

The terms now used to describe serious crimes were inadequate. Murder was applied to everything from killing during an armed robbery to mercy killing.

"Rape may range from over-aggressive seduction to kidnapping and sexual assault by a gang of ruffians."

The report says criminal law should be applied "with a minimum of harm to the offender."

With this in mind, the law should provide for discretion at every stage: arrest, prosecution, conviction, sentence and correction.

Police should be able to decide whether to lay a charge and, if it is laid, whether to release an accused or hold him in custody.

The prosecution should be able to decide whether to go ahead with the original charge or a lesser one.

"The court should have the power to dispose of a case without conviction and should have a wide range of alternatives open when a sentence must be imposed."

Prison Use 'Last Resort'

OTTAWA (CP)—The Ouimet committee on corrections says the basic purpose of criminal justice should be to protect society, and the offender himself, from seriously harmful and dangerous conduct.

The comprehensive report, released today, is expected to have a major influence on Canada's approach to crime.

It covers everything from police use of firearms, which it says should be restricted, to corporal punishment, "an astonishing anachronism."

"The committee says imprisonment or confinement should be used only as an ultimate resort.

In violent crime, however, the dangerous offender should be singled out and confined indefinitely if necessary.

It says that improved identification of the dangerous offender could reduce imprisonment of the non-dangerous.

The committee says the current habitual criminal and dangerous sexual offender sections of the Criminal Code aren't doing the job.

It says a new section aimed at the dangerous offender should be passed. The dangerous offender could be defined as a person convicted of a specified offence "who by reason of character disorder, emotional disorder, mental disorder or defect constitutes a continuing danger and who is likely to kill, inflict serious bodily injury, endanger life, inflict severe psychological damage or otherwise seriously endanger the personal safety of others."

Once such an offender was given an indeterminate sentence, subject to appeal and regular review, the test for release would be whether it was safe to release him, not whether he had been suitably punished.

Working on Study Since 1965

The committee comes down heavily in favor of use of the summons, bail, fines, reparation and non-confinement in most other areas.

Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet, 61, of Montreal headed the committee which has been at work on the study since June, 1965.

The committee recommends a system that would not only avert confinement but a criminal record in many cases. It says that once guilt is established, judges should be able to release the accused conditionally or unconditionally for a stated period. If the accused didn't get into trouble in that period, the case could be dismissed without conviction.

Deterrent sentences were needed where there was grave public risk from "rational but illegal activity such as professional crime, or where there is grave public temptation, as in the case of impaired driving."

The committee favors night detention and weekend detention as useful types of control that were a deterrent "without unnecessary social disruption."

It says deterrent fines are appropriate for casual offences by generally law-abiding people. But "substantial fines" should be levied on those who had benefited financially.

Reparation to the victim might have "profound correctional significance" although provisions for reparation now in

Aleutian Nuclear Blast Set to Go in One Week

AMCHITKA ISLAND, Alaska (AP)—Amid protests from Pacific Rim nations, and warnings from seismologists, the Atomic Energy Commission continues its preparations for an underground nuclear blast here next week.

The AEC announced Wednesday the blast will take place Oct. 2, weather permitting.

CONTROVERSIAL

The one megaton explosion, which has created a wave of controversy and numerous protests, will be set off on this remote isle in the Aleutian Chain—a site that bald eagles, sea otters and emperor geese had to themselves for two decades. But in the past three years, the AEC has spent more than $3,000,000 in preparation for the blast.

Such activity has been unknown on the island since the Second World War when the native Aleuts were evacuated from the area and replaced by thousands of troops.

NO RADIOACTIVITY

In its announcement Wednesday, the AEC said they expect "no release of radioactivity to the atmosphere or the sea" and said that the blast "is expected to be barely perceptible" in Adak, some 200 miles distant and the closest populated area.

FEARS MOUNTING ON PACIFIC RIM

Fears of tidal wave and earthquake, triggered by a planned U.S. Atomic Energy Commission underground blast in the Aleutians in October, are sweeping coastal communities on Vancouver Island.

And rumbles of similar apprehension are being felt across the whole Pacific basin.

Protests are also being heard in Hawaii and from Japanese fishermen.

The Atomic Energy Commission has told U.S. Sen. Daniel F. Inoye (D.-Hawaii) there was only the remotest chance that the tests would set off an earthquake, said Walter H. Kupau, president of the State Federation of Labor (RFL-CIO).

Scientists who are expert in seismology, the study of earth shocks, at both the University of British Columbia and the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory in Victoria, have expressed alarm at the possibility of slippage in the Aleutian and Alaskan faults after a blast.

Park Timber Deal Flayed by Strachan

Former opposition leader Robert Strachan today asked the government to name "the power brokers who set up the deal behind the scenes" to trade $10,000,000 worth of park timber for $300,000 worth of Cape Scott coastal land.

Strachan, MLA for Cowichan Malahat, asked why the government didn't deal with the original owners of property at Cape Scott rather than with Raven Lumber Ltd., of Campbell River.

The lumber firm received logging rights to 5,260 acres of nearby Strathcona Park in exchange for 576 acres of land destined for a Cape Scott provincial park.

The deal was defended today by Resources Minister Ray Williston and Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, in whose Comox riding the portion of park to be logged is located.

But Victoria naturalist Dave Hancock and B.C. Wildlife Federation official Geoff Warden were critical of the policy of opening provincial parks to loggers.

Strachan said he heard Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan say he expected to be criticized for the deal, which was announced Wednesday.

"I don't think the minister should be disappointed," he said.

"Who set up the deal whereby the logging company acquired the land?" he asked.

When we feel th' anti-inflationary pinch, hope we don't make an anti-anti-inflationary flinch.

★ ★ ★

Th' problem o' parks policy fer this gov'mint seems t' be decidin' who gits in there first—th' miners or th' loggers.

Longshoremen Close Ports

Grain Ships Loading

A mainstay of Vancouver Island—the export pulp and lumber industry—was shut down today along with all other British Columbia shipping as 3,200 longshoremen started a long-threatened strike at 8 a.m.

About 600 of the membership of International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union are based at three key centres on Vancouver Island: 300 at Chemainus and 150 each at Victoria and Port Alberni. They also operate in Nanaimo and Ladysmith.

Pickets were set out at all B.C. ports following the collapse of federal mediation during an all-night session in Vancouver. Bargaining for a new working agreement started early this year.

LOAD GRAIN

As promised, the union will continue to work for the loading of grain ships because these exports are vital to the prairie economy.

As of this morning, said Andy Kotowich, president of the union's Canadian area, two grain ships await loading in Vancouver and longshoremen were standing by for directions.

There are no ships in Victoria. The last one to load sailed at 6:40 a.m., about one million board feet short of a 13 million board foot cargo of lumber.

About 1 million board feet of lumber a day is handled normally at Ogden Point docks in Victoria through Westcan lumber exporters. General manager Hector Campbell said the operation is closed down.

LINES ORDERLY

Up-Island, an estimated 2 to 3 million board feet a day would be handled by Chemainus and several hundred tons of pulp at Crofton. Nnaimo would have a volume of about 375,000 board feet of lumber and 150 tons of pulp.

The largest export, for which an estimate was not available, would be from Port Alberni, where pulp, lumber and shingle operations are integrated. Northern Vancouver Island ports would account for further substantial volumes.

Kotowich said picket lines had

SHRUM JOINS TALKS IN HYDRO DISPUTE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Gordon Shrum, chairman of British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority, met with officials of the Office and Technical Employees' Union Wednesday in an attempt to avert a strike by 2,300 clerical workers of the Crown corporation.

The move was regarded as a hopeful sign in the dispute which could see the employees walk off the job at any time to back up contract demands.

Until Wednesday, Dr. Shrum had not taken part in the bargaining, although he has a direct responsibility for Hydro's position in the talks.

The final legal obstacle to a strike was removed Wednesday and a strike could come at any time.

Fisheries Hit Hard In Ottawa Cutback

A federal cut in fisheries and forestry department expenditures, announced today by Fisheries Minister Jack Davis, will mean a slowdown in the Babine Lake salmon spawning project in central British Columbia.

Of $12 million cut throughout the country, $550,000 was chopped from the Pacific region budget, director W. R. Hourston said in Vancouver this morning.

Of that, $400,000 is coming off the Babine Lake project and $150,000 from deferring replacement of two patrol boats.

Dr. G. P. Thomas of the forestry research lab in Victoria said he is optimistic that budget cuts won't reach B.C. forest research.

He said cutbacks will be relative to the importance of programs, and the minister's attitude is that "the forestry program in B.C. has high priority at this time."

CUT 'MINIMAL'

"I'm hoping any cutting will be minimal," he said, but admitted "we will have to bear some portion of it."

Hourston said there had been a choice among four parts of the $7.8 million Babine project that could have been delayed. Lining of a sqawning channel on the Pinkett River was chosen as having the least immediate importance.

Other projects include reservoir cleaning, solution of an ice problem and construction of the second stage of a spawning channel on Fulton River.

YEAR DELAY

Hourston said the Pinkett channel would have been completed this year at a cost of $840,000. The cutback means it will be finished one year later.

The entire eight-year project at Babine Lake, between Prince Rupert and Prince George, is about half completed.

A staff freeze has also been clamped on the Pacific region, retroactive to the end of July. Any job vacancies arising since that time will not be filled, Hourston said. Present staff is 480.

Communists Begin Prague Purge

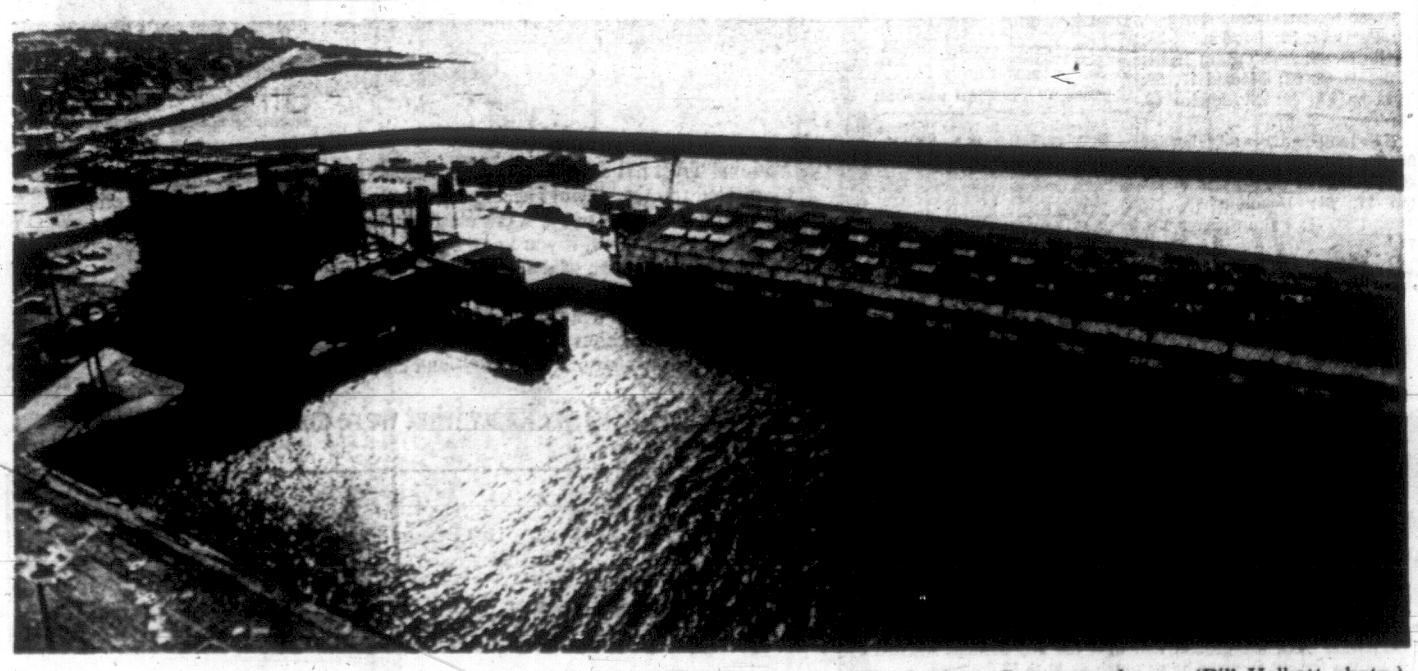

PRAGUE (CP) — A purge of the Prague city Communist organization was announced today just before a key Czechoslovak party central committee session, expected to decide the political fate of Alexander Dubcek.

The government closed the borders to casual Western visitors and stepped up security measures.

The party newspaper Rude Pravo today reported that 16 progressives were expelled from the capital's party plenary body and that three more resigned during a municipal party meeting Tuesday. Among those ousted was television commentator Karel Kyncl, who denounced the new tough policy of the party.

Extensive security precautions were in force for the national party central committee session in Prague Castle later today.

Paris Calls For British ECM Entry

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (WP) — French Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann Wednesday endorsed the entry of Britain and other applicants into the European Common Market as "eminently desirable."

This expression of hope for success, in a speech to the General Assembly, made more explicit a blessing already given by President Pompidou. But Schumann's gesture toward Britain appeared somewhat marred by a reference to "new and unjust rendings" of "our dear Ireland, toward which European civilization has incurred a debt that is more than a thousand years old."

A French source attributed this reference to Schumann's strong Catholicism rather than to any wish to intervene gratuitously in the difficulties in Northern Ireland.

Although Schumann restated many familiar positions of former President de Gaulle, there were subtle differences. The most notable was the reversal of opposition to British entry into the Common Market, but there was a difference of tone, too, on Vietnam.

Schumann was detached but friendly toward the United States. Not only did he avoid repetition of previous criticisms, by implication he deplored North Vietnam's responsibility for "delays."

On the Middle East his remarks were less pro-Arab and less hostile to Israel than other recent French presentations to the assembly. He asserted that any settlement will have to include "measures of an international nature" to protect the holy places in Jerusalem.

●

The new French Foreign Minister went farther than others in asserting Secretary General U Thant's "successful and recent initiative" in the four-power dinner last Saturday had enabled "the four to resume their task, which must now be pursued unrelentingly."

But no one else has confirmed any committment to resume the four-power talks. Instead, there is every indication a resumption still awaits further developments in bilateral Soviet-American talks.

Schumann made one of the few specific allusions here to the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia, asserting that disappointment and concern would be profound if hopes for liberalization "were stifled once and for all."

●

He praised Soviet-U.S. efforts toward East-West detente but termed the dialogue so far "too timid." While reaffirming a concern for general nuclear disarmament, he gave no indication of new willingness to assume the vacant seat reserved for France at the arms control talks in Geneva.

Yugoslavia's new Foreign Minister, Mirko Tepavac, also made a veiled reference to Czechoslovakia as well as the the Sino-Soviet dispute.

"Peace is not endangered by differences in social systems," he declared. "As in the past, life has once again refuted the thesis that countries having identical systems are natural allies, while those with different systems are natural enemies."

Tepavac, whose communist country stresses its independence from blocs, extolled what he said was growing respect for a policy of non-alignment. At Yugoslav instigation, foreign ministers and representatives of some 60 non-aligned countries will hold a one-day conference here Saturday.

In other United Nations developments:

● Mexican Foreign Minister Antonio Carillo Flores chided the Soviet Union and United States in an assembly speech for not yet holding nuclear disarmament talks 15 months after signing the non-proliferation treaty.

● Tanzanian Foreign Minister Stephen Mhando accused western countries, including the U.S. of sneering at the U.N. by maintaining trade and other support of "fascist" regimes in Southern Africa. He also endorsed North Vietnamese and North Korean arguments against the U.S.

● Joseph Blatchford, director of the Peace Corps, presented a letter from President Nixon to Secreatry U Thant commending United Nations interest in international volunteer service. With Blatchford were 60 Peace Corps country directors who have attended a conference in Washington.

Judge, Lawyers Collide At Riot Conspiracy Trial

CHICAGO (WP) — A barrage of procedural arguments, several tingled with personal anger, markeded the opening Wednesday of the trial of eight accused of conspiring to cause a riot at the Democratic national convention.

Tempers flared all day. The judge bawled out the defence attorneys. The prosecution accused the defence attorneys of contempt in their publicity campaign. Seven of the eight defendents angered the judge by momentarily refusing to stand when he entered the court room.

Outside the court building, several hundred demonstrators staged a protest of the trial and were involved in at least one confrontation with the police.

After a day of courtroom wrangling, threre had been little substantive progress in the case and the process of selecting jurors had just begun at adjournment.

The eight political activists are charged under an anti-riot statue which has never been tested in the courts. It prohibits crossing the state lines or using channels of commerce with intent to foment a riot.

The government produced the only new element when it handed to Judge Julius J. Hoffman additional results of electronics surveillance which the government had gathered on some of the defendants.

The defence lawyers had demanded that the government disclose the extent and nature of wiretapping evicence. The judge has refused to consider that question until after the jurty has reached its decision.

In another development, Hoffman issued bench warrants for four defence lawyers originally involved in the case who have asked to withdraw. The attorneys, three from California and one from New York state, had announced their withdrawals in telegrams, but the judge said they must appear in his court to withdraw formally.

In the major clash of the day, Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Schultz argued that some of the remaining defence counsel have tried to prejudice potential jurors by the out-of-court publicity statements and "editorial comments."

He cited press conferences at which the lawyers, William Kunstler and Leonard I. Weinglass have complained that their defendant cannot get a fair trial here. Both have claimed judicial prejudice and have sought to have Hoffman disqualified. Schultz asked the judge to issue an order preventing such statements. The judge refused, saying that out-of-court comments likely to prejudice a jury are barred already by court rules. Then he advised Kunstler and Weinglass to "read the rules if you haven't already done so."

At that point, Hoffman also sarcastically turned on a Chicago lawyer, Stanley Bass, who is associated with the defence as local counsel.

"Do I amuse you, Mr. Bass?" asked the judge. "I was just about to compliment you, and I noticed you were laughing, sir." He then went on to cite Bass as one of Chicago's most distinguished lawyers.

Hoffman rejected more than a dozen defence motions, including ones to move to a larger courtroom, to dismiss U.S. Marshals standing around the building for security purposes, and to admit an American Civil Loberties Union attorney as an observer to the trial.

Egypt Softens Demands

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Diplomats speculated today that the Arabs may be becoming more receptive to Big Four efforts to work out a peace settlement for the Middle East.

Hopes were boosted by what was interpreted as a note of conciliation expressed Wednesday by Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad after a meeting with U.S. State Secretary William Rogers.

Riad told reporters his government does not insist that before the Arabs accept a peace package, Israel must withdraw from the territory it occupied during the 1967 war.

Riad said if Israel renounces "ideas of expansion" and settles the question of Palestine refugees, an agreement might be worked out similar to the 1949 armistice which ended the first Palestine war.

CONSTANT IN DEMANDS

It was recalled, however, that Riad made a similar statement at the United Nations in 1968, but that since then Egypt has been constant in its demands for a complete Israeli withdrawal.

Western diplomats have counted on U.S.-Soviet consultations and Big Four talks to wrap up a package that both Israel and the Arab states would accept. Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann of France told the General Assembly Wednesday that Big Four negotiations are the only way to work out a plan for lasting peace.

Big Four talks on the Middle East were halted last July to give the United States and Soviet Union a chance to explore the question. The four-power talks are expected to resume in mid-October. And U.S. diplomats hope they will work out something that the Arabs and Israelis can negotiate on, using UN mediator Gunnar Jarring of Sweden as a mediator.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban told the assembly last Friday that his government is still ready to negotiate "without prior conditions of any kind." But Israel has not modified previous announcements that it would never give up the Arab sector of Jerusalem, which it seized in 1967.

The Israeli government also now is virtually committed to retention of the southern Sinai Desert to protect the southern sea approach to Israel and to neutralization of the west bank of the River Jordan, seized from Jordan in 1967.

been orderly and without incidents or trouble "and we don't expect any."

Mediation collapsed at 4 a.m., followed by an hour of discussion by the union executive.

Kotowich then said:

"If full negotiating committee, after meeting all night, could find no basis for a settlement upon the employers' answer to the union's demands and unanimously rejectrd their offer.

"The membership gave the negotiating committee a 96 per cent strike vote and this was exercised.

"The commitment given to the government to load wheat in the event of a strike will stand and every effort will be made to loat the wheat."

REPORT TO OTTAWA

As the mediation talks broke down, William Kelly, director of the federal conciliation and arbitration branch, said he would now report to Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey on the results of his six days of talks with the longshoremen and B.C. Maritime Employers Association.

However, he said he doubts that Ottawa will make any move at this time.

Kelly voiced his disappointment at the outcome of talks as he had said Wednesday that satisfactory progress was being made between the association and the union.

No details of the main issues in the dispute were disclosed but the price of the labor contract in terms of union wages had been the primary block to an earlier agreement.

The longshoremen seek a minimum $45 a shift plus differentials for afternoon and night shifts. The association has offered a wage increase of 85 cents an hour spread over three years which would provide a basic shift rate of $37.84 by 1971.

ALBERTA MAY ENTER MORTGAGE BUSINESS

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Harry Strom said Wednesday the province is considering whether to enter the mortgage lending field and is exploring the United States and European money markets to determine if funds are available.

The plan is "one possibility" out of a number of schemes being studied, Premier Strom said at a news conference.

He indicated the shortage of financing for housing will be a major topic at a conference of Alberta mayors November 4 to 5 in Edmonton.

Mr. Strom said a broader question of municipal finance will likely top the agenda.

the Criminal Code had been rarely invoked.

The report, compiled with the aid of a research team, says it appears that Canada hasn't experienced a marked increase in crime.

Comparing 1966 and 1950, the male conviction rate for indictable offences—the serious ones—decreased slightly while the female rate doubled. The rate of violent offences by females declined.

The rate for 16- and 17-year-olds increased 47 per cent.

The over-all proportion of non-violent offences was increasing while crimes against the person decreased 15 per cent.

Total conviction rates increased, mainly as a result of summary convictions. This might reflect the growing move to cities and an increasingly youthful population.

"Much of the increase is related to the growing use of the automobile."

Most Have Confidence in Police

The committee says that most Canadians have confidence in the police. Animosity resulted from unpopular laws "and the attitude of some police officers."

Use of firearms by police should be restricted by amendments to the Criminal Code. Some forces now restricted use of firearms short of that allowed by law.

Powers of police at arrest—to search a person, his home or vehicle—should be codified. The rights of an accused at arrest should also be codified.

Not all police forces allowed an accused to make a telephone call after arrest, for instance.

No widespread abuse of police questioning was found. Incriminating statements voluntarily made to police should be admissible as evidence.

Police should, under defined circumstances and control of a Supreme Court judge, be allowed to use wiretaps and other forms of electronic surveillance.

Report Greeted as Excellent

Solicitor-General George McIlraith greeted the report in a statement as excellent but he made no commitments on the 118 recommendations.

Many of the recommendations on the mentally ill and on probation and parole were made law as a result of Criminal Code amendments this year.

Others, such as that recommending compensation to victims of crime, are within provincial jurisdiction.

There are also recommendations about jails and prisons that would require joint federal-provincial action.

One recommendation says that unless a major crime is involved, police should let a person escape rather than shoot at him.

Mr. McIlraith said the number of innocent bystanders killed or injured by police shooting at escapees is well known.

However, police couldn't be disarmed in a society that allowed "easy availability" of small arms. Perhaps the answer was "firm and drastic steps" to reduce this availability.

Supports Easier Bail Move

Mr. Turner says he favors a proposal that the burden of proof in bail applications be upon the Crown rather on the accused. He withheld judgment on a proposal that police be able to issue a summons in summary cases rather than arrest.

The committee's first recommendation is that a royal commission or committee to examine criminal law be established. Mr. Turner plans a national law reform commission.

The report says the aim should be to develop a system of classification "that would distinguish between illegal acts on a more rational basis."

Conduct shouldn't be defined as criminal unless it represented a serious threat to society and unless the act can't be dealt with through other social or legal means.

"To designate certain conduct as criminal in an attempt to control anti-social behavior should be a last step," the report says.

A comprehensive examination of the Criminal Code was of the "greatest urgency." Murder, rape, assault and theft didn't have to be justified as crimes.

But a "grey area" that made drunkenness, wandering at night, sale of contraceptives and other such matters criminal acts should be examined.

Another 350 seasonal jobs would be chopped. The department now has 4,300 full-time employees and 2,100 seasonal workers.

The reductions, which involve establishments from coast to coast, are designed to keep the department's 1970-71 budget at its present level of about $75 million.

Davis said without reductions the budget would have hit $87 million. More than half of the jobs being wiped out would not require layoffs as normal retirement, death and resignations would leave them unfilled.

"Every effort will be made to find other jobs for those who are laid off."

HIRING FROZEN

Davis told reporters he viewed the delay in the Babine salmon project as likely the most serious setback in department plans.

On staff reductions, he said there is likely some fat in any organization and the cuts—designed to offset increased wage rates—may help his department get rid of it.

Hiring will be almost completely curtailed. The forestry side of the operation will likely lose more employees, the minister said, but fisheries will feel almost as big a loss.

Davis estimated 100 to 120 professional biologists and engineers will be affected by the staff reduction. Regional directors in the main will determine who will be dismissed and when.

The heaviest staff cuts would likely be in the Ottawa headquarters area. Most employees would be given six months to a year's notice.

W. Germany 'Delays' New Money Crisis

Times News Services

The British pound, the United States dollar and the French franc all sagged against the West German mark today but the shutdown of West Germany's money market staved off any new world currency crisis.

Dealers throughout Europe's main foreign exchange markets displayed considerable nervousness. Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger Friday closed off money deals until Tuesday, after Sunday's West German elections.

There was a deepening belief his action, even when shorn of any political motivations, will serve only to defer until next week a rush into marks that could be stopped only by increasing the value of West Germany's money.

Some dealers around Europe still sought ways of switching dollars, pounds or francs into marks, even at a big discount, on the gamble that the mark will be revalued.

BET ON BRANDT

Several dealers seemed to be betting on the likelihood of a victory by Deputy Chancellor Willy Brandt's Social Democrats, who, through Economic Minister Karl Schiller, appear virtually committed to revaluing the mark.

There were other dealers who evidently figured that even Kiesinger's Christian Democratics will have to revalue the mark under ever-mounting international pressures. Thus far, through Finance Minister Franz-Josef Strauss, the Christian Democrats have set themselves against a lone revaluation. They have called for general realignment of the world's main currencies.

Kiesinger ordered the German money market shut after a three-day inflow of $550,000,000 worth of hot foreign money.

Speculators were converting into marks in the hope of making a quick, fat profit in case West Germany revalues immediately after the election.

But that inflow did not surprise dealers in other European capitals. If anything, they were taken aback that the amount converted was so small. During last autumn's flight into marks something approaching $4,000,000,000 worth of foreign money was converted.

In the wake of Kiesinger's surprise action, Brandt's party today demanded an emergency meeting of the federal cabinet to discuss the over-all German economic situation.

DEAL AT OWN RISK

On the London market the pound was near its floor, dropping nine points from 2.3824 to 2.3815 dollars—the key rate. This was an initial reaction to the German manoeuvrings.

In Duesseldorf, Frankfurt, Hamburg and Munich, money exchange counters would only take a maximum of between 300 and 500 marks ($75 and $125) worth of foreign money.

Bar Gunfight Brings Rare Duel Charge

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (UPI) — Douglas MacArthur Pirtle pleaded guilty Wednesday to a charge of participating in a duel which resulted in the death of his opponent.

The unusual charge, filed under an archaic section of the California penal code, may be the first for dueling since the turn of the century.

Pirtle, a 27-year-old laborer, was arrested following the gunshot death of Joe King, 30, when the two men faced each other with pistols outside an East Palo Alto tavern.

Pirtle originally had been accused of murder, but the charge was changed to dueling when police learned that Pirtle challenged King after King made advances to Pirtle's wife, Sherry.

Superior Court Judge Conrad Reisch accepted the guilty plea and set Oct. 9 for sentencing. Pirtle could receive a penalty of one to seven years in prison.

Teachers Concerned

HALIFAX CP) — Educationists must take direct action to win public support for the goals of Canadian education and its increasing costs, Dr. J. R. McCarthy, president of the Canadian Education Association, said here today.

Dr. McCarthy, deputy minister of education for Ontario, said in a speech to the CEA annual convention that during the last 25 years expenditures on education have been accepted by the public "with a minimum of concern and little if any opposition."

JUDGE BOOSTS LIQUOR FINES FOR MINORS

Judge J. A. Byers who fined a minor $10 on Tuesday for possessing liquor, upped the fine to $25 for four youths who pleaded guilty to the offence Wednesday.

"I read in the paper that I'm more lenient on people who commit this offence," he said. "But there's a big difference in a person caught in possession of a bottle of beer on the street and another with liquor in his car. It's a different kettle of fish."

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET, Jr.

The next time you fly in a jetliner toward a city, take note as you look out the window to see whether the city has a dust dome. Most cities do. In fact, I think all cities in North America are topped by that brownish haze that marks man's interference with the weather.

The dust dome is a blanket of particles that comes from industry and automobiles and from efforts of city residents to give their immediate vicinity the benefits of civilization—such as garbage incineration and skyscrapers.

The dust dome interferes with the sun's rays. Some of the sun rays don't reach the ground and so the daytime temperature in the city is perhaps a little lower than in the country. At night, the dust dome's particles and gases absorb radiation from the ground and thus the city is kept warmer than the far-out suburbs by as much as 10 to 12 degrees.

Paris Calls For British ECM Entry

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (WP) — French Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann Wednesday endorsed the entry of Britain and other applicants into the European Common Market as "eminently desirable."

This expression of hope for success, in a speech to the General Assembly, made more explicit a blessing already given by President Pompidou. But Schumann's gesture toward Britain appeared somewhat marred by a reference to "new and unjust rendings" of "our dear Ireland, toward which European civilization has incurred a debt that is more than a thousand years old."

A French source attributed this reference to Schumann's strong Catholicism rather than to any wish to intervene gratuitously in the difficulties in Northern Ireland.

Although Schumann restated many familiar positions of former President de Gaulle, there were subtle differences. The most notable was the reversal of opposition to British entry into the Common Market, but there was a difference of tone, too, on Vietnam.

Schumann was detached but friendly toward the United States. Not only did he avoid repetition of previous criticisms, by implication he deplored North Vietnam's responsibility for "delays."

On the Middle East his remarks were less pro-Arab and less hostile to Israel than other recent French presentations to the assembly. He asserted that any settlement will have to include "measures of an international nature" to protect the holy places in Jerusalem.

●

The new French Foreign Minister went farther than others in asserting Secretary General U Thant's "successful and recent initiative" in the four-power dinner last Saturday had enabled "the four to resume their task, which must now be pursued unrelentingly."

But no one else has confirmed any committment to resume the four-power talks. Instead, there is every indication a resumption still awaits further developments in bilateral Soviet-American talks.

Schumann made one of the few specific allusions here to the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia, asserting that disappointment and concern would be profound if hopes for liberalization "were stifled once and for all."

●

He praised Soviet-U.S. efforts toward East-West detente but termed the dialogue so far "too timid." While reaffirming a concern for general nuclear disarmament, he gave no indication of new willingness to assume the vacant seat reserved for France at the arms control talks in Geneva.

Yugoslavia's new Foreign Minister, Mirko Tepavac, also made a veiled reference to Czechoslovakia as well as the Sino-Soviet dispute.

"Peace is not endangered by differences in social systems," he declared. "As in the past, life has once again refuted the thesis that countries having identical systems are natural allies, while those with different systems are natural enemies."

Tepavac, whose communist country stresses its independence from blocs, extolled what he said was growing respect for a policy of non-alignment. At Yugoslav instigation, foreign ministers and representatives of some 60 non-aligned countries will hold a one-day conference here Saturday.

In other United Nations developments:

● Mexican Foreign Minister Antonio Carillo Flores chided the Soviet Union and United States in an assembly speech for not yet holding nuclear disarmament talks 15 months after signing the non-proliferation treaty.

● Tanzanian Foreign Minister Stephen Mhando accused western countries, including the U.S. of sneering at the U.N. by maintaining trade and other support of "fascist" regimes in Southern Africa. He also endorsed North Vietnamese and North Korean arguments against the U.S.

● Joseph Blatchford, director of the Peace Corps, presented a letter from President Nixon to Secreatry U Thant commending United Nations interest in international volunteer service. With Blatchford were 60 Peace Corps country directors who have attended a conference in Washington.

Judge, Lawyers Collide At Riot Conspiracy Trial

CHICAGO (WP) — A barrage of procedural arguments, several tingled with personal anger, markeded the opening Wednesday of the trial of eight accused of conspiring to cause a riot at the Democratic national convention.

Tempers flared all day. The judge bawled out the defence attorneys. The prosecution accused the defence attorneys of contempt in their publicity campaign. Seven of the eight defendents angered the judge by momentarily refusing to stand when he entered the court room.

Outside the court building, several hundred demonstrators staged a protest of the trial and were involved in at least one confrontation with the police.

After a day of courtroom wrangling, threre had been little substantive progress in the case and the process of selecting jurors had just begun at adjournment.

The eight political activists are charged under an anti-riot statue which has never been tested in the courts. It prohibits crossing the state lines or using channels of commerce with intent to foment a riot.

The government produced the only new element when it handed to Judge Julius J. Hoffman additional results of electronics surveillance which the government had gathered on some of the defendants.

The defence lawyers had demanded that the government disclose the extent and nature of wiretapping evicence. The judge has refused to consider that question until after the jurty has reached its decision.

In another development, Hoffman issued bench warrants for four defence lawyers originally involved in the case who have asked to withdraw. The attorneys, three from California and one from New York state, had announced their withdrawals in telegrams, but the judge said they must appear in his court to withdraw formally.

In the major clash of the day, Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Schultz argued that some of the remaining defence counsel have tried to prejudice potential jurors by the out-of-court publicity statements and "editorial comments."

He cited press conferences at which the lawyers, William Kunstler and Leonard I. Weinglass have complained that their defendant cannot get a fair trial here. Both have claimed judicial prejudice and have sought to have Hoffman disqualified. Schultz asked the judge to issue an order preventing such statements. The judge refused, saying that out-of-court comments likely to prejudice a jury are barred already by court rules. Then he advised Kunstler and Weinglass to "read the rules if you haven't already done so."

At that point, Hoffman also sarcastically turned on a Chicago lawyer, Stanley Bass, who is associated with the defence as local counsel.

"Do I amuse you, Mr. Bass?" asked the judge. "I was just about to compliment you, and I noticed you were laughing, sir." He then went on to cite Bass as one of Chicago's most distinguished lawyers.

Hoffman rejected more than a dozen defence motions, including ones to move to a larger courtroom, to dismiss U.S. Marshals standing around the building for security purposes, and to admit an American Civil Loberties Union attorney as an observer to the trial.

Egypt Softens Demands

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Diplomats speculated today that the Arabs may be becoming more receptive to Big Four efforts to work out a peace settlement for the Middle East.

Hopes were boosted by what was interpreted as a note of conciliation expressed Wednesday by Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad after a meeting with U.S. State Secretary William Rogers.

Riad told reporters his government does not insist that before the Arabs accept a peace package, Israel must withdraw from the territory it occupied during the 1967 war.

Riad said if Israel renounces "ideas of expansion" and settles the question of Palestine refugees, an agreement might be worked out similar to the 1949 armistice which ended the first Palestine war.

CONSTANT IN DEMANDS

It was recalled, however, that Riad made a similar statement at the United Nations in 1968, but that since then Egypt has been constant in its demands for a complete Israeli withdrawal.

Western diplomats have counted on U.S.-Soviet consultations and Big Four talks to wrap up a package that both Israel and the Arab states would accept. Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann of France told the General Assembly Wednesday that Big Four negotiations are the only way to work out a plan for lasting peace.

Big Four talks on the Middle East were halted last July to give the United States and Soviet Union a chance to explore the question. The four-power talks are expected to resume in mid-October. And U.S. diplomats hope they will work out something that the Arabs and Israelis can negotiate on, using UN mediator Gunnar Jarring of Sweden as a mediator.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban told the assembly last Friday that his government is still ready to negotiate "without prior conditions of any kind." But Israel has not modified previous announcements that it would never give up the Arab sector of Jerusalem, which it seized in 1967.

The Israeli government also now is virtually committed to retention of the southern Sinai Desert to protect the southern sea approach to Israel and to neutralization of the west bank of the River Jordan, seized from Jordan in 1967.

Love's Labors Resurrected

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Retired Executives Can Aid Public

By AB KENT

A hue and cry for REBs who have infiltrated Greater Victoria's way of gracious living was launched today, but their surrender is expected to be voluntary.

They will be rewarded with labors of love.

REBs are senior corporate officers, directors and executives from a wide range of business, industrial and financial pursuits who have come to Victoria in retirement, and one of them—Norman E. Horton—is seeking them out.

He wants to enlist them as members of a Retired Executives Bureau, a unique voluntary agency of Victoria Chamber of Commerce. They would form a permanent committee of superior persons expert in their fields and capable of lending their talent to worthwhile local undertakings.

●

But since the Chamber has no money for such services, and because they would in any case be directed toward the public interest, the members would work for love, said Horton.

Recently, Horton told chamber directors he wrote to Ottawa, Toronto, Montreal and Washington endeavoring to track down similar undertakings and could find none.

The only ones nearly alike were commercial consulting firms of government-sponsored agencies.

Horton said REB ideally would contribute on a part-time basis to feasibility studies, project surveys, creative advisory services, economic analyses, advance ideas for community betterment and offer research aid to chamber committees.

There will be no "superstructure" of management and staff to co-ordinate the bureau, which will operate through the chamber office, Horton said.

NORMAN E. HORTON
. . . leads hue and cry

Members must be bona fide retired, of senior status with professional background or member of an accredited professional society and of independent means. The bureau will not act as an employment agency, Horton said.

Of the estimated 900 retired executives in the capital region, Horton expects about half will be unable to work for the bureau because of health and others will be from less than senior positions.

The volunteers will be screened for cataloguing into financial, engineering, executive and other groups according to their background.

"These men represent a wealth of knowledge, experience and ability, which in many of them is stagnating at present," Horton said, explaining his campaign to find senior talent.

"Once they have surfaced, we will contact them and ask them to complete a questionnaire."

Horton gave a careful assurance:

"We must not usurp the functions of management consulting firms."

If a small business asks for expert help, for instance, the bureau will explore its problems and if it is solvent a course of action will be recommended, possibly through the services of a professional consultant.

If there are no funds for this, the bureau would follow through "with our own expert help," Horton explained.

●

He said age in only relative in considering the man.

"Age is chronological; it's outlook that counts."

Horton himself is an example of an active, concerned individual with organizing ability who promised himself at the age of 30 he would retire at a certain point. That time arrived in 1958 when he sold out Cole Furniture Manufacturing Co. and Ingersoll Casket Co., of Ingersoll, Ont. after having business interests in Montreal, Toronto, New York and Detroit.

For three solid years he and his wife travelled, always on the lookout for a place to settle.

St. Joseh's Gets 50-Bed Prefab Unit

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark has verbally approved a $400,000 cash program to provide 50 progressive-care beds in a prefabricated structure at St. Joseph's Hospital.

But Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen and Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis wish he would put it in writing.

Stephen told the Capital Region Hospital District Board Wednesday that Loffmark Tuesday promised instant approval of the 50 beds for St. Joseph's to alleviate the waiting list at that hospital.

"I asked him if he would put that in writing but he, for his own reasons, declined to do so," said Stephen.

Curtis said he found Loffmark's position "curious and troubling."

"There is more than one municipality represented here where grave trouble has resulted from other ministers refusing to put things into print."

Despite the nervousness about verbal commitment, the board approved a $10,000 expenditure to permit planning for the 50 beds.

The beds will be used to cut down the time sent by patients in the more expensive acute-care beds. Progressive-care beds cost only a third as much as acute-care facilities.

Savage Plunges Into Mayoralty Against Baird

The possibility of Ald. Robert Baird being handed the Victoria mayoralty by acclamation in December disappeared this morning with the entry of Ald. Clyde Savage into the race.

The 61-year-old Savage, a four-year veteran on city council said there was definitely a "clear-cut choice" between himself and the outspoken Baird, 63, a council member for six years.

SAVAGE
. . . divergent views

"I've heard rumors that others may enter the race as well," said Savage.

"Alderman Baird and I differ quite extensively on many things," he said.

STEPHEN OUT

Baird, in June, announced that he would be a mayoralty candidate if Mayor Hugh Stephen decided to step down.

Stephen has stated publicly several times that he will not seek re-election.

Savage believes he will have Stephen's support in the coming campaign.

"I've worked closely with the mayor for several years and I am sure he will support my candidacy," he said.

Savage said he decided to "accept the challenge" after being approached in recent months by many concerned citizens, asking him to run.

He ran unsuccessfully for mayor against Stephen, in 1966.

Savage said by trimming the frills from public expenditures "there is no question that we can hold the tax line, if not reduce it."

"We're coming tnto a very important period in our development," he said.

"We will be faced with programs during the next few years that will cost millions of dollars — sewers, hospitals, pollution control, urban transit, Wharf Street urban renewal and many others.

"It is imperative that the next mayor have the ability to see that reason and stability prevail in his council in order to deal with these programs.

A native Victorian and a retired druggist, Savage said he would outline his policies in detail during the campaign.

FAVORS AMALGAMATION

He and Baird agree that there should be amalgamation of the four Greater Victoria municipalities and that capital spending must be concerned with essential services during the next five years.

On many other issues their viewpoints diverge, however. While Savage was chairman of council's youth services committee and promoted youth programs, Baird has carried on a running battle with some youth organizations.

This year he battled unsuccessfully against a $1,000 council grant to Cool-Aid which operates a youth hostel. Baird charged "immoral conduct" on the part of young people who came to the hostel.

Savage was a supporter of the grant.

Baird and Savage both feel the city should not be involved financially with a new convention centre in Victoria.

Savage said today the convention centre is not a dead issue however. He predicted that in 1970 a convention centre would be built "without any expense to the taxpayers."

"This is an important election and with changes on council teamwork is essential in order to complete programs such as swimming pool, convention centre and the capital budget."

Soldiers Grappling For Rifleman's Body

Soldiers from the Esquimalt-based Queen's Own Rifles battalion today are searching the rain-swollen Sooke River for a young member of their battalion missing and presumed drowned in a training exercise Wednesday.

RCMP from the Sooke detachment have joined the search for Rfmn. Harold Wayne George, 19, of Vancouver, missing since the rubber boat he was travelling in capsized in fast water.

Two other riflemen were injured in the incident, described as a routine training exercise, when one of four rubber boats, carrying nine men each down the river, capsized and a second swamped.

Rfmn. J. G. Headrick, 18, was taken to hospital at CFB Esquimalt with leg injuries. Rfmn. R. Weeks, 22, is in Royal Jubilee Hospital with head injuries.

Two other soldiers were examined at hospital and later released.

36 MEN

Four 17-foot rubber boats carrying the 36 soldiers left the Leechtown area about 1 p.m. Wednesday in what was called a routine exercise in a year-round training program. The boats capsized in the fast-moving water three miles downstream about an hour later.

"There are 31 men from Queen's Own with the RCMP now searching with grappling hooks and they are going to stay until the body is found," said Capt. James Pass, battalion adjutant.

HEADED FOR SHORE

Capt. Pass said as the rubber boats approached a narrow section of the river the first tipped dumping its occupants in the water. The second and third boats managed to stop and head towards shore and the fourth filled with water attempting to get to shore.

The missing man was in the last boat and unaccounted for when the others reached shore.

An immediate search failed to locate George and messengers were sent for help.

TOO RISKY

"The river has deep potholes that are too dangerous to use divers, Pass added explaining the use of hooks.

A net was spread Wednesday night downstream when it became too dark to carry on the search.

Capt. Pass said the river was unseasonably fast as a result of the recent rains.

Major Derek Bamford of the QOR opens an inquiry today.

Byers' Case Hearing Postponed

Hearing of an application to the Supreme Court of British Columbia to remove a criminal trial from the provincial court of Judge J. A. Byers has been postponed until Monday at 11 a.m.

Scheduled for today, the hearing was postponed for "the convenience of all parties," a court official said.

The application was filed at Victoria Law Courts last week on behalf of Robert Edward Davies of 105 Island Highway.

Davies was charged last Aug. 28 with trafficking in LSD. Through his counsel, Robert A. Price, he pleaded not guilty and elected to be tried before a provincial court.

The application, in the form of two writs filed by Davies and Price, alleges that Judge Byers conducted the trial unfairly by denying Davies the right to have legal counsel. It asks that the trial be moved to another court.

Loan Application Called Answer To Critics of Big Sewer Project

Preliminary application for a $5.4 million loan from Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. for Saanich sewer construction in 1970 has been made by the Capital Regional District Board.

The board plans an $8.2 million sewer construction program.

Producing a schedule which showed the system, including an extended sewer outfall at Macaulay Point, completed by March 1971, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said it should answer critics of the district sewage program.

"This should give the lie to the suggestion that nothing is happening," said Curtis, chairman of the district sewer committee.

COMMITTEE STUDY

The board agreed to appoint a committee to make a before-and-after pollution study of the effects of the extended outfall.

Members of the committee will include representatives of the Pollution Control Branch of the provincial government, the fisheries research station in Nanaimo, the University of Victoria, the Capital Regional District and consulting engineers responsible for the outfall design.

SAMPLING

The committee will carry out a sampling and surveillance program at Macaulay.

Coliform densities in shore waters, effects on fish, changes in marine ecology and possible deposition of sludge on the ocean bottom will be examined.

The board hopes the Macaulay Point outfall proves successful, eliminating the need for expensive primary treatment plants at three other outfall locations in the Greater Victoria area.

PANHANDLE PROJECT

The board also agreed to finance a $167,000 sewer program for the Panhandle area of Esquimalt.

The district was asked to finance the program because of Esquimalt's difficulty selling debentures.

Esquimalt council, after the board's approval Wendesday, held a special meeting to give first reading to the local improvement bylaw for the sewer.

$3,200 an Acre Too High—Frampton

A price tag of $3,200 an acre for parkland adjacent to Beaver Lake drew an objection Wednesday from Victoria Alderman Percy Frampton.

The Capital Regional District Board approved the purchase, for $91,500, of 28.6 acres south and southwest of Beaver Lake as an addition to Beaver-Elk Lake park.

"That seems a very high price to pay for parkland," said Frampton.

"Why do we have to spend this much money?"

Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich replied that any land close to lakes within the capital region can be expected to carry a stiff price tag.

Pickets Leave Old Bridge, Youngsters Back to School

Youngsters at Port Renfrew all went back to school today, and their parents stopped picketing the Harris Cove Bridge.

But they still want a new bridge, and will discuss it at a meeting at 8 tonight in the community hall.

There has been no response to an invitation to the meeting sent Wednesday to Highways Minister Wesley Black and his deputy, H. T. Miard. Herb Bruch, who represents the area in the legislature, was also invited, but he is reported to be in the Okanagan.

An inspection of the wooden single-lane bridge Wednesday by engineers from the highways department and B.C. Forest Products Ltd. satisfied picketing parents that some action might be taken.

The old bridge has been reinforced with wood planking, and BCFP trucks will obey the five-ton load limit.

Of Port Renfrew's 82 elementary school pupils, 25 returned to school Wednesday. The rest went back today.

High schoolers, who boycotted a bouncy, nauseating, 108-mile bus ride to Sooke, returned when the highways department graded 12 miles of the West Coast Road on Wednesday.

YOUTH FACES ROBBERY CHARGE

Charged with robbery with violence, Robert J. Juneau, 19, formerly of Alberta, was remanded today without plea until Monday.

Bail was fixed at $1,500.

He is accused of knocking down and stealing the purse of 73-year-old Mrs. Florence Mary McDowell, Apt. 305-1130 Pandora Ave.

The elderly woman received bruises to her knee in the incident at Pandora and Cook Wednesday at 7 p.m.

A 14-year-old boy and 17-year-old girl are also being held in juvenile detention home in connection with the case.

Arthur Mayse . . .

LEAVE THE ISLAND east coast behind at Royston or Courtenay, drive inland a few miles over good blacktop, and you arrive at the two Cumberlands. One remains stubbornly alive, even though the coal seams that brought it into being 117 years ago haven't been worked for a long time.

The other Cumberland, a Chinatown that once rated second only to San Francisco's, is no longer even a ghost town.

Except for a patchwork shack or two, no buildings now stand in the sheltered valley that became an expatriates' homeland to 3,000 Chinese. What's left lies underground, in a spade-pocked midden that may hold far more collectors' treasure than it has yet yielded to the diggers.

★

He lifts out wine jugs of graceful shape, their dark glaze flawless, their mouths unchipped. Then he produces a square soy-sauce pot of antique charm.

"I tell you," says Shendall, whose house overlooks the valley where Cumberland Chinatown flourished and died, "the whole place is a bonanza! You can dig all day and not find a thing. Or you may sink a spade and turn up a whole crate of opium lamps in perfect condition."

★

We met Shendall not long after we left the living Cumberland behind. Along the coast, the air had been no more than pleasantly warm, but on this flat below wooded slopes, the heat lay heavy, with scarce a breeze to stir it.

A gravelled lane turned in past a weathered grey shack. Someone had painted 'OCCUPIED' in large letters along its side . . . a warning aimed at over-enthusiastic treasure-hunters.

We had a hoe and a couple of spades in the car trunk, and we knew that digging fees of $2.50 a head were payable at a trailer parked down the lane.

But the trailer, occupied through the summer by the Islander who holds Chinatown's acres in lease from Weldwood of Canada, was gone. The valley was left to silence that a gush of water from a broken pipe only accentuated, and to its memories.

This until Shendall strolled down the lane. He identified himself as the site caretaker, collected a reduced late-season fee, and invited us to drop in on him later.

Where to dig?

Well, almost anywhere, he told us. One spot was as good as another, and you never knew where you'd turn something up.

He jogged off, leaving us to the heat and the silence.

We followed a steep little path down-slope past a cherry tree that could have been planted the best part of a century ago. Close by was an apple tree that looked no younger. Its apples had grown small with age, but the one I reached up for was still sound and sweet.

★

It was boggy in the hollow. Only the fruit trees and a few canted fence palings showed that men had once lived here. We found a spot of untouched grass between earth mounds piled by previous hunters. Under the grass were roots that fought the spade.

We were in situ, as the archaeologists describe their digs, and I for one would have preferred to be in a cool lake.

Something glinted in the first spade-load of dark earth. It was a shard of china, the colors in the pattern still bright as when the little bowl was whole and new. Strange to find a fragment so vivid and so delicate in this lost place!

★

We cut more roots and turned more earth. Win raked cautiously with the hoe, and turned up a tiny, patterned saucer intact save for a chip out of the rim.

It was then that we heard the voices, high-pitched and busily conversing, somewhere in the brush-tangles that had taken over a once-thriving community.

The muggy heat of the hollow seemed to cool for an instant: but the voices came no nearer.

So we returned to our digging. We were putting our heads together over a trove of three small pearl-white fantan counters, with the ghosts of vanished Chinatown forgotten, when a voice addressed us from close by.

I stiffened like a startled cat. But the owner of the voice was plump, smiling, and very much alive.

The old man was one of the last inhabitants of this other Cumberland. He had been showing a visitor where to find good apples, and it was them we heard. At least, I prefer to believe so.

We made one more find—a perfect bottle, no more than two inches long, of thick-walled glass with the shrivelled cork still inside.

This we took up to show Shendall. He pronounced it an opium bottle. Then he let us view finds that included a 10-gallon clay urn, and showed us the steel-tipped prod which sophisticated relic hunters use to locate and even identify buried objects.

★

Later, we worked the cork from the little bottle with a needle. It released scent that I haven't smelled since childhood. Oil of peppermint, to ease a tooth that ached its last very long ago.

Sometime that night, untouched by human hand, the phial shattered into three pieces. The result of exposure to air, perhaps. Or it could have been a judgment upon us.

Alberta Delays Season As Bird Tests Continue

EDMONTON (CP)—The Alberta government has postponed indefinitely the first part of the 1969 pheasant and Hungarian partridge season pending further tests on levels of mercury found in the birds. Dr. J. Donovan Ross, minister of lands and forests said Wednesday.

Further consideration may have to be given to the advisability of going ahead with the latter part of the season, said the minister.

TO REVIEW REPORTS

The season was to have run from Oct. 10 to Dec. 6 in most districts but hunting will not be allowed until Nov. 1, Dr. Ross said after a Social Credit caucus meeting.

He said cancellation of the Oct. 10 to Oct. 30 period will give the government time to receive and review reports on 70 to 80 birds taken recently for analysis.

During the early part of the season, hunters would have been allowed to take three pheasant and 10 Hungarian partridge each day. On Nov. 1, the bag limit for pheasant increases to five a day.

SOME BIRDS UNAFFECTED

Several parts of the province have been open to hunting for about 10 days, but birds in these areas were not affected.

It is believed seed grain treated against fungi and certain worms may have been responsible for the high mercury levels. Results of an early summer survey indicated mercury build-up in the flesh of the game birds was four to 10 times higher than the level considered safe by the World Health Organization.

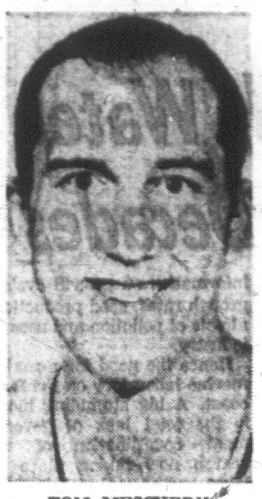

Dr. Ross said results of the latest survey should be known in two to four weeks. Meantime, the government is taking a province-wide sampling of pheasant and Hungarian partridge.

In Lethbridge Wednesday, Jack Lakie, an official of the city's chamber of commerce said he wondered if the government was not "being a little premature" in closing the early part of the season.

HEAD-TURNING chunk of power that will be shaking ground near Cobble Hill on Sunday is world-record holding double "B" class dragster (above) driven by Gary Beck, of Seattle. Current holder of National Hot Rod Association mark of 7.93 seconds for quarter-mile, machine is powered by blown and injected 440-cubic-inch mill kicking out over 1,000 horsepower. Best-of-three match race is scheduled between Beck and Victoria's Bert Sweeting, who will be at helm of 472-cubic-inch dragster. Gates open at 9 a.m. for full program of racing at Van Isle Dragways.

Don't Forget Those Rookies

Eyes of Victoria fans will undoubtedly be on the stars of the National Basketball Association at Memorial Arena tonight, but don't be surprised if some of the unheralded rookies stir up the most excitement.

TOM MESCHERY . . . here tonight

When Los Angeles Lakers and Seattle Supersonics step out on the Memorial Arena floor at 8 p.m. for the first pre-season exhibition clash for both clubs, some of pro basketball's most famous performers will be on view.

Scheduled to work with the Lakers, for instance, are the talented and touted Wilt Chamberlain, Elgin Baylor and Jerry West.

Lining up with the Sonics will be people like all-star guard Lenny Wilkens, who will be making his debut as a pro hoop coach; center Bob Rule, fourth in NBA scoring last season; forward Tom Meschery; Art Harris, member of last season's all-rookie team, and Bob Boozer, a six-nine forward.

While the established stars continue working themselves into condition for the coming season, a flock of tall and eager graduates from the collegiate ranks will be bidding for recognition, hoping to muscle into the pro hoop business.

Both clubs are trying out several college stars and those rookies are the ones who could steal tonight's spotlight.

Wests Whip Labatts 5-1 To Gain Final

Victoria West of the Victoria and District Soccer League's first division advanced to the McGavin Cup final Wednesday by downing second-division Labatts 5-1 in Royal Athletic Park.

Labs jolted Wests on a play from the opening kickoff when Onelio Asquini rifled a 45-yard shot into the net.

Dockers Surprise Defending Champs

Esquimalt Dockers, traditionally also-rans in the Inter-High School Soccer League, came up with a few surprises Wednesday to take over the league lead.

Dockers clubbed host and defending-champion Mount View Hornets 2-0 on second-half goals by Doug Casperson to move one point ahead of the Hornets and Victoria Tyees.

Coached by Russ Ball, former Pacific Coast League player, Dockers were given strong checking games by George Pakos and Rick Saby on Hornet stars Bob Bolitho and Dan Green.

Stu Taylor paced Tyees with three goals while double efforts were turned in by Rob Williams and Ian Gibson. Bob Bjornason counted the other tally.

Oak Bay clouted visiting Belmont 8-1 to move into a fourth-place tie with idle Claremont.

NIXON SEEKS BOOST IN ANTI-TRUST FINES

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Nixon administration will ask Congress to raise the maximum fine which can be levied on corporations convicted of criminal violations of antitrust laws.

The purpose of the proposal is to make it more expensive for corporate antitrust offenders convicted of illegal activity.

Present law, enacted in 1955, sets the maximum amount an individual or corporation can be fined for each criminal antitrust count at $50,000.

●

Under the administration's proposal, already drafted but not yet sent to Congress, this upper limit would be inflated to $500,000 for corporations. The individual limit would remain at $50,000.

Richard McLaren, the justice department's top antitrust official, disclosed the plan Wednesday in an off-the-cuff comment delivered while testifying on another proposal before a Senate judiciary subcommittee.

"We think this (the new $500,000 limit) will be more of a deterrent," McLaren explained.

Several of McLaren's predecessors in the justice department post have remarked on the need for increasing corporate antitrust fines, but no enabling legislation was drafted.

The antitrust official commented favorably on a European Economic Community law which permits antitrust fines as high as 10 per cent of a company's annual gross sales.

Alaska Oil, Manhattan May Cool Middle East

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

New ingredients have been added to the murky mixture of oil and global politics.

The picture of world oil, the fuel that moves economies, always has been bafflingly complicated. Insatiable global demand requires a constant flow of vast seas of it. Any break or threat of break in the flow causes crisis.

Now the picture becomes even more complex because of recent events: a burgeoning Alaska oil boom, the Northwest Passage odyssey, political upheaval in Libya, hostilities in the Middle East, nervousness in the Arabian Peninsula. All these developments raise critically important questions.

Alaska's rivers of black gold should begin flowing from the frozen tundra of the North Slope by 1973. What will be the impact? What is the meaning of the tanker Manhattan's smash through formidable ice to demonstrate that a commercial route to Alaska's oil via the Northwest Passage may be possible?

Where will Alaska's oil go? What will be the effect on recurrent Arab Middle East crises? Will the power of Arab oil to threaten Europe's economies be lessened? Will there be less American dependence on Middle East oil? Will oil lose some of its power as an instrument of Arab politics?

NEED BIG SUPPLY

The importance of oil to any advanced economy can be imagined from the extent of U.S. consumption. In simple terms, to supply the United States today requires about three gallons daily for each man, woman and child in the country. Thus, the status of U.S. reserves is an important national security question.

Alaska's discovery is one of the biggest ever made. Estimates of reserves in the area run as high as 100,000,000,000 barrels, compared with U.S. reserves elsewhere of 40,000,000,000.

Because of oil, recurrent Arab explosions have caused crisis and near-panic elsewhere from time to time. That was so in the Suez crisis of 1956 and again in June, 1967, during the six-day war in which Israel defeated her Arab neighbors.

New discoveries have eased the situation. Europe gets 52 per cent of its oil from North Africa and Nigeria, most of the rest from the Persian Gulf area. But Libya, now an important producer, recently underwent a coup whose leaders promised to point that North African nation toward "Arab socialism."

There is skittishness, too, about the Arabian Peninsula. King Faisal of Saudi Arabia, a major producer, is having trouble with Pan-Arab elements which follow the lead of Egypt's Gamal Abdel Nasser. Should Faisal be toppled, it might not be long before Kuwait, the neighboring oil sheikhdom, went the same way.

In any case, if Arab-Israeli hostilities develop into yet another full-scale war, Arab rulers will be under severe pressure to shut off all supplies of oil to the West.

Thus, oil experts say, Alaska's reserves represent a form of insurance. The United States will be in a safer position to supply Europe on an emergency basis, because the reserves are there—even though Alaskan oil will not be flowing for a few years.

If the Northwest Passage proves profitably usable, this would have great impact. It would bring Europe close to the Alaska source.

Skeptics remain unconvinced, but if the Manhattan's breakthrough should ultimately demonstrate a feasible, safe and short route to the east coast and European markets, the impact a half-dozen years hence—with mammoth new ice-breaking tankers available by then—would be heavy. Europe, then, no longer would be at the mercy of wars and political crises in the Middle East.

CHEAP OIL PROBLEM

Some experts say the extent to which U.S. dependence on foreign oil will be diminished depends upon the status of the quotas which now restricts imports. The argument is that if controls are maintained, Alaskan oil will go primarily to foreign markets. The reason for this, they say, is that lifting of the quotas will permit a heavy flood of foreign oil from the Middle East, Venezuela and elsewhere. Middle East oil in particular is vastly cheaper to produce than U.S. oil and far cheaper to ship, since U.S. oil, by law, must be carried in U.S.-flag ships.

The controversy over import quotas has been going on 30 years, and came to a head during the Eisenhower administration with a decision that national security would be endangered by a liberal policy on imports.

The argument on the other side is that limiting imports keeps cheap foreign oil off the U.S. market and thus costs U.S. consumers heavily, and also that it depletes American reserves.

A presidential committee is reviewing the whole question of quotas, but the argument that the U.S. industry must be kept prosperous because of national security make it doubtful that there will be a drastic break with present practice.

Currently, about 21 per cent of U.S. consumption is foreign oil. Experts say that could be lessened to a point where it would be negligible and pose no threat in time of crisis. Thus, oil producers in the Arab Middle East, for example, would be deprived of considerable leverage.

Pot Cost $750

SMITHERS (CP) — William Daniel Gale, 22, of Prince George Wednesday was fined $750 and sentenced to one day in jail for possession of marijuana. Gale and Emil Nikol of Moricetown, B.C., were arrested in an RCMP check June 21. Nikol was also convicted of possession and will be sentenced Oct. 9.

YALE TO FIGHT STUDENT POWER

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (WP) — In a major dissent against a nationwide trend, Yale president Kingman Brewster Jr. took sharp issue Wednesday night with the argument that students ought to have a formal share in governing universities.

In a speech before the Yale Political Union, Brewster declared that giving students seats on boards and committees "is not the clue to university improvement" and "indeed . . . if carried too far could lead to disaster."

"The political symbolism of participatory democracy is an illusion," he said, "when applied to many of the academic and financial decisions which direct an academic institution."

In its place he offered Yale's students a new nostrum, "administrative accountability," and proposed what he called "radical reform to make real the promise" of that term.

Tanzania Requests UN Nigerian Force

UNITED NATIONS (CP — Tanzania made a strong plea in the General Assembly Wednesday for some form of UN intervention to bring the Nigerian civil war to an end.

Stephen Mhando, Tanzanian foreign minister, said opinion of the majority of African governments to the contrary, the Nigerian-Biafran war is not purely an African problem.

"The United Nations has no excuse for standing idly by," he said. "There is no excuse for ignoring the plight of millions of Biafrans, who for two years have been defending themselves courageously in the face of almost certain destruction."

It was the first plea for UN intervention made in the assembly this year. The war has been mentioned in many policy speeches but most foreign ministers have expressed willingness to accept the feeling of the Organization of African Unity that the war is an African problem that should be settled by Africans.

Tanzania is one of the five countries that recognize Biafra. Zambia, another one' said Tuesday that the two sides should meet at a round table to settle the war.

Mhando said that a war that is being fought on African soil with arms that are supplied by "three" super powers cannot be regarded as a purely African problem. He mentioned that Britain and the Soviet Union are supplying the federal Nigerian forces and openly questioned whether their motives are to achieve a unified Nigeria.

He did not mention the third power, but presumably meant France which in the past have been widely reported to be supplying arms to the Biafrans.

Labor Leads Mixed-Race Election

CAPE TOWN (Reuters) — The defiantly anti-segregation Labor party headed for almost certain victory today in South Africa's first nationwide mixed race election.

With 17 results announced, it had won 13 seats in the new colored persons Representative Council, created by government architects of segregation to be the new political outlet for those officially classified as mixed-race.

But the party still was not certain to gain total control of the council, whose establishment marks the final political separation of the mixed race population from the country's whites.

The council will have 60 members but 20 of them will be nominated by the government later.

Of the 40 elected seats, the Labor party needs only 20 to win the election but 31 to gain over-all power.

Reporter Defects

BELGRADE (AP) — Karl Jezdinsky, Czechoslovak radio correspondent in Yugoslavia, defected to West Germany Wednesday, protesting what he called censorship and purges of journalists in Czechoslovakia. Jezdinsky, 30, said his report from Yugoslavia had been subject to "brutal censorship, which was again introduced in my country in April this year."

Peat Can Wreck Roads

CAMPBELL RIVER — Roads and underground pipes should be built to avoid peat areas where possible, the annual convention of the Public Works Association was told today.

A 14-page paper by John Cowlin, assistant engineer in Saanich, and H. W. Nasmith, of R.C. Thurber and Associates, soils engineers, reviewed experiences in the municipality.

They said the most positive solution is to locate roads to avoid peat, which has little strength and very high moisture content.

"In many cases this will prove the most economical solution even if the length of the road is increased," they said.

A second alternative, for high-quality roads, is to remove the peat and replace it with granular fill. This reduces settlement of the road to a minimum.

"The last choice is to build the road directly on the peat using one of a number of techniques to minimize settlement but at the same time accepting the fact that settlement will occur," they said.

Discussing installation of underground pipes, for drainage, sewage and so on, Cowlin and Nasmith said it is advisable where practical to reroute the pipe to avoid the peat.

Where this was not possible, the pipe may be floated in the peat if grades are not critical provided precautions were taken. If grades were critical, the pipe should be rigidly supported.

Tighter Drug Checks At Border

SEATTLE (AP) — The U.S. customs service is making "a more intensive search" of traffic passing between Canada and the United States, district customs director Roy Peterson said here Wednesday.

Peterson said the closer scrutiny "has nothing to do with Operation Intercept," a search for narcotics and dangerous drugs at the U.S. border with Mexico.

"We will check more cars when traffic is light," Peterson said, "and that's exactly what's happening now." He said the traffic volume was so great during the summer that a close check could not be maintained.

The result of the recent intensification, he said, was confiscation of three ounces of marijuana Wednesday at Blaine, the main port between Vancouver and Seattle.

At Sumas, Peterson said, the service picked up a shipment of "several hundred pounds" of salmon taken illegally from the Fraser River in British Columbia.

The service also intercepted nine packages containing marijuana during the past two weeks, he said.

"We also get a little more booze," Peterson said; "that's the main ingredient between Canada and the United States."

He said vehicular traffic was moving freely without delays.

Earlier, Fred McMillan, port customs director at Blaine, said Operation Intercept, which caused a massive traffic jam at Tijuana, Mex., last weekend, went into force at Blaine Sunday.

"I'm not sure if the idea behind the thing is to catch any particular operator," Mr. McMillan said.

Recreation Issue Gets Referendum

Municipal councils within the district may choose to join the referendum or accept the bylaw without a vote.

The referendum will ask ratepayers if they favor the regional board taking over recreation by setting up a regional commission to provide organization, staff and funds to member municipal recreation programs.

Although not stated in the referendum, it is understood the per capita cost would be $3. The necessary $148,000 per year would be raised by a one-mill increase in school tax assessment.

Nanaimo members of the regional board, Gertrude Hall and Ken Medland, said their council would probably accept the bylaw without a referendum.

Barn Blaze Kills 17 Show Horses

Maynard Casler, owner of the stable, estimated the value of the horses at more than $200,000. He said he could not put a figure on the cost of the barn and its contents.

Opposition Priming Guns For 'Long, Bitter' Session

OTTAWA (CP) — Looking tanned and fit following a summer of stumping his constituency, George Hees let it be known Wednesday that he is priming his guns for a showdown parliamentary battle.

"The approaching session will be the most bitterly contested session that Parliament has seen in many years," he predicted.

"The government has created the atmosphere which makes it impossible to be otherwise."

Despite Prime Minister Trudeau's optimistic outlook that the animosity marking the final few days of the pre-recess session will be forgotten when the House reassembles Wednesday, Oct. 22, Mr. Hees said he feels the opposition will be coming back in a fighting mood.

"It has to be this way," he said. "Do you think we are going to let the government emasculate the role of Parliament?"

OUTLINES PROBLEM

The root of the problem lies in the debate-limiting measures the government "pushed through" earlier this year, said Mr. Hees, Conservative MP for the Ontario riding of Prince Edward-Hastings.

"Speeches made by the Prime Minister and members of his cabinet left no doubt that, in the minds of the present government, Parliament is no more than a nuisance which will be tolerated only because the laws of Canada require that legislation must pass through it before it becomes law.

"The prime minister had the temerity to change the role of Parliament.

"Okay, we've gone far enough. No, sir, we're not going to see this country put in the hands of a virtual dictatorship."

What is the opposition planning to do?

"You don't disclosure your game plan before the game starts," said the front-bench Conservative. "But there are many ways in which it can be done."

YEAR IS UP

Mr. Hees said there is another reason why the atmosphere of the forthcoming session will toughen. "When there's a new leader, he usually is given a year or so to show what he can do.

"Mr. Trudeau's time is up."

"The trouble with this government is that they want to operate Parliament like a computer. They want to decide what's best for Canada, process the legislation through Parliament, and have it come out on a prescribed schedule.

"We're going to do our job."

The 59-year-old former trade minister was asked whether there was any residual resentment from Mr. Trudeau's July remark that Opposition MPs were "nobodies" when they were 50 feet away from Parliament Hill.

"Not at all. Not at all. We couldn't care less. Why, we've been insulted by experts."

Aid to Needy Nations Tops Commonwealth Talks

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (CP)—Finance Minister Edgar Benson of Canada and 27 other Commonwealth finance ministers begin a two-day conference here today, reviewing world trade problems and aid to needy nations.

Benson said on arrival Wednesday night he is mainly interested in Britain's report to the conference on the inprovement of its sterling position.

He said Canada had no new initiatives to take at the meeting, but might have to continue its accustomed role as a moderator between the newer, developing nations of the Commonwealth and its older members.

Benson was immediately briefed by Canadian officials on progress at meetings with the Commonwealth secretariat here earlier this week, in preparation for the ministers' conference.

Three days of argument by foreign aid officials of the Commonwealth governments, prior to the ministers' meeting, was expected to result in a recommendation that a new central fund be created for intra-Commonwealth aid.

FAVOR BILATERAL AID

Some of the donor countries, particularly Australia, were understood to prefer keeping their Commonwealth aid programs on a strictly bilateral basis—between the donor and receiver. Australia's Commonwealth aid goes mostly to Papua and New Guinea.

Canada would prefer a multilateral approach. The Canadian International Development Agency, formerly the external aid office, has funds earmarked for this approach. Canada's aid goes largely to South Asia and the Caribbean, but is widely diversified.

Among Commonwealth officials there is regret that some of the excitement that accompanied international assistance in is early post-war years has disappeared.

There is, therefore, some anticipation for next week's World Bank annual meeting in Washington when Lester B. Pearson, former Canadian prime minister, is to present a report on his world-wide study of foreign aid.
